I guess if the raving drunks N9PGE or K9BSD had any dependants we would see papers on them too. They stay too drunk to keep a wife though.

N9PGE and K9BSD are the gutless wonders behind this shit. They are either harassing others or licking each others balls. They are pathetic, single, alcoholic faggots.

That should read part 95 (I was tired when I wrote this and now I am flat exhausted correcting it).

well, for ham gear, the minimum drive is still 50 watts RMS. Since most out of the box ham rigs for 10 can do that, I don't see it as a problem.

Are you a fan of surgically transforming uneducated black boys in Detroit to ugly white females in Beverly Hills (like Michael "PedoWigger" Jackson did)? What do you enjoy more - PedoWigger sodomizing 10 year old boys, or dangling 6 month olds from 50' high balconies?

Whatcha say there, Eric? Hope things are well for ya' in the land of the nuts and nutsier (g) they call Phoenix...seriously,,,,yup,,that was my interpretation of it, too. No matter though, the amps, whether certified or not will end up as they always do,,,,,,used on 11 meter and the freeband in addition to the hammie bands, regardless of what the FCC does or doesn't do.
Haven't had much luck on triple five lately,,,you been sandbaggin there lately? Most of my action has come from ssb recently. Send me an email and let me know next time you're working some dx near Dixie. Take it light and try to fly under the radar of the infamous bad boys of Radio Phoenix on triple five. Later days.

You've learned well, grasshoppah! The disclaimer of "as far as I know" is much better than your past posts claiming he NEVER posted here. Such goes the way of Gillinad, who claimed on several occasions that N7VCF NEVER posts here. The ONLY manner in which such a statement can be even remotely considered to be true, is if he indeed, is the one he claims not to be.

Non sequitur. Many adolescents refer to their permits as "licenses"...and even if one were to give you the benefit of doubt, a drivers license is attainable in Pa. at 16..no? In fact, correct me if I'm mistaken,,many farmers children in rural areas of Pa. are permitted to be licensed at 15, a "blue-law" that goes way back which was constructed to allow the children to operate farm equipment (but not limited to) on roads,

>B: talked about the Prom and colleges which Again,,you demonstrate your weak "reasoning". There are junior proms, underclassmen are often dating upperclassmen who, (gasp!) surprise,,,,,,,take them to the proms. Also, many students as juniors are not only already half way through attaining their scholarships (somehting you obviously know nothing about) to college, but by your flawed and screwed up "clues"....one must be a senior to speak of college. What a flake.

Correct,,but absence of the evidence in the court records of the city of Philthydelphia most certain is "evidence" of "absence" of YOUR claim. As you "don't want" us to know the facts regarding your search of companies assigned to the freeband experiencing cb interference (as you said you would produce)and your (ahen) company you professed to work for that is permitted to transmit on the freeband. Right.

>He doesn't want me to go there because he >doesn't want to live up to the other end of the

Just like you don't want to live up to YOUR unsolicited and professed others that of which you refuse to produce yourself, chubby.

And your greatest fear is tbeing wrong over and over and over again. You jsut can't stand yourself these days and by ignoring your exact own behavior and condoning another for partaking in the rules you introduced and play by, one sees the magnificent failure you have always been among these groups.

>If that group really exists you won't hear about

And since those businesses who experience interference from cbers don;t exist, and your company that you alleged to work for that is permitted to "transmit on the freeband" doesn't exist, we won;t hear about them from you, because you deal only in fantasy and lies,,,lies and fantasies that have become the bane of your existence.
But,,as always, I give the benfit of doubt once more, to rats like you. You go on and answer for the claims you made, and I'll post the URL for the group of which you beg of me After all,. you made the claims first, and were questioned first, and proper communication dictates the first questions receive first answers. Nothing to spin. To wit: N7VCF yammered: "You beg for me to prove my military service by conversing with vets".

"Conversing with vets" refers to my invitation to you,,er HIM, to come to the group of my choosing. My many reiterations of failing to produce your, er HIS knowledge of military training and lingo has nothing to do with the group, of which I invited him, a single time.
Your inability to follow a thread and remain on topic, due your mild retardations and communication deficit, coupled with your homosexual fanaticism of speaking of asses when speaking with men, is your problem, cowardly one.

Well, YEAH. That's why you went for the Viagra. You needed a tripod to free up your hands.

4232. CB radio Installation

Hello -
Newbie question for the group: I am trying to install a CB radio in my vehicle. The radio is a Cobra 18 WXST II. The power cord supplied with the unit has 3 permanent wires - the normal black wire [for the ground], the red wire [to power the unit] and an orange wire for ??? I am stumped - the owners manual makes no mention of this 3rd wire in the installation instructions, the radio manufacturer has no info on their FAQ's on their website. Any idea's/help from this group would be greatly appreciated. Thanks in advance.

Uncle Klattu.

Oh so if you put your cock in a girls ass its OKAY, and if she sucks your cock its okay
and if You eat her pussy its okay and if she sticks a few fingers up your ass its okay

But it ain okay for gay ppl to do the same thing?

Sleeping. I've been working on a couple of computer systems over the last several days, which has cut deeply into my normal sleep cycle.

That, and, of course, the video taping.

I'm exhausted.

With the damned dog (a cute little Shitzu pain-in-the-ass) wanting to snuggle in the most inapropriately uncomfortable place, two of the loudest god-damned Cockatiels you've ever heard (that also, sigh, happen to be in heat - much to my sons delight-----he's ~already~ spending the potential profits should they have a viable clutch), a child of 12 constantly bugging me for the fun of it, and a wife of 15 years that thinks that asking me questions while I'm sleeping is an Olympic sport - I'll be lucky to survive the evening.

Sigh... <snarf>

May any of the Gods help me...

Jack

Wish me luck.

Ok, let's play your spin: Does the phrase "Where's this group, Twisty?" somehow imply or suggest in any way that I think it belongs to you? If I have ever used any phrase such as, or similar to, "...your group", are to too stupid to understand that I was not referring to it as your possession? Ok, if you really want to play that game, then all these issues came long before you started begging me for answers to your problems. You made several claims about me for which I have repeatedly asked you for proof. Once again, where is your proof to support your claims that:

- I posted pornography;
- I am part of a conspiracy against you;
- I accused you of child molestation;
- I accused you of homosexuality;
- I am female;
- I forged posts in your 'name';
- I am Doug Adair;
- I am Leland Scott;
- I am Glenn Sparks;
- I "insinuated" that I was Glenn Sparks;
- I made up a news story about a CBer sued by his neighbor;
- I live in Issaquah;
- I said I lived in Issaquah;
- I am Ben Lee;
- I said Issaquah was "local" to Spokane;
- I am N7VCF;
- I claimed to be N7VCF;
- I am a child molester;
- I am Aaron Voobner;
- I don't have a base antenna;
- I own a Japanese car.

You said it yourself, Twist: "First asked questions deserve first answers, that is proper decorum and how edffective communication works...". Get busy.

And don't forget to polish your badge:

Nothing to spin. To wit: N7VCF yammered:
"You beg for me to prove my military service
by conversing with vets".
"Conversing with vets" refers to my invitation to you,,er HIM, to come to the group of my choosing. My many reiterations of failing to produce your, er HIS knowledge of military training and lingo has nothing to do with the group, of which I invited him, a single time. Your inability to follow a thread and remain on topic, due your mild retardations and communication deficit, coupled with your homosexual fanaticism of speaking of asses when speaking with men, is your problem, cowardly one.

>Now I'm "George"? HAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!!!

No one called you Geogre, chubby. You two are so much alike, it's a natural reaction.
Where are those results, Gillinad?

>Here's your badge, Twist. Polish it thoroughly.

HAHAHAHHAHAHHAHA...now THAT's funny,attempting to give something I took from you long ago.....LOL..only in your delusions, Now,,where are those results, in addition to this company you claimed you work for that is "legally permitted to transmit on the freeband"?
Don't keep yourself waiting for that URL too long, chubby. You've been in spasms for over a week with your unorthodox begging.

I mentioned it one time, which hardly constitutes begging, and you seized upon it,,,a fish flopping around out of water. The begging came from you, daily, in the form of many subject headers and redundant whines..

>Seems to me that it was -YOU- that was >begging for me to come to a military group of >your choosing so that you could "watch your >yellow tail get forced between your legs".

>on a group that you can't produce,

I invited you a single time. That you interpret such as "begging" is more of your maladies which ail you.

Not my group to produce, chubby.

>But it -IS-!

But it isn's my group, and no matter how many times you wish it be, and say ti over and over, it simply won;t make it so. I schooled you in your deteriorating delusional ways severl ears ago and you should have learned from those experiences.

>Ok, let's play your spin: Does the phrase >you? If I have ever used any phrase such as,

>or similar to, "...your group", are to too stupid

I did. That doesn't negate you claiming it was MY group, and reaffirming your bloated ignorance.

>Have you forgotten so soon what you wrote:

>"I''ll go to email, if you come to the armed >forces group of my choosing."

Exactly.
Have you forgotten what you wrote:
"I will contact these businesses experiencing interference on the freeband from cbers and post the results here." What's good for the goose, chubby.

>HAHAHAHAHA!!!! That's right, Twist, go >swimming in vintage google-juice looking for >an excuse to back out of your obligation!

But,,,YOU backed out of YOUR unsolicited claims and obligations long before the favor was returned, chubby. You get angry when your rules are forced back in your face, chubby.

>It's no wonder your mommy

(snip)
(Sigh)

Poor Frankie,,can't handle it when his game is returned. LOL..Hey Gilinad,,when you can communicate effectively without off topic insult, come on back..and as you so adeptly illustrated with your lack of effective communication knowledge, when one makes a claim and says they will do, they must be held to it prior to that person being permitted to demand or ask anything of another. I said I would post the URL to the good Sergeant's group upon your providing for your claims that you danced around for over a year and a half. Deal with it, or continue to get angry and blame me for your incompetence and inability to do so,,it really doesn't matter except for your puppet-on-a-string factor, in other words,,,you are to be toyed with at my whim.

>I can't go there if I don't know where to go. I >don't know where to go because you refuse to >provide that information. You refuse to provide >that information because.....why?

I
ask you the same thing regarding your claims. You are no body special and need held to your own rules, no matter how unethical and shoddy, ad I'm just the person to make you do such.

>The rule is -YOUR'S- Twist: "I'll go to email, if >you come to the armed forces group of my >choosing."

You made a claim I asked you to produce long ago. That you refused to provide for the claim disqualifies anyone else doing so for you. Again, you first. Merely provide for your lies,,,er,,claims, and again, I will gladly post the URL and you can do what you will with it.

>You said that I should go there so "we can all >watch your yellow tail get forced between your

As you said (see above).

You aren't afraid of that, are you Frankie?"

>Nope, I'm not afraid at all, and that's why

>-YOU- are afraid to disclose your chosen

Again,,,answer the claims you said you would, and I will post the group's URL for ALL to enjoy.
>Nope.

End of story, then.

> I met your conditions.

No, you didn;t. My "conditions" were stated when you made the claim, which were "provide for it, Frank, don't talk smack, merely show us." You failed to provide, et here you are asking another to provide for something else.

>Don't welch by adding more conditions

>because you can't meet your end of the deal.

You "welched" long ago on YOUR claim, Gilliland.

>You

>claim to have screwed up entering my email

>address, blame your dysfunction on ME,

No,,I said that MAY have been the reason. Coming from you, nothing is to be believed.

>On the contrary, Twist, your credibility is the >issue here.

Not at all. Merely because you claim such, doesn't make it so. It never did. In fact, you are the one that has always had credibility problems, chubby.

Well then, there you go...I must have entered everything as requested, correctly. What problem do you have supplying the moderator with the information he is required to have prior to you being admitted? Oh,,we all know the answer to that..you can't supply proof for anything, as has been the case for your entire usenet life and reason you are the admitted (forced) liar of rec.radio.cb.

>Do you hand out your SSN to strangers?

Why lie about it , Frank? Ah, never mind, you don't even know you lie. What does the ssn have to do with anything? I know damn well you weren't asked for it as that is not a condition of the group, but you go ahead and continue to make stuff up, chubby.

>Well, maybe you do, since it's probably just as >fake as everything else about you.

Non-sequitur. Say relevat, stay focused, and stop lying.

Once again, take your fat foot out of your trenchmouth and answer the questions that have been posed to you for years concerning your unsolicited claims,

>We've been down that road dozens of times,

>Twist,

No Frank,,we haven't..."I" have,,and each time I ask, you cry like someone took their ball and went home. You have yet to provide a single example for either of the claims you made, unsolicited, I may add. And you always clam up when faced with all the questions -you- have ignored over the years.

>Now stick to the topic at hand -- where's that

,and I will happily post the URL for not only you, but for anyone else that wishes to join. First asked questions deserve first answers, that is proper decorum and how edffective communication works, yet you still are unabel to be taught such simple concepts. Go on now!

Exactly, chubby,,,,only, your time line is way out of whack, as is your misattributions to myself. Nevertheless, do you not notice all your beefs have one thing in common? They all are about YOU, poor Gillilnad. All your moans and whines begin with "I" , illuistrating how great a deal and emphasis you place on my personal thoughts concerning yourself. You need, as you have always been told, to focus on the reality of the room topic, chubby, which your unsolicited claims of which I asked you to produce, are directly related. My personal beliefs of you can be attributed to just that,,,,MY beliefs, but YOUR claims, are intentional lies concerning nothing but bullshit related to cb.

I believe the red wire provides power to the radio for receive/transmit, the orange provides power to the memory so the channel doesn't reset when the car is turned off. Normally, you'd hook the radio power lead to a switchable power tap (acc circuit) and the memory lead will be connected to a continous (non-switched, or "batt") power tap...

Only you would know that, Twisty. In fact, you assumed the email was a rejection even after I made a statement contrary to that effect. There are only two reasons you would know that, Twist: 1) You forged the email, or 2) the group is real but you intentionally screwed up the form to avoid putting your name in as the person referring me. I suspect the latter since you offered such an error as your pre-emptive excuse for my rejection, the letter stated I was rejected because nobody invited me, and because you are too paranoid to use your real name.

-YOU- screwed up, Twist -- don't blame it on me.

And where's that group, Twist?

You obviously know little of literary writing and of the use of

When they are discussing their class schedules and things like tuition, dorm accommodations and the like, one can be fairly confident that they are ready to "take the plunge" in short order. But I guess since you never went through it, you don't understand.

But true nonetheless. You once again try to make one of your twisted knock 'em down. I should call you Brunswick. You'd make an excellent pin setter. It doesn't take much thought, and that's a plus for you.

I did mention the exact town at one point. Now it's up to you to google yourself through memory lane to find it. Or you could check my website for some additional clues. But I shouldn't have to tell you that, since you know so much about searching for information. I also find it somewhat ironic, this so-called "expertise" at internet

You know that, I know that, and most normally intelligent people know that. But there are certain social misfits who either cannot, or will not accept that.

This all started when someone made a claim that local law enforcement did not have a right to intervened on matters of RFI from CB radios.
While in most cases, locals can't deal directly with issues which relate to Part 95, radio law, and technical issues, they CAN intervene using such charges as "disturbing the peace", when it can be demonstrated that the CBer in question was using foul, obscene language and disturbing the neighbor's "peace" when those transmissions overrode their stereo receiver.

In this particular case, the person charged was of modest means and could not afford competent legal representation. Since the fine amounted to something like $300, he just paid it, and went about his business. They didn't take his radios, or forbid him to operate, and he did return to the airwaves. But he was on much better behavior after that.

Now, but not 20 years ago.

You still seem to have this problem with the time line. When I was a 20-something, they would've been referred to as "girls" or "chicks".
Now that I'm relating a story which happened 20 years ago, I am accurately relating what they were, and that was teenagers. They're all kids to me now.

Gee, someone else gets it. Yet we are the one's with "communications

It's going good Shark. Finally got a little dry weather and was able to do some lawn install work yesterday...14 hrs worth..A little sore today.

How goes it with you?

Antibiotics have kicked in, so feeling good Going for an EKG on Friday of next week. Weather here's in the upper 80's, bummer is that I still have an inner ear infection, so I can't ride the bike due to that.

Do you hand out your SSN to strangers?
Why lie about it , Frank? Ah, never mind, you don't even know you lie.
What does the ssn have to do with anything? I know damn well you weren't asked for it as that is not a condition of the group, but you go ahead and continue to make stuff up, chubby.

>Only you would know that, Twisty.

Wrong, chubby, All who belong to the group know that. It's simply not a prerequisite to the group, but that didn't stop you from entering it and attempting to lie.
Case closed.

>In fact, you assumed the email was a rejection

No, I never assumed it was a rejection, chubby.
The only manner it could possibly be a rejection is if you refused to confirm your military status.

>There are only two reasons you would know >that, Twist: 1) You forged the email,

One can't forge from webtv, chubby. Since you appear incapable of taking the abuse department at webtv's word for such, one can only pity cush repeated ignorance.

>or 2) the group is real but you intentionally >screwed up the form to avoid putting your >name in as the person referring me.

If that occurred, it was an honest mistake, but somehow, I don't think that occurred. What I think occurred, was you received the email as all who are referred do, asking you to confirm your status. Faced with yet more public humiliation and no way out, you did what you always do,,,,run, run, run, as fast as your chubby legs can take you, and obfuscate with yet another subject, this time, in the form of your obsession on finding information somewhere on the PERSON that sent you the email, instead of focusing on the topic, something your mild retardations and massive communication deficits will not permit. When your ignorance did not permit you to find anything on an email name (which has nothing to do with anything except in your feeble mind), you began to cluck and squawk, and such became your subject and focal point.

LOL,,here you go again, crying about identities in a cb group. You sure have it bad, chubby.

Nothing to blame, chubby. Watching you roll off-topic every time you fail to produce for your own claims needs no blame, hell, everyone sees you for what you are...the ng liar.

Exactly, chubby,,,,only, your time line is way out of whack, as is your misattributions to myself. Nevertheless, do you not notice all your beefs have one thing in common? They all are about YOU, poor Gillilnad. All your moans and whines begin with "I" , illuistrating....

>whine, moan, bitch, sob, boo-fucking-hoo.

(Snip)

Your temper is escalating and your bp rising. Whne you begin tossing out the unecessary insults and vernacular consisting of obscenities when faced with that of which is too painful for you to handle and deal (realized and neatly illustrated by your need for snipping text), you lose.
When you can manage to provide for your own claims in the order you presented such unsolicited lies,,,er,,,claims, I will happily post the URL, and not a moment sooner.
Back on your knees for the weekend begging, chubby.

But absence of court records most certainly is evidence that it didn't needs.

No record exists of your claim.

>No, YOU are unable to find any record. That

There is NO record of it, Davie-son. You keep referring to a town you claimed you mentioned, but it was I who mentioned the suburban towns in the thread, not yourself, as you have lied and claimed. You distanced yourself from the thread and dropped it like a bad habit when I begna to question the exact precincts such as Kensington, Germantown, etc,,who,,
by the way, list ALL court convictions unedr the clerk's county office or 1st judicial district.
ALL are recorded via the Clerk of the Court's records in Philadelphia County, either the clerk of the court AND/OR the 1st judicial district, which is readily accessible to all,,well, to MOST, as you are now painfully aware YOU weren't educated on such matters. FWIW, your desperate claim of "suburban Philly" encompasses and extends only to Willow Grove to the north, King of Prussia to the west, Upland to the south, and of course, the Delaware river to the east. All are under the same Commonwealth laws as pertaining to the court system, as are ALL other "suburbans" of Philly, If the town is NOT under the jurisdiction of Philadelphia County Court records, it is NOT "suburban' Philthy. One more education lesson for you to get hung upon over the weekend.......ALL records regarding convictions, even from the smallest
"suburban" of Philthy, is recorded at the clerk's office on microfilm, which was transferred from paper documents in 1992. The same holds for Montgomery County (you know this well, as the coounty seat is in Norristown), Delaware, Cheser, and Bucks Counties. Now, roll over and play Dead or go fetch a stick or something. Your lies are believed by none but those you align yourself with, such as in this post,,,,,

(Dave i know it happened in another instance, a Cber was charged for disorderly person and found guilty. Does this mean that it is National headlines No, does it mean the guy couldn't afford an attorney and perhaps had the case dropped, yes does it mean there was never any case No, Is every case, of every town USA that have been prosecuted been posted on internet even if they happened many years ago >>>NO!)

Such as the ignoramus above, who feels the internet is the tell-all and if it can't be found on the internet, it must not exist.

(Just because he can't prove it doesn't mean it is not so.)

No record means it doesn't exist. Read: Never happened.

Amateur Radio Newsline(tm) Report 1394 - April 30, 2004

A Very Important Note: We urge all readers of this report to also download the audio version of this report at http://www.arnewsline.org/quincy and listen to it. Please pat special attention to the words of ARRL President Jim Haynie, W5JBP, and the urgency in his voice as he discusses the latest developments in the fight to keep Broadband Over Powerline technology from encroaching into the Amateur Service bands. There is no way to express in print the very grave nature of this situation. Only by listening for yourself can you truly understand the extreme gravity of the circumstances that our service faces if BPL is introduced nationwide.

The ARNewsline Production Team

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1394 with a release date of Friday, April 30th, 2004 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.

The ARRL takes on the White House over BPL, a power provider says BPL interference to mobile operations has to be tolerated and a ham radio name change. Its called the Dayton Hamvention once again. Find out the details on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1394 coming your way right now.

THE BPL FIGHT: PRES BUSH VS. PRES HAYNIE AND THE ARRL

The ARRL and its president has expressed what they call deep concerns about a speach by United States President George Bush. One where where the leader of the free world says that standards need to be changed to encourage the delivery of Internet access using Broadband Over Poweline technology. Amateur Radio Newsline's Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, is here with more:

In the boldest and most dramatic move yet in the BPL debate, the ARRL's president Jim Haynie W5JBP, directly appealed to President Bush to abandon his support for BPL technology.

Haynie says Bush's speech last week during the American Association of Community Colleges convention in Minneapolis prompted him to action. In that speech, President Bush stated directly:

"...power lines can be used for broadband technology. So the technical standards need to be changed to encourage that."

"I faxed a letter to the White House cause I wanted to make sure they got it and we followed it up again with the regular U.S. Mail," Haynie says. "And, it'll be curious to see what kind of reaction that we get. I think, like I said, it's ill-advised.

"It's so much hype that the broadband industry has been putting out and I'm sorry to say it looks like the president has been suckered into it a little bit."

Haynie says amateur radio has reached a defining moment in its history and he is issuing a call to arms.

"This is the time that amateur radio is going to have to pull together and speak with one big voice," Haynie says. "And, on our website, we put the contact information and I want everybody to go there and look at it (www.arrl.org) and you can write the president, you can write your congressman, you can write your senators you can call 'em.

"Anything like that is helpful because amateur radio has been around for a lot of years and I'd hate to see it end based on a technology like this that any engineer worth their salt would be able to say, 'Well, this sounds fun but it's just not going to work.' "

Haynie says he wasn't blind-sided by President Bush's remarks, but has questions about his fellow Texan's true understanding of the issue.

"If you go back and read his speech he made in New Mexico, I think it was Albuquerque, he alluded to broadband then just as a general term," Haynie says. "Since that time, the actual term broadband over power line has come into his speech and I know he doesn't write his own speeches, other people do."

Haynie says its likely Bush administration advisers believe BPL is an issue that may have some mileage.

"This is an election year and anything that would seemingly stimulate the economy and create jobs is going to be a real political football and this has just got caught up in it," Haynie says.

Haynie says he is now working with the ARRL's Washington staff to arrange a personal meeting with President Bush to lay out the issue for him. And Haynie says he's hopeful that if Bush sees the damaging effect BPL has on radio spectrum - occupied not by just amateur radio - but police, fire, and government services - he may reconsider.

Haynie says he'll also go in with the findings of the National Telecommunications and Information Agency - the president's own advisory arm on radio frequency spectrum management - to make his case.

"When you get into the actual and engineering report, there's some good stuff there," Haynie says. "And I'm glad to see it. I'm also glad to see that they corroborated a lot of stuff that we said in our data.

"And, it gives us more credibility because NTIA has quoted ARRL in there a number of times in this report. But some of their measurements were even more - for lack of a better word - devastating to the industry than ours. They're talking as much as 200 meters. That's a long way!"
Haynie says BPL threatens the future of amateur radio as we know it and it's time to step up and be counted:

"I've been a ham for 32 years, 33 years or something like that and this is the worst, most difficult situation I've ever seen amateur radio in," Haynie says. "And I think whether you're interested in licensing restructuring or you're interested in somebody not identifying every 10 minutes on 75 meters or whatever the case, that all pales. It is insignificant to this particular issue.

"So we need to set all these differences aside in the amateur radio community and come together. This is the time."

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, in Philadelphia.

Since before the first test installations went into operation, the ARRL has been warning the public about the potential for massive radio disruption to vital radio communications that BPL has the potential to cause. More information is on line daily at the ARRL website at http://www.arrl.org (ARNewsline(tm))

THE BPL FIGHT: NTIA RELEASES ITS BPL IMPACT REPORT

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration has issued its long-awaited report on the interference potential of Broadband over Power Lines. Despite a generally-glowing news release, the report itself identifies significant interference risks from BPL and concludes that the methods currently used for measuring BPL noise levels are inadequate and that more study is needed on such areas as ionospheric propagation of BPL signals.

The full report may be downloaded, either in full or chapter by chapter,from the NTIA website at http://www.ntia.doc.gov/new.html (CQ)

POWER PROBLEMS: INVESTIGATION INTO BLACKOUT FAULTS ENERGY COMPANIES

Power companies may be interested in reeping huge profits by selling high speed Internet access using BPL technology, but a report says that they disregarded voluntary rules that were intended to ensure the flow of electricity. This is what opened the way for last summer's blackout in eight states and Canada, the report says.

The investigators who prepared the report say that there was a clear understanding long before the blackout last August that the Ohio region was highly vulnerable to power distribution grid instability. Ohio is where the problem began.

The report continues that had the situation been properly addressed, the cascading blackout that sped across states from Michigan to New York and into Canada probably would have been averted. In fact, investigators said that something as simple as shutting off 200 megawatts of power an hour prior to the blackout might have kept the problem from spreading.

This is the final report by investigators who looked into the cause of last summers electrical breakdown. They are urging Congress to impliment strict government standards to ward off future outages. (Published reports)

THE BPL FIGHT: NC POWER COMPANY MAKE INTERFERENCE CLAIMS

Meantime, a North Carolina power company says that the interference coming from its BPL system is not harmful to ham radio operations. As reported last week, Progress Energy claims it has solved almost all of the problems to the Amateur bands created by its test installation near the city of Raleigh. But local hams have a different view. Newsline's Gary Pearce, KN4AQ, takes an in-depth look at the claims being made by Progress Energy and what the ham radio community has to say:

The FCC has received its first reply from a BPL system operator to a complaint about BPL interference. Progress Energy, which operates three BPL trials near Raleigh, North Carolina, says that they are in full compliance with Part 15. Their letter attempts to set a mark for "harmful interference" to home stations, and makes a claim that BPL doesn't cause harmful interference to mobiles because they drive by so quickly.

When the Progress Energy trial began in January, Amperion, the equipment vendor, set the hardware up with signals on the overhead lines that covered the 10 and 12 meter ham bands, and most of the spectrum in between. The signals appear as a series of carriers, 1.1 kHz apart, covering 6 MHz of spectrum for each 2000 feet of power line.

Hams complained to the FCC, and Amperion moved the spectrum used. They attempted to operate in spectrum between the 20 and 15-meter bands, with a notch blocking BPL signals across the 17-meter band. They missed the mark a little, with BPL signals starting at 14.3 MHz, 50 kHz inside the 20-meter band. And while the notch at 17 meters did reduce the signal strength, the BPL carriers were still audible, and might be heard by home stations for a block or two, if there were any hams living in the trial area_ but there are no hams living there.

In addition, the BPL signals don't end with a "brick wall" filter at the edge of their spectrum block. They trail off slowly. And those "fringe" signals were still falling inside several ham bands, again expected to be audible to a ham within a block or two of the power line.

After giving Amperion time to correct the apparent errors, hams complained again to the FCC. The result was a meeting between Raleigh hams and a Progress Energy engineer in the trial area on April 6th to review the complaint and the spectrum used. Bill Godwin, the Progress Energy engineer, had arranged to be able to talk to an Amperion technician to make adjustments to the spectrum used in real time - but, the technician was a no-show on the telephone.

On April 13th, hams checked the spectrum used again, and still no changes had been made.

On April 20th, Len Anthony, Regulatory Affairs attorney for Progress Energy, sent e-mail to the James Burtle, Chief of the FCC's Experimental Licensing Division, claiming that after moving the BPL signals off the ham bands, their system "is not causing any harmful interference and is in full compliance with the FCC's Part 15 rules."

Referring to the April 6th observation with Bill Godwin, Anthony says, "These tests revealed a small level of interference at the fringes of certain frequencies. Since that time, further modifications have been made to address this fringe interference. It is Progress Energy's position and interpretation of the FCC's rules with regard to `harmful interference' that any interference that may still exist is not `harmful' as that term is defined by the FCC's rules. This level of interference does not seriously degrade ham radio operation or transmissions or cause repeated interruptions. Importantly" he continues, "since Progress Energy can make modifications to completely eliminate any interference with fixed ham operators, the only impact of any kind upon ham operations is upon mobile operators."

As for mobiles, Anthony continues, "Given that any interference experienced by a mobile operator only occurs within close proximity to the BPL facilities, such interference would be very short lived. Thus, Progress Energy is not causing any harmful interference and is in full compliance with the FCC's Part 15 rules."

An observation of the trial area on April 21st, the day after the e-mail was sent to the FCC, revealed that there had been no changes to the spectrum used. The overhead line was still emitting a full-strength signal on the top 50 kHz of the 20 meter band; signals were still audible in the notch at 17 meters, and the "fringe" carriers were still encroaching on the bottom 50 kHz or so of the 15 meter band.

This is the first claim by a BPL operator that weak BPL signals do not create "harmful" interference by the FCC's definition, interference that "seriously degrades, obstructs or repeatedly interrupts a radiocommunication service." Ham operators, of course, routinely tune through quiet spectrum looking for weak signals, and a series of carriers one kHz apart covering the band might be considered to seriously degrade, obstruct or repeatedly interrupt that activity.

And a mobile driving 35 miles per hour along a BPL-carrying power line can be in the interference zone for a minute or more - and much longer in stop-and-go traffic, waiting at signal lights, or stopping in a driveway or parking lot.

Frank Lynch W4FAL, an ARRL Technical Specialist for North Carolina who has been concentrating on the Progress Energy BPL trial, says that he will be filing another complaint with the FCC, responding to the Progress Energy e-mail. He also says that hams are not opposed to BPL per se, just the interference it causes. And he notes that it should be easy to clear up interference in a small trial area. It's BPL signals buzzing around every power line in town that have him worried.

Reporting for Newsline, this is Gary Pearce KN4AQ in Raleigh, North Carolina.

Once the new interference complaint is filed it will be up to the FCC to investigate it and to take whatever action it deems necessary. (ARNewsline(tm), KN4AQ)

RADIO LAW: PETITION TO PROHIBIT BUSINESS COMMUNICATIONS ON FRS FAILS

A Petition for Rulemaking to prohibit daily business communications in the Family Radio Service has been dismissed by the Commission. Amateur RadioNewsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has more:

On August 22, 2002, the Industrial Telecommunciatons Association, Inc. -- or ITA -- filed a petition for rulemaking requesting that the Commission amend Section 95.401(b) of the Commission's Rules. This, to prohibit daily business communications on the Family Radio Service frequencies.

In making its case for the prohibition the ITA said that it was concerned about the unlicensed mix of business and personal users. The ITA said that traditional businesses were using FRS units for daily business needs and thereby limiting the ability of others to engage in the personal communications that the Commission envisioned for FRS.

One of those challenging the ITA petition was the Personal Radio Steering Group. This is an advocacy group for General Mobile Radio Service users who share part of the spectrum with the Family Radio Service. According to the PRSG filing, the FCC specifically indicated in the Regulatory Flexibility Analysis for creating the Family Radio Service that small businesses may use the FRS to conduct their affairs. Also, while FRS congestion does exist in and near sports and recreational facilities, theme parks and shopping malls, little of this congestion is attributable to recurrent business or commercial communications.

Based on this and other information provided by the public, the FCC has concluded that day to day business communications is a valid use of the Family Radio Service. That this was intended in the Report and Order creating the service and that there is little merit to the Industrial Telecommunications Association rules change request.

Reporting for the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.

In other words, it is okay to continue to use FRS channels for routine business as well as personal communications needs. The full story is on-line at http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/DA-04-1035A1.doc (CGC, FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: OFFERING NON CERTIFIED CB'S FOR SALE BRINGS CITATION

The FCC has gone after yet another purveyor of non certified CB radio gear capable of operating in the ham radio bands. The agency's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, explains:

Duckworth: "The FCC's Altanta Office has issued a citation to Jim Norton, the owner of CB Sales and Service in Anniston, Alabama for the sale of non certified CB equipment. Noted in the citation were six different models of non certified exquoipent, five of which had been modified to transmit on Amateur frequencies."

The FCC alleges that an investigation by its Atlanta Office revealed that on March 11, 2004, Norton offered for sale at his retail store up to eight models of non-certified Citizens Band transceivers all bearing the Galaxy trade name. According to Commission's records, none of these devices have received an FCC equipment authorization which is required for Citizens Band transmitters marketed in the United States. CB Sales was charged with violation of Section 302(b) of the Communications Act, and Section 2.803(a)(1) of the F-C-C's Rules. (FCC, RAIN)

RESCUE RADIO: CA HAMS SUPPOERT MS WALK

Members of the Huntington Beach California Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service supported the early morning 2004 MS Walk event on Sunday April 18th. The Huntington Beach volunteer radio operators were on hand at each rest stop along the five and 10 kilometer courses, to provide communications and assist state beach rangers and event management in case an emergency occurred.

There were over 1200 walkers on the beach path taking part in the fund raisuing event. Peter Shores, AD6TN, brought his communications van that is fully equipped with communications gear and emergency supplies. It served as a mobile command post. Another volunteer patrolled the entire course on bicycle.

The communications effort continued until about noon. There were no incidents or injuries reported during the event. (KH6WZ)

HAMVENTION NEWS : DARA RETURNS TO THE DAYTON HAMVENTION NAME

When thousands of hams return to Dayton, Ohio for Hamvention 2004, they will find that the "Dayton" has returned to the Hamvention. This, with word that the Dayton Amateur Radio Association which sponsors the yearly event has again remamed the gathering the Dayton Hamvention.

According to General Chairman Gary Des Combes, N8EMO, the change is in keeping with the Hamvention's 'going back to the future' theme. It also goes along with the pledge made to return Hamvention to its roots as the biggest and friendliest hometown hamfest, found anyplace in the world.

Des Combes says that for more than half a century the event has been known to the world, and to the world of Amateur Radio as the Dayton Hamvention. He says that Hamvention's ties are to the entire Dayton metropolitan area, to its economy and to the ham radio community of the region.

The 33rd annual Dayton Hamvention opens on Friday, May 14th and runs until Sunday 16th. During those three days the event is expected to draw about 25,000 people from around the world and bring millions of dollars of sales and business to the Dayton area. (Dayton Hamvention)

HAMVENTION NEWS: THE HAM RADIO TOWN MEETING

And since we are talking the Dayton Hamvention, let me take a moment to invite you to join our producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, and an all-star group of guests as we take a trip through time to look at the "traditions" that have made Amateur Radio the great hobby and service that it is today. This, as we at Amateur Rasdio Newsline present the 6th annual Dayton Hamvention "Ham Radio Town Meeting."

This years topic is "IT'S MORE THAN RADIOS -- Keeping The Traditions of Amateur Radio Alive." Bill will be your host and moderator. Joining him will be a whose who group including our leynote speaker Bob Heil, K9EID, of Heil Sound Ltd. Other presenters include Radio School's Gordon West WB6NOA, Worldradio Magazine Editor Nancy Kott WZ8C, Producer/Director Dave Bell W6AQ, Philadelphia newsman Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, to name only a few. Also, if time permits, we will present a screening of the 1990 Icom produced motion picture titled "More Than Radios." This is the story of an "old time ham" who rather reluctantly becomes the Amateur Radio "Elmer" for a teenager thrust into his life on summer.

The festivities begin at 1 P.M. EDT on Saturday, May 15th in Hara Arena Meeting Room 3 and as usual we will have lots of door prizes. If you have the time, we promise you a most entertaining and illuminating two hours reliving the traditions of the hobby and learning that being a ham truly is a lot more than radios. HAM RADIO IN SPACE: CREW CHANGE ON THE ISS

For a time last week there were five astro-hams on board the International Space Station. This as Expedition 9 crew members Mike Fincke, KE5AIT, and Gennady Padalka, RN3DT, arrived at the space outpost on April 21st The trip was made to the Iss using a Russian built Soyuz launcher.

Making the voyage with them was European Space Agency explorer Andr, Kuipers, PI9ISS. The three joined Expedition 8 crew members Mike Foale, KB5UAC, and Sasha Kaleri, U8MIR, who along with Kuipers are on their way back to Earth as this newscast goes to air.

Kuipers may have only spent a bit more than a week on-orbit, but he wasted little time in getting on-the-air. PE1SCW in Deventer in the Netherlands reported hearing PI9ISS in QSO with PI9ESA at 7:50 hours UTC on Saturday May 24th. Bas says that Kuipers signal was very strong signal that was reading 40 db over S-9. A few minutes later Kuipers was in range of Francisco Costa, CT1EAT, in Beja, Portugal. He said that he heard PI9ISS in a scheduled ARISS QSO also at well over S-9.

During their six-month stay on the ISS, Russian Cosmonaut Padalka will serve as the ISS Commander while Fincke will be the science officer and flight engineer. Both are expected on the air before they return home in late October. (ARISS, VHF Reflector, published news reports)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: K6DUE ISS OPERATING EVENT CERTIFICATES

Certificates for those who took part in the K6DUE International Space Station Commemorative Operating Event held earlier this year have been distributed to the international delegates at the ARISS Meeting in the Netherlands on March 26th and 27th. Those picking them up were to forward the certificates to their national Q-S-L distributors who would then distribute them locally.

ARISS International Chairman Frank Bauer, KA3HDO, says that approximately 130 hams will be receiving certificates. The event was held to honor the memory of the late Roy Neal, K6DUE who founded both the SAREX and ARISS programs. Neal, who also served as the Vice President of Amateur Radio Newsline and as a frequent news anchor passed away last August due to complications following heart valve replacement surgery. THAT FINAL ITEM: THE NAB 2004 HAM RADIO RECEPTION

And finally, as most of you know, it was Heil Sound Limited hosted the National Association of Broadcasters ham radio reception on Wednesday night April 21st. It was literally a star studded event. Newsline's Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, and his tape recorder were there:

When Bob Heil, K9EID, and his wife Sarah throw a party, everyone with a ham radio license shows up. And thats exactly the way it was on Wednesday, April 21st when Heil Sound Limited hosted the annual National Association of Broadcasters Ham Radio Reception at the Hilton Hotel in Las Vegas, Nevada. There was food music and lots of prizes. Some were even personalized:

Bob Heil Audio: Hear it at www.arnewsline.org

That was Bob Heil presenting only one of over a hundred prizes given out over the three hours of the gathering. We finally were able to corner Bob Heil and we asked him how this all came about:

Somewhere between 800 to 900 radio amateurs attending the National Association of Broadcasters Convention literally had a hamfest of their own thanks to Bob and Sarah Heil. Thats up by an estimated 40% over past years. Sarah Heil says that for her husband, putting this reception together was a labor of love:

Just because you can't find it on the internet doesn't mean it didn't happen. As stated when did this occur, probably before Al gore invented the internet, and all your psycho babble about the comonwealth this and the commonweath that, many things are lost, not recorded, or not filed properly in the City of Philadelphia. We see it everyday on the news and live it, you talk about it from 1500 miles away. LOL you are acting like a distrurbing the peace violation, is akin to rape, serial murders, robbery, felony assaults they are treated like a traffic ticket. ill bet you can't find any info about them online, such as who was found guilty etc... You also act like he is making up something that could never happen, what would he benefit from saying someone was arrested or found guilty of disordly conduct? would it make Dave sound cool will it make him rich? You are arguing over something you cannot prove and look very foolish doing so it is a circular arguement that will never end, you can't prove he is wrong and he can't prove what he said either so you or he can't be right.

Despite the troll, I'll offer my thoughts.

The reality appears to be that a lot of folks want their own private frequency - a frequency with "good" coverage (at least 20 miles, preferably 100 miles or more).

Go figure. Take all the cell phones out. Stop all AM, FM, and television broadcasting. Take the amateurs away. Take away CB. Take the government away (including police, fire, ambulance,etc.). Take everything away.

I'm assuming that most folks want to keep in touch with their family - and allow friends access to "their" frequency (as well as having access to their friend's frequency). So, what we need are more than perhaps 60,000,000 frequencies allocated for the families in the US alone. Perhaps we can "bid" for the frequencies as some folks may want communications possible over hundreds of miles. Low HF (3 to perhaps 4.5 MHz) will be great at night, but not during the daytime - plus you can't use them as antennas will be totally inefficient (I assume everyone wants something the size of a pack of cigarettes or a cellphone). 7 MHz will be effective day or night, but again, that antenna . . . .

Oh, forget all that - we've got more than 60,000,000 frequencies to allocate. Figure 6 KHz or more for bandwidth (am or narrow fm - we don't want to muddy the water with 'clarifiers'). We won't even allow for the fact that the radios are not likely to be "on channel" closer than .1 ppm. We'll assume they are "exactly" on frequency so we can allocate as many channels into as small a space as possible.

Now, just how are you going to fit 60,000,000 frequencies (with a bandwidth of 6 KHz - for a total spectrum allocation of 360,000,000,000 - or 360 GHz) into anything that will be useful for communications? BTW, 300 GHz is far infrared light. As far as HF, what about wealthy folks overseas that want to bid on "their" frequency?

You may correctly point out that frequencies can be re-used; however, bear in mind that folks want more than 5 mile coverage (about all you'll get from any handheld to another handheld). You'll either need access to HF frequencies or repeaters. Better make that a nationwide system of repeaters for each individual frequency (well, it could (hopefully) handle them all at once. With many frequencies approaching light, perhaps we should all learn semiphore (or smoke signals).

The problem (to me, anyways) appears to be this inevitable push to continue giveaways to the rich. This isn't necessarily a rich vs poor; some of this becomes what is good for the country.

Notice that many car manufacturers are finding SUVs quite profitable. They are not known for their fuel economy. In WWII, rationing came about. It sounds harsh, but we continue to consume more and more oil every year. No holding back the guy who wants to fill his yacht with 600 gallons of fuel. No problem putting $45.00 of gas into that suv. Please inform me how this is helping our country? This is pouring money into the economies of countries that are known to be supporting terrorists. Tell me how these policies are "protecting" us? Why does much money for homeland security pour into mid-West states (and why so much when they don't share a boarder with a foreign country or boarder an ocean)? New York is being shortchanged, despite Long Island Sound, New York City, Buffalo, Niagra falls, and a boarder with Canada. I see a push to get the draft started. The idea of raising pay for the military was good - it would get more poor to enlist thus avoiding the unpleasantries of needing connections to avoid the draft (or, somehow, joining yet not really serving, apparently, as in the case of Bush). So, if someone could, please enlighten poor stupid me as to why some of these policies are helping our country.

Finally, back to the thread, BPL. Another "give-away", but, IMHO, a misguided attempt to aid the power companies. I doubt they will sucessfully compete with other broad-band providers. I doubt it will work, except in cities and suburbs. The BPL playout will be interesting - especially on the subject of rf interference to it.

Best regards from Rochester, NY
Jim

I just wanna know who curt said emailed him. You are saying he said what.. geo emailed me ? a guy named George? a boy named sue? I just want to understand what you belive that he said. I mean did he say the guy from comcast or did he refer to me as doug, or geroge or did he never say a word and you are lying. if you are not lying you should have no problem with a explanation.

You are right Jim.....The best radio that I have ever owned as far as the receiver and Noise blanker go is the Lincoln. It is extremely quiet on the receive and the NB works exceptionally well. Couple that with good grounding and you should have a good, quiet system

Well, here's my rig's 15 mins. of fame.

http://www.sgcworld.com/products/ADSP2/CB-ADSP2.html

All jokes aside, it works really well and I couldn't be happier with the results. My particular rig also has the CBCI Channel Guard filter installed for improved adjacent channel rejection. IMHO, a great combo to add to an already fine receiver.

If I want to say something, I will, OK? I got better things to do right now than to mess with a bunch of foulmouthed sickos. And while I am at it, I don't troll, shill, or post for someone else. I have enough a&& to say something if I want to.

If you want I can take a pic of the distributor cap I pulled off the S-10 today.
It looks like it's been loose for quite a while -- the rotor wore a hole in the side of the cap, and there's nothing but soot on the center post and rotor's tounge. I have to give Chevy some credit here 'cause despite all the damage it was still running!

That is weird, I'd imagine it didn't like rainy days too much. The GMC that I bought says no tune-ups for 100,000 miles, I find it hard to believe the spark plug wires and cap will last that long, but they guarantee them.

Announcement time is here.
As of April 1, my family and I have relocated to TEXAS.
The sad part is that it took this long for SBC to get my DSL line situated.
Looks like it's time for me and Tim to have a little pow wow and see what radio mayhem we can create down here.
Now the NG wankers, flamers, and homofeliacs will have to figure out an entire new WRONG location on me.

The computer-controlled TBI system works pretty darn good as long as the oxygen sensor is working. It doesn't seem to care what the weather is like. It even runs good cold in the middle of winter! And I've never had any problem with wires unless there was a leak in the valve-cover gasket or a bad PCV valve grommet (oil ruins the insulation). So if nothing else goes wrong, they might just live up to that 100k guarantee. In -this- case I think the problem was an incompetent shop I went to a few months ago -- the shop that installed the cap!

Don't you believe it; Frankie doesn't know how to use a killfile. And why would he when all he can do is argue about stupid little things to show how "smart" he is? He has claimed to "plonk" me three times so far, but never actually did. Shows what a liar he is.

It's too bad he doesn't expend as much energy keeping his failing business profitable.

Care to read what I posted again? The part that states, "...nothing changes for CB." isn't quite true. The fact that with the new ruling, it will be EASIER for a CB operator to acquire an amp, changes for CB... THAT is what changes. Had you read my complete posting, you would have read that. You can't claim that NOTHING changes, because the ease in the ability to acquire an amp (that will function on the CB band) changes.

Just put a piece of paper over it, or anything that is white; napkin, whatever. It will keep the unit cool as the black of the case won't absorb the suns rays that way. Hell, if you aren't real concerned about the looks, you could spray-paint the covers of the radio white and significantly reduce the problem...

Personally, I wouldn't leave any type of dark colored electronics in direct view of the sun. It will certainly shorten it's useful life. Instead of the radio lasting 15 or 20 years (or more), it may shorten it's life to like maybe, 7 to 10 years. The heat won't kill it immediately, but it will definitely takes its toll on the electronics inside. The most likely problem you will see first will be broken solder connections. This is due to the expansion and contraction of the components inside which is caused by the constant heating and cooling of the unit.

What business would that be? He basically said he was flat broke the other day. He should drop off an application at McDonalds. His 4 years as a mop jockey on a ship should be enough to get him a gig swabbing floors after Mickey D's closes at midnight.

kinds of interference on my home electronics" and i'm sure it is coming from bldg 21 apt B..he has some sort of antenna "system" on the roof, and he's messing up everything in my apartment!!

Hell, he's even coming over my cordless phone sometimes!!"

Maintenance reply: Thank you sir, we've had complaints about that recently and we WILL get Mr Scott to stop his rf splatter.

Thank you. 8-)

I certianly wouldn't recommend mounting any electronic device on a dashboard. The temperature inside of car can get to dangerous levels for electronics during the summer. You'd be better off mounting it somewhere that gets shade most of the time.

Really Lee, cops usually shot people with toy guns. Also why the paranoia when answering the door? I don't answer the front door with a gun in my hand (toy or not).

>Just because you can't find it on the internet

No doubt, and I never claimed otherwise. But alas, if the deed occurred, there is a record of it in Philly,,internet or not.

>As stated when did this occur, probably before >Al gore invented the internet, and all your >psycho babble

"Psycho babble"? Excuse you, but the law concerning the Freedom of Information act is crystal clear. Citing the proper method of attaining such information is not "psycho babble", but of special interest is that such a concept is totally foreign to yourself. And "As statetd", when N3CVJ posted this bogus claim, he said it happened "5 years ago". The time frame, in addition to the charge involving a cb, is easy enough to locate and confirm IF it occurred,,but alas, it did not, which is why N3CVJ is in an angry state of mind and lacing his posts with venom and off-topic insults regarding this subject that hit yet another sore spot of his, his unquenchable need to lie. Think of it as bringing it all back home, if you will.

>about the comonwealth this and the >commonweath that,

Pa. is indeed a commonwealth state and the release of records are handled differently from state to state. In Pa., court decisions are recorded in the precinct, city, township, borough, whatever,,,AND in the clerk of the county's records.

> many things are lost, not recorded, or not >filed properly in the City of Philadelphia. We >see it

>everyday on the news and live it,

LOL..stop it. No, you don't see it "every day" about court decisions being "lost" once handed down. In fact if such has ever occurred, it was more than likely a single, isolated incident. It is highly doubtful all parties involved somehow ALL lose the transcripts once a decision is handed by the court. You're gasping for air.

>you talk about it from 1500 miles away. LOL

And have illustrated beyond a reasonable doubt, I know better than you concerning such.
Don't get upset with the facts of the court systems, but take this opportunity to learn from it so you won't profess such ignorance in the future regarding such.

>you are acting like a distrurbing the peace >violation, is akin to rape, serial murders, >robbery, felony assaults they are treated like a >traffic ticket.

You are wrong. Traffic infractions are nothing like disturbing the peace. Traffic infractions are of a civil infractive nature, not criminal.
Traffic tickets do not bring jail time at face value. On the other hand, the commission of a crime indeed may, and often does.

>ill bet you can't find any info about them >online, such as who was found guilty etc... _

Again,,non-sequitur. You are stuck, for whatever reason, of entering the internet and the term "online" into this equation.

>You also act like he is making up something >that could never happen, what would he >benefit from saying someone was arrested or >found guilty of disordly conduct?

You have got to be kidding. You're asking me why Davie-boy lies. Ask Frank why he lies. The answer can't be all that far off the mark from N3CVJ's reason for lying. That Davie has compelled himself to protest and accuse so much concerning the "mental health" of others, is demonstrative and highly indicative of N8's behavior protesting and accusing of others being "criminals" and of unsound mind. Classic projection illustrated at it's finest. Add to this recipe Hall's paralleled behavior akin to N8, in addition to his many failed attempted defenses of N8,,and well,,a seriously disturbed picture has emerged.
Once again,,,projection onto others.

>would it make Dave sound cool will it make >him rich?

Non-sequitur. Try and pay attention and remain relevant.

> You are arguing over something you cannot >prove

You are dead wrong. I already gave the information of how it can be proved. Spend the change to make the call and see for yourself. I have unlimited long distance for one charge each month, so calling anywhere in the continental US is not a problem. It's really simple, even for you.

>and look very foolish doing so

I point you to your own, tired words "No one is forcing you to read any posts". Such words as a reply are indicative of your lack of self control.

>it is a circular

>arguement that will never end,

Only because of his insistence to lie on this group and being too ignorant to realize when he's been had. The only "arguement" (sic) that appears to never end, is your multi-references to men and their anatomy parts, appearing in the majority of your posts.

>you can't prove

>he is wrong and he can't prove what he said

>either so you or he can't be right.

You are dead wrong. It is very simple to find if a certain case was brought to court, in addition to the court's disposition of the case, even if it was dismissed. It's done everyday, all over the world by reporters, editors, individuals, PI's, attorneys, and, and many, many others who have the inclination to locate information on others. N8's multi-criminal and felonious offenses as a matter of public record is but a perfect example relating to this matter. One doesn't even need his name, merely the charges,,from their it is a grade-school level matter of the simple process of elimination, such that scares the hell out of Davie and mystifies yourself to a state of ultimate confusion.
 Because you feel the internet is the tell-all and if it doesn't exist on the internet, it didn't take place or doesn't exist, is laughable and may make for good obfuscation technique at masking N3CVJ's continual decline, but it is not practical or true.

But absence of court records most certainly is evidence that it didn't happen. Your screaming about proving a negative is all the proof one needs.
No record exists of your claim.

>No, YOU are unable to find any record. That >does not mean that none exists.

There is NO record of it, Davie-son. You keep referring to a town you claimed you mentioned, but it was I who mentioned the suburban towns in the thread, not yourself, as you have lied and claimed. You distanced yourself from the thread and dropped it like a bad habit when I begna to question the exact precincts such as Kensington, Germantown, etc,,who,,
by the way, list ALL court convictions unedr the clerk's county office
or 1st judicial district.
ALL are recorded via the Clerk of the Court's records in Philadelphia County, either the clerk of the court AND/OR the 1st judicial district, which is readily accessible to all,,well, to MOST, as you are now painfully aware YOU weren't educated on such matters. FWIW, your desperate claim of "suburban Philly" encompasses and extends only to Willow Grove to the north, King of Prussia to the west, Upland to the south, and of course, the Delaware river to the east. All are under the same Commonwealth laws as pertaining to the court system, as are ALL other "suburbans" of Philly, If the town is NOT under the jurisdiction of Philadelphia County Court records, it is NOT "suburban' Philthy. One more education lesson for you to get hung upon over the weekend.......ALL records regarding convictions, even from the smallest
"suburban" of Philthy, is recorded at the clerk's office on microfilm, which was transferred from paper documents in 1992. The same holds for Montgomery County (you know this well, as the coounty seat is in Norristown), Delaware, Cheser, and Bucks Counties. Now, roll over and play Dead or go fetch a stick or something. Your lies are believed by none but those you align yourself with, such as in this post,,,,, >You're getting warmer.

No,,,I'm dead on.

>You mentioned the town in your last passage.

You claimed YOU mentioned it, which, all can see, never occurred.

>Now all you have to do is figure out which

>one.......

Not at all. The manner in which the system works (if you're not happy with the system, feel free to change it or move to a place that embraces your beliefs) is that the burden of proof is always on the claimant, not the party that asks for confirmation. Get educated, as your position on such matters are laughable, but to be pitied, no less.

>This all started when someone made a claim >that local law enforcement did not have a right >to intervened on matters of RFI from CB >radios.

Ahh,,so you DID go back and read the thread,

>No, I didn't. Since I am telling the truth, I don't >have to go back and verify my original story.

LOL..your not having a clue about the Stationmaster antenna is a direct-self contradiction to this position you present, but I'll allow you to run with the rope around your neck once again. To wit: You once claimed you had a Phelps Stationmaster (need to see your post where you claimed such? I will be more than happy to illustrtae it again) but when I asked you about it at a later date, you replied "WHAT Stationmanster?", illustrating, according to your own words, that, IF you were telling the truth, you would have remembered such, and there would have been no need to go back and "verify" what you originally said. Here's another..,,,LOL,,,(you're on a roll..) I will lay odds there isn't one person in this group that would forget owning a certain brand of antenna at ANY point in there life, ESPECIALLY a base antenna one had erected at their home.
You lose, Davie. The facts are the facts. They won't change no matter how many times the story is told and no matter how many excuses you offer for "not remembering" the Phelps. You're a liar, plain and simple.

>While in most cases, locals can't deal directly >with issues which relate to Part 95, radio law, >using such charges as "disturbing the peace",

>when it can be demonstrated that the CBer in >question was using foul, obscene language >and disturbing the neighbor's "peace" when >those transmissions overrode their stereo >receiver.

Of course,,,but they COULDN"T do it back when you claimed, Davie, prior to HR 2346 or whatever it was. These are the FACTS of the matter, and no matter how you attempt to present otherwise, your lying ways are recognized by all who care.

>In this particular case, the person charged

How's anybody going to mistake Steveo, covered in white chicken feathers, for a cop? Beside cops don't carry camera in their hand and identifiy themselves as "PeePeeholic" while ringing the door bell.

Well I have known people that do in my younger days when I did some electrical work for a buddy when I was still in high school. He did plumbing and heating work and needed somebody who knew how to wire up the controls, fix motor controls on beer coolers etc. Also if you work in many areas of Detroit you can't even talk to a store clerk except through two inches of Lexan bullet proof plastic. And I can assure you that in most cases of the above the gun is right handy under the counter too.

Leland, print a copy of the post from Steve, show it to your management, they will see it is premeditated. Parks better watch out people will be calling the medina municipal building complaining about the foul language etc ementating from his ilegal cb station... 2 can play his game.

It doesnt matter I am a NG reader who wants the truth. why do you leave notes at Lelands door and harass him by telephone and now malicious prank calls to his landlords? That is what 12 year olds do not grown men like you say you are. What did Leland do to you that you act this way? I think Leland is right you are scared shitless when it comes to face to face contact.

First, the circuit techniques for UHF receiver front ends and transmitter PA's are totally different than those on 11 meters.
Conversion becomes wholesale replacement of about half of the radio.

Second, <<`ALL'>> CB radios must be type-accepted by the FCC for use on the air. Unless you have the thousands of dollars for R&D, and legal assistance to complete this, forget the whole thing.

What you are trying to do is tantamount to modifing a VCR into a satellite uplink to jam television satellites. Can't get there from here, No how, now way. Zip. Nada. The BIG goose egg.

Now you could use UHF commercial radios on the GMRS (former Class A CB channels) with very little problem. Just change crystals or reprogram the synthesizer in the radio, tweak, and you're in business. Any competent two-way radio shop can do that.

I'd suggest you study a LOT more on basic electronic theory, and circuit design before you post such an asinine question.

Sure Jerry, but you should have enough couth and etiquette to answer for your misguided posts, OK?

>I got better things to do right now than to >mess with a bunch of foulmouthed

Who said anything about foul mouths? In fact, no one said anything about you forging, either, until you began to scream your innocence from the rooftops. You appear to have your hand in all types of soiled messes, Jerry, judging solely on your own words.

>And while I am at it, I don't troll, shill, or post >something if I want to.

You're no longer believed. In FACT, your actions say different and are ahead of your mouth. Responding to what you know are forges is indeed trolling. Now, take that fork out of yourself.

Then tell me WHO I am forging. I have never spoken for anyone but myself.
Again, if I have something to say, I'll say it. Whose "forge"? What "forges"? I don't give a rat's a--- what you or anyone else thinks of me or what I say. But, again, if I respond to something, then so be it.

I'll still chuckle at those shops that would "never" be busted "because FCC ain't got time or money for CBers". I am still going to laugh every time a bandit gets one of those letters for operating on them "extree" channels or bootlegging on 10 Meters. You know, those people that weren't 'hurtin'" anything by 'freebanding' on the ham bands. Anybody that doesn't like it can come and see me. If I want to say it, I will say it, and it won't be from some forger.

you know Steveo I have given you shit in this NG and other have too but it is the usual NG BS no one takes seriously and at first I thought Leland calling you chicken was just the usual BS in here. but now I see there is truth to it I do beleive you really are scared and a chicken. The truth is Leland has done nothing to you yet you harass his home then lie about it hide your identity from him etc. that makes you a real honest to god chicken Steveo. sorry to say buddy, its true.

Lot better, thanks! Went for a quick ride on Sunday and made the reservations for Mothers Day Brunch, so at least the ear infections getting better.
Friday though is the EKG, that's the one that's got me

Well, good luck man. We're getting to that age where they want to fix us, and people are living longer by taking a pill or two. It's not a death sentence even if they do a little repair work now.

My Doc has had me on cholesterol and BP meds for years, they seem to work pretty well. He told me to take the meds or plan for a chest cutter.

So far so good. :)

It appears that WA3MOJ has been relegated to chasing Steveo and begging for his attention under the guise of understanding what Leland did to him. Funny as hell, ain't it? Methinks Geo is running scared and trying to convince Steveo that he should call off the hounds.

Nah, he's a deadbeat dad, and a felon. He'd probably point a gun at you if you went to his place of "business" to buy something.

No, I mentioned the town sometime later. Look again.

I did nothing of the sort. I did get tired of your incessant and baseless accusations of lying, when you were unable to find what it was you thought you could find.

Since you don't live here, I can understand your unfamiliarity with these districts. All of those "towns" you have mentioned are within the city limits. They are not autonomous towns.

>>ALL are recorded via the Clerk of the Court's records in Philadelphia County, did happen. Meanwhile you are accusing me of lying in a vain attempt to cover up your ineptitude at information harvesting.

> FWIW, your
>desperate claim of "suburban Philly"

Nothing "desperate" about it, it's the truth. Communities which surround a metropolis or large city are normally referred to as "suburbs" or "suburban" towns. Once again, your inability to comprehend, has you jumping at incorrect conclusions. You attempt to cover this up by accusing me of lying.

Um, yes it is. Montgomery county is a county in itself. It is not part of Philadelphia county, but it is still considered a suburb of Phila.

So tell me, who should the people believe here? Someone who was born and raised here, or some sociopath 1500 miles away who lives his life vicariously through confrontations with other people.

Which is generally not always available in electronic form over the internet. Not all communities have transitioned to an all electronic database yet, so these records, while public, require a more "old school" method to obtain. Only someone truly serious would spend the time and money to obtain them.

With that in mind, I find it hard to believe that your fixation with me is so great that you would request hard documents (At a nominal cost).

I think the issue is that a cop could mistake -you- for a gang-banger or some other gun-toting urban warrior. Strange as it may seem, these guys are looking out for you, Leland.

All the more reason to address the situation with something more than a BB gun.
If you really live in the area that Steve says, you should have learned by now that determined criminals are never deterred by a mere handgun -- you need to show them the dark recesses of a barrel larger than your big toe. For about twice the price of your carbon-dioxide-powered fly-swatter you can get yourself an H&R (Stevens?) single-shot 12-gauge. And don't load it with lead or steel shot. Empty the shells and refill them with rock salt. I saw that trick in a movie once and it works. Hurts like hell but it isn't lethal, so the worst you can get is 2nd degree assault (depending on your local laws), which sure beats spending several years and thousands of dollars fighting an involuntary manslaughter charge.

If it's a BB gun, save some time by calling yourself an ambulance in advance, then hold up a sign that says, "Shoot me -- I'm Stupid!"

Yeah it is funny that we are at that age. I mean twenty not happening. Funny how it started out as just a cold after fishing at Tahoe in February and progressed to serious.

I was only interested in your claims concerning such, not what the FCC lists.
Like Davie-son, you claim you already provided for your claims. But for some reason, you both fail to illustrate such and merely repeat yourselves with the redundant "I already did", yet no one has seen these "results" from either of you, as neither of you posted them, as they simply do not exist.

>Or do you, a "professional journalist", need to

I can't be called that anymore, now I'm just an information jockey for a news source relating to a certain sport,,but then again, my personal life and achievements were never an issue and solicited only by yourself and Lelnad.
This is the direct opposite and in contrast to your AND Lelnad's self-furthering claims regarding your personal lives, which were unsolicited by anyone, yet, you each somehow expressed a need to offer such self-bolstering claims on your own. Reflecting on those comments and redundantly claiming you provided for them, simply will not make it so.

Horrible advice. Rock salt is poor idea for anything but animals in your yard or garden. One of the first rules of firearm safety taught in ALL legitimate courses concerning firearms as a means of personal protection is one NEVER pulls a gun unless one intends to shoot, and when one shoots, one shoots to kill.
If one is trying to gain entry into your home, or if your life is in danger, rock salt is not going to stop an adrenaline charged assailant. If there was a clear fear for your life or if the assailant was attempting to gain unauthorized entry to your home, there will be no charges filed upon your protection of your life and property when a clear danger was imminent.

(Also why the paranoia when answering

the door? I don't answer the front door with a

Also, if a felon is brandishing a gun (doesn't matter if it is a BB gun or an AK) it is grounds for returning to prison.

HARRDeeHarr,,poor Chill Factor is trying again this time from Earthlink. Hey chilled and grilled, you should focus on something else instead of sharing that Jerry Oxendine shares your unhealthy penchant for men's underwear when thinking of myself. Go sit in the corner with the other unhealthy homosexuals that share your same-sex fervor.

But absence of court records most certainly is evidence that it didn't happen. Your screaming about proving a negative is all the proof one needs.
No record exists of your claim.

>No, YOU are unable to find any record. That >does not mean that none exists.

There is NO record of it, Davie-son. You keep referring to a town you claimed you mentioned, but it was I who mentioned the suburban towns in the thread, not yourself, as you have lied and claimed.

>No, I mentioned the town sometime later.

>Look again.

No need. You may indeed have mentioned a twon at one point or another, but it was not in realtion to this lie you fostered upon the group.

You distanced
yourself from the thread and dropped it like a bad habit

>I did nothing of the sort. I did get tired of your >incessant and baseless accusations of lying,

>when you were unable to find what it was you >thought you could find.

Sure you did, because you had nothing to offer in the manner of truth, only personal insults.

when I begna to question the exact precincts such as Kensington, Germantown, etc,,who,,
by the way, list ALL court convictions unedr the clerk's county office
or 1st judicial district.

>Since you don't live here, I can understand >your unfamiliarity with these districts.

But NOT unfamiliar with the law and how it works. That has been reserved and confirmed of and by yourself.

>All of those "towns" you have mentioned are >within the city limits. They are not autonomous >towns.

Who claimed they were? Holding with that thought,,,,,,,,ALL are recorded via the Clerk of the Court's records in Philadelphia County,

>Since the town in question is not a part of >Philadelphia county, you're methods are once >again flawed.

There you have it,,,,if it was NOT in Philadelphia County (it never occurred anyways), it is NOT "suburban" Philadelphia. You're really obsessing hard on this one, Davie-son, but you are the only one that can't see you have been swallowing water in your attempt to tread. Never met someone obsessed on maintaining lies as much as you,,with the exception of children.

either the clerk of the court AND/OR the 1st judicial district, which is readily accessible to all,,well, to MOST, as you are now painfully aware YOU weren't educated on such matters.

>You no nothing of what I know.

Regarding your claim, I most certainly proved I did. Now, go on make the call and see if I was incorrect refgarding my claims of the courts.

>I know that the incident in question did >happen. Meanwhile you are accusing me of >lying in a vain attempt to cover up your >ineptitude at information harvesting.

The "trying" is all yours, in addition to your crying in an attempt to explain away why your claim doesn't exist in any court records or documents that are readily accessible via the Freedom of Information Act.

 FWIW, your
desperate claim of "suburban Philly"

>Nothing "desperate" about it, it's the truth.

If it was the truth, it would be readily accessible, yet the courts have no record of it. End of story and of your lies..

>Communities which surround a metropolis or >large city are normally referred to as "suburbs" >or "suburban" towns.

Wrong,,,,that is NOT what constitutes a "suburb" OF that town, UNLESS, it was A) under its jurisdiction in some manner, or,,B) paid taxes to that town in some form. You again illustrate your ignorance, his time of what constitutes a "suburb".

>Once again, your inability to comprehend, has >you jumping at incorrect conclusions. You >attempt to cover this up by accusing me of >lying.

Wrong again, Davie-son,,,you try to negate and obfuscate your lies and providing proof by claiming it is somehow another's "fault" that it doesn't exist.

encompasses and extends only to Willow Grove to the north, King of Prussia to the west, Upland to the south, and of course, the Delaware river to the east. All are under the same Commonwealth laws as pertaining to the court system, as are ALL other "suburbans" of Philly, If the town is NOT under the jurisdiction of Philadelphia County Court records, it is NOT "suburban' Philthy.

>Um, yes it is. Montgomery county is a county >in itself. It is not part of Philadelphia county, >but it is still considered a suburb of Phila.

So,,,now an entire county is considered a "suburb" of Philly? Incorrect, unless, one of the above parameters have been met. Once again,,cite a single example, not another mere lie,er,,personal opinion.

>So tell me, who should the people believe >here? Someone who was born and raised >here, or some sociopath 1500 miles away who >lives his life vicariously through confrontations >with other people.

Defining and invoking yourself and Lelnad and Frank and Dogie won't alleviate the pain you feel from being held to the wire regarding your lies.

more education lesson for you to get hung upon over the weekend.......ALL records regarding convictions, even from the smallest "suburban" of Philthy, is recorded at the clerk's office on microfilm, which was transferred from paper documents in 1992.

>Which is generally not always available in >electronic form over the internet.

Non-Sequitur. None said otherwise.

>Not all communities have transitioned to an all >electronic database yet, so these records, >while public, require a more "old school"

>method to obtain.

Now you are beginning to learn the knowledge I haev imbibed upon thee. See how long a thread it took? LOL.

> Only someone truly serious would spend the >time and money to obtain them.

Well, it was most certainly a serious claim you made, and releavant to the topic of the group. It was just as easily disproved.

>With that in mind, I find it hard to believe that >your fixation with me is so great that you >would request hard documents (At a nominal

>cost).

1.00 for the first page and 25 cents for each additional page is chump change.
Don't flatter yourself, it isn't you and it isn't personal. I have a problem with liars, always have and that has been illustrated for years. I understand your low self-esteem needs to feel it is personal and about yourself, but that's another subject.
In other words, your bluff has been called.
LOL..your not having a clue about the Stationmaster antenna is a direct-self contradiction to this position you present, but I'll allow you to run with the rope around your neck once again.

>In other words, you lost once again on the >CB'er getting popped for disturbing the peace,

>so you'll move on to yet another fixation.....

I'm not the one that failed to provide for my claim,,,you are. You have quite an incorrect interpretation of "lost". Your illustration of thinking in such terms of "winning" or "losing" is classic example of your confrontational mannerisms adn how you view the group.

To wit: You once claimed you had a Phelps Stationmaster (need to see your post where you claimed such? I will be more than happy to illustrtae it again) but when I asked you about it at a later date, you replied "WHAT Stationmanster?", illustrating, according to your own words, that, IF you were telling the truth, you would have remembered such, and there would have been no need to go back and "verify" what you originally said.
Here's another..,,,LOL,,,(you're on a roll..) I will lay odds there isn't one person in this group that would forget owning a certain brand of antenna at ANY point in there life, ESPECIALLY a base antenna one had erected at their home.

> I never said the Stationmaster was erected >on my home. It's a REPEATER antenna.

>Dave

>"Sandbagger"

>N3CVJ

>http://home.ptd.net/~n3cvj

Making it even more pertinent. Nevertheless, you claimed it was YOURS, and when questioned about it, you had no clue. Again, I will lay odds none in this group would ever forget owning a certain brand of a FIXED location antenna at any point in ther life. You're not looking too well, Davie. Ask God for forgiveness for your lies.

He's not Peebles, but it was a useful distraction and gave him a false sense of security long enough for him not to notice what really was going on. His anonymity is shot now.

You posted it from home thru a different newserver very basic. It is as much you, as you think that "I am not george" is me. you finally caught him

You are wrong as usual, Twisty. Cops "pull" their guns on suspects every day but they don't always shoot, or even intend to shoot. They are, however, -prepared- to shoot if necessary, and -that- is what is taught in any legitimate firearms safety course.

>when one shoots, one shoots to kill.

That's only taught by police academies in Spokane and a few other screwed-up cities. The purpose of firing the weapon is to quickly stop the person from doing what they should not be doing. That doesn't always mean "shoot to kill", nor does it always mean the use of a lethal weapon. Ever hear of a Taser? The fact is that more and more cities are training their officers how to shoot more effectively under circumstances where death is not the preferred option. Even the US military recognizes that killing the enemy soldier is not always advantageous. The lessons of WWII taught them that one -wounded- soldier removes two or three soldiers from the battlefield. That was one of the reasons the US military changed the caliber of their primary infantry weapon from .308 to .223, because the latter is -less- likely to kill.

>If one is trying to gain entry into your home, or if your life is in >danger, rock salt is not going to stop an adrenaline charged assailant.

It does a better job than a BB gun and most handguns. The intruder doesn't know that he's been shot with rock salt, he just knows that his body is suddenly racked with pain, and if he doesn't collapse from shock he runs like hell. And since it isn't lethal, it's much safer in the hands of an adrenaline charged defender who might mistake a family member or friend as an assailant.

>If there was a clear fear for your life or if the assailant was >attempting to gain unauthorized entry to your home, there will be no >charges filed upon your protection of your life and property when a >clear danger was imminent.

You can make excuses for wielding deadly force in hopes of carving your first notch on the grip, or you can act responsibly on what -should- be the reason for having a weapon in the first place -- safety. Hey, we all know that a big gun pumps the nads, and that's fine for people like you who need to artificially supplement their inadequacies with blued steel. But I was taught to use the right tools for the job, and a lethal weapon poses too much of a danger in a situation where mistakes are common and people, innocent or not, can die.

It's been almost three years, so of course it has changed. Are you really asking if they are still licensed for frequencies within the freeband? Yes they are. Now that you have something to occupy time that would be better spent trying to find yourself a job, do you need me to spoon-feed you the URL to the FCC's database?

Horrible advice. Rock salt is poor idea for anything but animals in your yard or garden. One of the first rules of firearm safety taught in ALL legitimate courses concerning firearms as a means of personal protection is one NEVER pulls a gun unless one intends to shoot,

>You are wrong as usual, Twisty.

No, I'm dead on, Frank. Your unfamiliarity with gun safety as taught in firearms courses all over the country is showing.

Non-sequitur and not even a good reach. Your advice was not directed to cops, who, btw, have their own set of rules ad conduct. Your poor advice was to civilians and was incorrect.

Why the lie, Frank? You're back-pedaling and entering LEO's into the equation as if there was some relevance to your poooor advice. It's NOT taught only by a few single PD's....it's taught in every single concealed weapons class in the country for civilians.

You are the one that mentioned 12 gauge AND your advice was to a civilian.

You are the one that mentioned a 12 gauge AND your advice was to a civilian.

>Even the US military recognizes that killing the >enemy soldier is not always advantageous.

Anotehr reach and non-sequitur.

>The lessons of WWII taught them that one

(snipped for off-topic non-relevancy)

YOUR advice was not to military or LEO's, and remains incorrect.

If one is trying to gain entry into your home, or if your life is in danger, rock salt is not going to stop an adrenaline charged assailant.

And yet ANOTHER non-sequitur.

> The intruder doesn't know that he's You're reaching very far. A high percentage of such crimes are drug induced and when the perp is hopped up on dope, he isn't going to feel squat.

>And since it isn't lethal, it's much safer in the >hands of an adrenaline charged defender who

Oh man! You're way off in left field.
I said "clear" fear for your life. If there is a "mistake" of identity, such is not clear.

If there was a clear fear for your life or if the assailant was attempting to gain unauthorized entry to your home, there will be no charges filed upon your protection of your life and property when a clear danger was imminent.

>You can make excuses

You;re the one disqualifying your own statements with the invocation of your original claim.

Try protection. When one applies for the concealed weapons permit, there is a question asking your reason for obtaining such. The majority puts "Personal Protection" or "business" or some related item. I will lay odds NONE put "safety" in the blank.

>Hey, we all know that a big gun pumps the

It's very relevant, Twist. When effective non-lethal alternatives are available, lethal weapons are preferred only by those whose primary objective is to kill. In the case of home defense, deterrence is the best and most effective alternative. Begin with a fenced, well-lit perimeter with very few dark places to lurk. Add a couple big and noisy dogs, solid doors and locks, windows that are difficult to reach, and maybe a clearly visible electronic security system for larger properties. This is enough to deter almost any bad guy. If he is dumb enough to try and lucky enough to succeed, deliver a couple full loads of rock salt. If THAT doesn't change his mind, I would be willing to bet that he has already taken precautions for the worst case scenario and won't be stopped by anything short of 20mm armor-piercing depleted uranium. But by that time I would hope the home owner has enough sense to have already called the cops.

Looks like you learned another word that you don't understand. Well, time for class, Twisty. It is not a noun, as you have repeatedly and ignorantly applied it above and in previous posts. It's not even a word: "non sequitur" is a phrase from Latin meaning "does not follow"; or, more specifically, the conclusion does not follow from the premises. As a proper example of it's usage I will say that your conclusion is non sequitur since I made a statement, not an argument. Notice that I did -not- say, "...your conclusion is a non-sequitur..." which would be the -improper- use of the phrase. But I'm sure you already knew that because you used to be a professional journalist.....LOL!

You watch -way- too much TV, Twist. A high percentage of such crimes are drug -related- in that the perp is usually hurting from withdrawl and is trying to get money or property to trade for a fix.

First you whine about non-related subjects, then you introduce concealed weapon permits as a premise to support an argument about home intrusions. You are just arguing semantics (gee, what a suprise) because a home is safe if it is protected from intruders.... duh! But now that you brought it up, since when do you need a CWP in your own home? And how about "personal safety" for a reason to get a CWP?

Being the nice guy I am, I'll play this your way once again: If the reason for having a weapon in your home is 'protection', then what are you protecting? Life and property, right? Right. Now, which is more likely to be a threat to life and property, rock salt or lead? If the weapon gets turned against you (which happens more times than you think), or if the wrong person gets shot by accident (accidents happen more often than home invasions), would you rather it be loaded with rock salt or with lead? You are better protected with a shotgun filled with rock salt because you are better protected against the realities of gun ownership, realities that are both expected and unforseen. Now you can tell yourself that such things will never happen to you because you are under the delusion that you are in 100% control of your weapon. That's what a lot of people think. Some of them realize they are wrong -before- someone gets hurt. Others learn the hard way.

Now before anybody goes ballistic (no pun intended) and starts whining about how I am some sort of anti-gun activist, I'll say this now: I couldn't care less if you own a gun or not. I own a few myself. I don't hunt anymore, but I do enjoy target shooting. BUT.... there are much better alternatives for home defense than a lethal weapon, as I have already described. I also have a CWP, and in 20 years I have never had the need to 'draw' on anyone for the simple reason that I don't take midnight walks down dark alleys in bad neighborhoods looking for a fight. Prevention and deterrence are the key issues. Not firepower.

Mr. Glenn A. Baxter
RR 1 Box 776
Belgrade Lakes, ME 04918

RE: Amateur Radio license K1MAN

Dear Mr. Baxter:

This letter explains in what ways your Amateur station has come into compliance with Commission rules since our letter to you of January 29, 2002; and notifies you of two areas of operation that, if not corrected, will lead to enforcement action against your license and/or designation of your renewal application for a hearing.

By letter dated January 29, 2002, the Commission notified you that your understanding of various Amateur Radio Service rules was incorrect. We outlined your apparent misconceptions regarding station control, publishing a transmitting schedule and how that related to interference, threats made to licensee complainants, including threats made with so-called "felony complaint affidavits", broadcasting and broadcasting of tape recordings and telephone conversations.

The January 29 letter detailed complaints received by the Commission, and explained that your method of station control, i.e., "a timer from Radio Shack", did not achieve compliance with the Commission's Rules when you were not present at the control point for your station and, therefore, did not satisfy the Commission's Rules regarding automatic control of a station. We explained to you that to comply with the Commission's Rules you must be at the transmitter, or at the transmitter control point, every moment your station is transmitting when your station is locally or remotely controlled; and that if the station is controlled by telecommand from the control point using a radio link, the frequencies used for telecommand must comply with the Section 97.201 requirements for an auxiliary station (may transmit only on the 1.25 m and shorter wavelength bands, except 219-220, 222-222.150, 431-433 and 435-438 MHz segments).

By letter dated March 4, 2003, the Commission's Boston Office notified you that Commission monitoring and numerous complaints filed with the Commission indicated that the problems outlined in January 2002 had not been corrected. The letter stated that your Amateur station was apparently being used for broadcasting various programs having nothing to do with Amateur Radio; and that transmissions from your station were being used for deliberate interference and for communications in which you apparently had a pecuniary interest. The Boston Office letter stated that transmissions started and ended erratically, were sometimes repetitive and abruptly ended with no identification as required by Commission rules, and that such operation indicated that the transmissions were not under proper control of a licensed operator. The letter noted also that you continually broadcast notices of so-called "felony complaint affidavits " that you claimed to have filed with the United States Justice Department against other Amateur Radio licensees whom you perceived to have interfered with your broadcasts, or refused to relinquish their operating frequency to you.

The Boston Office's letter stated that transmissions from your Amateur station included references to a degree program and directed listeners to your website that advertised an "American Radio School Technician Degree in Electronics" for "$299.95". On that web site you solicited donations for radio equipment, advertised a credit card, and solicited donations and advertised for "IARN" and "AARA". The letter from the Boston office pointed out that such use of your station was in apparent violation of Section 97.113(a)(3) of the Commission's rules, which prohibits "Communications for hire or for material compensation, direct or indirect...." and "Communications in which the station licensee or control operator has a pecuniary interest..."

The letter from the Boston Office requested that you provide substantial additional information about the operation of your station, including submission of a log detailing the information on a weekly basis until further notice. In January 2004, the Boston office notified you that you could discontinue the log submissions, and referred the case to this office.

We have reviewed the information you submitted, as well as numerous complaints filed against your station. Additionally we have reviewed tape recordings made by Commission personnel of your transmissions at various times during 2003 and 2004 subsequent to the Boston Office letter of March 3, 2003.

It is the finding of this office that you are, with some exceptions, generally in compliance with the Commission's rules in the Amateur Service related to broadcasting and information bulletins, and we explain as follows. Broadcasting is prohibited in the Amateur Radio Service, with some exceptions. Section 97.3(a)(10) defines broadcasting as "transmissions intended for reception by the general public, either direct or relayed." One-way transmissions are limited in the Amateur service, but an exception is allowed in Section 97.111(b)(6) for "Transmissions necessary to disseminate information bulletins."

Information bulletins are defined by Section 97.3(a)(26) as messages "directed only to Amateur operators consisting solely of subject matter of direct interest to the Amateur service." There are no specific time limits placed upon information bulletins by Commission rules. A review of your programs at random times since March 3, 2003 indicates that your transmissions were directed to Amateur Radio operators, not to the general public, and that the individual bulletins were related to the Amateur Radio Service. The only notable exception was the offering of a reward for information leading to the identity of parties making threatening telephone calls to you.

The station control problems outlined to you in warnings from the Commission appear, with minor exceptions, to have been corrected. During the monitoring period your station abruptly ended transmission with no identification in one instance, and started transmissions in mid-sentence in another instance.

There are, however, two areas in the operation of your Amateur station that must be corrected in order to avoid enforcement action and/or a designation of your renewal application for hearing to determine if you are qualified to remain a licensee. These are: 1) deliberate interference resulting from your commencing operation on top of ongoing communications, in violation of Section 97.101(a) and (d); and 2) use of your Amateur station for pecuniary interests, in violation of Sections 97.113(a)(2)and (3).

Regarding deliberate interference, we receive continuing complaints, and our monitoring verifies, that your transmissions start up on top of existing communications of individual licensees as well as nets such as the Salvation Army Team Emergency Radio Network. Such operation constitutes deliberate interference. Stations engaging in ongoing communications are not obligated to stop transmitting when K1MAN wants to start transmitting on a frequency, and complainants are so advised by the Commission. You appear to believe that the publication of a transmission schedule gives you the right to begin transmitting on a certain frequency at a certain time, even if the frequency is occupied. It does not.

All frequencies in the Amateur Radio Service are shared--no frequency is assigned for the exclusive use of any station, and your Amateur station has no greater rights to a frequency at any particular time than any other Amateur station. Section 97.101(d) of the rules prohibits an Amateur station from willfully or maliciously interfering with any radio communication or signal. Moreover, publishing a schedule is merely one of the several conditions necessary for the control operator of a club station to accept compensation for transmitting information bulletins, pursuant to Section 97.113(d) of the Commission's rules. Your station K1MAN, however, is not a club station.

Regarding use of an Amateur station for pecuniary interest, we note that your Amateur Radio program transmissions regularly advertise your web page at www.K1man.com, and on those pages you advertise items for sale by the American Amateur Radio Association (AARA), including T shirts, hats and a "Technician Degree Diploma". You advertise the sales commissions and "overrides" that your State Directors and

Section Managers can receive, and detail ways in which your Section Managers can earn money by recruiting members, selling hats, name badges or T shirts.

Section 97.113(a)(2) prohibits communications for hire or for material compensation, direct or indirect, paid or promised. Section 97.113(a)(3) prohibits communications in which the station licensee or control operator has a pecuniary interest.

We remind you that any attempts to threaten or intimidate Amateur radio licensees operating on the Amateur bands will reflect adversely upon your qualifications to remain a Commission licensee, and would be the subject of a license revocation or renewal hearing. By letter dated December 11, 2001, you were warned against the sending of your so-called "felony complaint affidavits" to various Amateur Radio licenses that you perceive to either cause interference to your station or which do not relinquish to you the frequency on which they are operating.

Complainants were advised by the Commission to forward any such "affidavits" they received to the Commission, and that they could otherwise be ignored. The United States Attorney for your jurisdiction also warned you that the mailing of such "affidavits" is contrary to law. Apparently you have discontinued those threats. We also remind you that, in regard to the taping and broadcasting of telephone calls, you must comply with applicable state laws.

In conclusion, failure to correct the deliberate interference caused by K1MAN, and the continued use of K1MAN for pecuniary interests, will lead to enforcement action against your license. Either would be sufficient to designate your renewal application for an evidentiary hearing to determine if you are qualified to remain a Commission licensee.

An adverse finding in regard to threats to complainant licensees, or violation of state law regarding recording and broadcasting telephone conversations, would lead to enforcement action against your license and would be sufficient to designate your renewal application for an evidentiary hearing to determine if you are qualified to remain a Commission licensee. You would have the burden of proof in such a proceeding.

You should be aware that in 1990, the Commission revised its character qualifications policy, expanding the types of non-FCC-related misconduct that it would consider as bearing on licensee or applicant character qualifications (Policy Regarding Character Qualifications in Broadcast Licensing, Policy Statement and Order, 5 FCC RCD 3252 (1990) (Character Policy Statement), recon. granted in part, denied in part, 6 FCC Rcd 3448 (1991), further recon. granted, 7 FCC Rcd 6564 (1992). The Commission concluded that "a propensity to comply with the law generally is relevant to the Commission's public interest analysis, and that an applicant's or licensee's willingness to violate other laws, and, in particular, to commit felonies, also bears on our confidence that an applicant or licensee will conform to FCC rules and policies. The 1990 Character Policy Statement applies to Amateur Radio licensees just as it does to all other FCC licensees (See, e.g., Herbert L. Schoenbohm, Decision, 13 FCC Rcd 15028 (1998), recon. denied, 13 FCC Rcd 23774 (1998), aff'd in part, dismissed in part sub nom. Schoenbohm v. FCC, 204 F.3d 243 (2000), cert. denied, 121 S. Ct. 405 (2000); Leslie D. Brewer, Order to Show Cause, Notice of Order of Suspension, Notice of Opportunity for Hearing, and Notice of Apparent Liability for a Forfeiture, 16 FCC Rcd 5671, licenses revoked, 16 FCC Rcd 12878 (2001).

Accordingly, we will continue to review the operation of K1MAN in light of the issues outlined above.

I'm not in Woodhaven, I'm in Lincoln Park. Just the same. I've decided the Anti-Keyclowns are correct, I think it's high time, we LEGAL op's took a stand and started ratting out the people who think they're above the law. you morons did everything in the world to discredit me and slam my business, when it was active, well, guess what, I'm getting even, I'm gonna start by ratting out every e-bay auction that breaks FCC rules for the sale and manufacture of Amps and Radios. I'm getting sick and tired of all the CB AMPS in the AMATEUR RADIO Section of e-bay. So, from here on out, they are going to be reported to EBAY's security team.

Consider yourself warned.

The best thing that could happen to Amateur Radio would be for K1MAN to be taken off the air.

Maybe someday he will learn the meaning of integrity, self-reliance and gainful employment..... ok, no he won't, since he hasn't already learned it from his mommy who is -still- working to support his freeloading ass. Heck, just about everyone on this newsgroup has some sort of job..... Mopar, Landshark, "George", Leland, Jerry..... everyone except Eric, Chuck and Twistedhed. A long, long time ago twithed still remembers how his daddy used to made him suck
he knew if he had his chance
for gay sex he'd drop his pants
and get his pooper reamed out
for a while

Sucking cock makes twhithed quiver shakes him to his lily liver
fagness in the truckstop
as twhithed eats that dick glop Twhithed fag will whine and cry
but the anti-boys will never die and keyclowns will suck both far and wide until the CB dies...

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ï¿½em til he dies.....
Twit sucks ï¿½em til he dies....

twithed loves a gay sex slave
and writing in sporadic waves
and his bible is play girl
he believes in anal hole
and licking on a jizz filled pole
he'll teach ya how to suck reeeeeeal slow

now we KNOW twithed's in love with dick just watch him kneel and start to lick
he stops his drugs and booze
to slurp up that pulsing goo
he's a lonely fag ass gayboy suck
with a camper shell on his pickup truck
wow the truckers sure are all in luck
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ï¿½em til he dies

Now for many years twits been a fag sucks cock each day until he gags
and thats also how it used to be...

Twithed sucked for landshark queen and sideband too cuz he's so mean to that great hammie named N8

and while twithed bobbed up and down they all called him a fag keyclown dumb twithed never learns
and his sphincter always burns

and while train fag read from "CB Tricks" twit sucked 8 or ten more dicks
look at how that punk ass licks...
The day the CB died...

And we were singin...hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ï¿½em til he dies.....

helter skelter in the summer swelter
twit sucks hard cock in a city park shelter
eight times a day and does it faaast!
He'll suck yer dick on the grass
you dont even have to make a pass
cuz he loves throbbing dripping boner up the ass
the keyclowns whipped out their little bones and twithed licked ï¿½em till they moaned Chapwoman stuck his tongue out for a pulsing throbbing jizz gout

the FCC then took the field
the keyclown fags just whined and squealed
cuz 11 meters was repealed
the day the CB died....

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ï¿½em til he dies.....

The keyclown fags were all in one place as twithed talked of saucers from space
and that they had to start again
so twit be nimble and twit be quick suck upon a truckers dick cuz jizz is a keyclowns only friend

and as he watched amps melted down
he knew they were all just fag keyclowns no more five five five no more keyclown jive
and as the flames climbed high into the night
they saw the end of their faggot fight

and Riley laughing with delight
the day the CB died

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ï¿½em til he dies.....

FINAL VERSE

He saw Dweebo on drugs and booze
and asked him for some happy news
but he just smiled and said "I'm Gay"
He went down to the CB store
Where he first learned to be a gay sex whore
but the man there said that he was just too queer

And in the streets the children screamed
as the ran like hell from twisty queen
But no keyclowns were speaking no more CB's needed peaking

And the 2 men twithed sucked the most his father, and son, as he loved to boast
they got busted and they were toast...
The day the CB died...

So, hey hey that twithed's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the keyclown side
twit sucks ï¿½em til he dies.....

Maybe an old Motorola "HEP782", which'd be a general purpose replacement for the original transistor. After a few years use the H might look like a W.

4584. AKC's gayness

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb

A long, long time ago doug still remembers how his daddy used to made him suck
he knew if he had his chance
for gay sex he'd drop his pants
and get his pooper reamed out
for a while

Sucking cock makes Doug quiver
shakes him to his lily liver
fagness in the truckstop
as Doug eats that dick glop Doug fag will whine and cry
but the CB'er will never die and AKC will suck both far and wide until the HAM RADIO dies...

So, hey hey that doug's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the AKC side
doug sucks 'em til he dies.....
Doug sucks 'em til he dies....

doug loves a gay sex slave
and writing in sporadic waves
and his bible is play girl
he believes in anal hole
and licking on a jizz filled pole
he'll teach ya how to suck reeeeeeal slow

now we KNOW doug's in love with dick
just watch him kneel and start to lick
he stops his drugs and booze
to slurp up that pulsing goo
he's a lonely fag ass gayboy suck
with a camper shell on his pickup truck
wow the truckers sure are all in luck
the day the HAM RADIO died

So, hey hey that doug's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the AKC side
doug sucks 'em til he dies

Now for many years dougs been a fag sucks cock each day until he gags
and thats also how it used to be...

Doug sucked for Dogie queen and Aaron too cuz he's so mean to that great faggot named N8

and while doug bobbed up and down they all called him a fag AKC dumb doug never learns
and his sphincter always burns

and while Leland fag read from "HAM RADIO Tricks" doug sucked 8 or ten more dicks
look at how that punk ass licks...
The day the HAM RADIO died...

And we were singin...hey hey that doug's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the AKC side
doug sucks 'em til he dies.....

helter skelter in the summer swelter
doug sucks hard cock in a city park shelter
eight times a day and does it faaast!
He'll suck yer dick on the grass
you dont even have to make a pass
cuz he loves throbbing dripping boner up the ass
the AKC whipped out their little bones and doug licked 'em till they moaned Doug stuck his tongue out
for a pulsing throbbing jizz gout

the FCC then took the field
the AKC fags just whined and squealed
cuz 11 meters was repealed
the day the HAM RADIO died....

So, hey hey that doug's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the AKC side
doug sucks 'em til he dies.....

The AKC fags were all in one place as doug talked of gay dates
and that they had to start again
so doug be nimble and doug be quick suck upon a truckers dick cuz jizz is a AKC's only friend

and as he watched amps melted down
he knew they were all just fag AKC no more muff dive
no more AKC jive
and as the flames climbed high into the night
they saw the end of their faggot fight

and Cb'ers laughing with delight
the day the HAM RADIO died

So, hey hey that doug's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the AKC side
doug sucks 'em til he dies.....

FINAL VERSE

He saw Leland on drugs and booze
and asked him for some happy news
but he just smiled and said "I'm Gay"
He went down to the Liquor store
Where he first learned to be a gay sex whore
but the man there said that he was just too queer

And in the streets the children screamed
as the ran like hell from the AKC queen
But no AKC were speaking no more HAM RADIO's needed peaking

And the 2 men doug sucked the most
his father, and son, as he loved to boast
they got busted and they were toast...
The day the HAM RADIO died...

So, hey hey that doug's so gay
he's a faggot and a maggot and he sucks dick all day
and those jizz lick boys on the AKC side
doug sucks 'em til he dies.....

WA3MOJ,,,,Frank never posted any list to this group regarding his claims of cbers interfering with companies on the freeband. His claim was that he was going to contact these companies and post the results of their complaints, backing his claim that this is actually taking place. This was never done, and neither was his claim of a company that he said he worked for that was permitted to transmit on the freeband. Perhaps you can point to this list and results that only he and you seem to have viewed? No, you can not, but we already knew that.

companies exist there, dumm-dumm!
Frank: wheres that militray group twist?
twistedhed: post the list of companies that authorized to operate on freeband first.
frank: OK here it is. wheres that military group twistedhed: ok post the company that you are employed by then Frank: OK Twist here it is on the list. so wheres that military group

No, Frank,,your claim was you were to contact those companies you claimed were being interfered with by illegal cbers and post the results to "prove" it was happening.
No one has ever disputed companies are indeed assigned to the freeband.
Fulfill you claim, I'll fulfill mine. Now, about that company you claimed to work for legally permitted to transmit on the freeband,,,,,,

No you won't. You have already made about a jillion promises to do this or that after someone else meets one or more of your conditions, but when those conditions are met you don't keep a single promise -- you just make excuses and add more conditions. That's what a sore loser does, Twist. Grow up.

That was not a condition of your promise to go to email if I go to the military group of your choice. But it doesn't matter, Twist: No matter how many conditions you add, even if I meet them you won't fulfill any of your own promises. Never have, never will. That's because you are a loser, Twist. If you don't know why, then you are a part of the problem like he is.
Tell me why someone who has no respect for other amateurs, who interfers with other amateur communications, issues phoney "felony complaint affidavits" to harass other amateurs, threatens other amateurs because they refuse to give up the frequency to him, willfully violates the FCC rules, uses amateur radio for monitary gain (against the rules), engages in broadcasting (against the FCC rules), should be on the air?

Once you have the site, send me an Id/password and I will put together something decent (but simple) for you. I won't spend as much time on it as my employees did on my corporate sites, but I will make it at least as nice as my home site.

For sure! Baxter has not mellowed a bit. I remember when he got his kicks knocking the fine, friendly gentlemen who ran the Sunday morning Bermuda Net off their traditional frequency with his one-way high-powered blather. Then Baxter went and declared a national emergency for the country of Bermuda! What a nut. How long must we endure Baxter's abuse of amateur radio? AK

--------- Tony's letter to the Bermuda Government Telecom Officer --------

Antony Sxxxx, VP9--
Hamilton, Bermuda
August 21st. 1989

Mr. E. Pitman,

Governement Telecommunications Officer,
Department of Telecommunications, Hamilton.

Dear Ted,

I am faxing a transcript of the broadcast put out by K1MAN last week.

When you have read this I would like to have a meeting with you, maybe we could have lunch and discuss it then, to fill you in on what actually happened.

Your support with this would be appreciated. I have been to the American Consulate and will be writing a formal letter of complaint this week, requesting a public apology from K1MAN. He is advocating that I should lose my license for NOT passing third party traffic when the "world needed to know" and he had declared an emergency. He was doing this under the authority of the "FCC" according to him. I reminded him that we were not a State of the United States of America and that we were governed by the Department of Telecommunications and also the British arrangements for third party traffic. He could declare whatever he wanted to but until we had clearance, we would not pass it

No emergency had been declared and as far as we were concerned it was an unofficial net standing by in case we were needed should an emergency be declared. He did not like being informed that we were handling the situation ourselves very efficiently, without his help.

Please telephone me when it is convenient and I will explain more, or as I said, maybe we could have lunch.

Yours sincerely,
Antony Sxxxx VP9--

This is a response to the editorial broadcast by K1MAN after Hurricane Dean.

STATEMENT -
KlMAN stated "IARN activated for Hurricane Dean as it neared Bermuda, Sunday August 6th. 1989 at 11.30 UTC. IARN Headquarters in Belgrade Lakes etc. received a call from Tony Sxxxxx, VP9--, requesting assistance from IARN on 14.275mHz. Tony wants to activate 14 . 275mHz. . .etc. "

FACT - At 11.15 UTC, VP9-- & VP9__ activated the Bermuda net.

A broadcast was in progress and VP9-- decided to telephone KlMAN.

The conversation was "Glen Baxter" and the response was "Tony Sxxxx VP9-- in Bermuda. We want 14.275mHz cleared due to the impending Hurricane"

Response from Glen Baxter, "No problem" and the telephone conversation finished.

FACT - At no time was a request made for IARN to assist or to activate.

FACT - KlMAN checked in to the Bermuda net at 11.45 UTC and he was informed, (as were many others who had checked in) of the current situation in Bermuda.

STATEMENT -
"Associated Press and therefore the entire world, was, de facto, cut off from the world of public information dissemination.......... up to the minute detail report, now assured that ham radio and IARN had a well established and well maintained link to Bermuda"

FACT - Glen Baxter was not on a well maintained link to Bermuda. He checked in and was given information the same as many other hams. The so called emergency was K1MAN generated and not an emergency in Bermuda. The reports of lack of readiness at 20.00 UTC were absolute poppycock. All of this information had been issued by the Bermuda Hams between the hours of 11.15 UTC and 13.00 UTC that Bermuda had been well prepared.

by Glen Baxter ".....festival the previous Thursday which included a soccer match between teams on either end of the Island."

FACT - Again, poppycock. K1MAN had been informed that the Cup Match was a cricket game between St. Georges and Somerset, had been played, the result was a draw and everyone had a good time. The match was on Thursday and Friday when the storm was hundreds of miles away. This Information had been given hours earlier.

FACT - IARU had generated an emergency, no one else. Totally uncalled for "here is the important news we gathered for Associated Press." IARN were more interested in promoting themselves and Glen Baxter in particular and when he found that he was not wanted on the net and did not have control of it he resorted to terminological inexactitudes to achieve his ends.

FACT - Glen Baxter relayed conversations he had with VP9-- to Associated Press without the consent or knowledge of VP9-- at the time. This is in contravention of International Law.

As an American citizen he has no right to assume Governmental authority and issue edicts to hams in other countries. At no time can he advocate publicly that licenses should be revoked and should he have any complaints then these should be directed through the Department of Telecommunications in Bermuda. His pontificating on people's attitudes and his declarations of emergencies allows him to promote himself and his organization in such a way that his approach does sound plausible. As they say you can fool some of the people some of the time but not all of the people all of the time and K1MAN does not fool any Bermuda Ham. His trip to Moscow paid for by the Young Communist League leaves one to suspect his motives and his reporting.

Lloyd,

Personally, I think K1MAN should be removed. Why? Because of the attitude "I am always right." and might makes right. It is such attitudes that brought us Tailgate, the Marine Corps mess (where medals were jammed into bare flesh, amongst other things) and the current situation where the mighty (who served, maybe, perhaps, uh .... well, he did receive at least one paycheck - I think) and their well monied supporters have caused us irreperable damage in the sight of the world with abominable treatment of prisoners.

Argue all you want; I won't. The world will pass judgement. The best thing is the removal of the current administration of this country and removal of K1MAN would do the amateur service a good boost in the right - uh, make that proper - direction.

Perhaps in the past, but the FCC says Baxter is "generally"

Damn that was good Jim Hampton. I really liked the way you wound MAN in with alleged prisoner mis treatment in Iraq, and got it all, including MAN to be blamed on Bush.

You should go write for CNN. I hear they are sinking fast and need another writer from their political commentary (see political comedy) section.

Lloyd,

Regardless, he has not totally cleaned up his act. My best thought would be to eliminate any kind of "broadcasting". The ARRL wouldn't care for that, obviously, but there are going to be more folks that feel if one person (or organization) can, then they can. They can indeed, if they follow the rules. But those with the attitudes that bother me are always 'pushing' the envelope. Either they are given carte blanc, or others start the same thing. In any event, the willful interference bothers me a lot. This has been getting worse over time and if not nipped in the bud, amateur radio might just as well be called amateur cb. Sorry, just my opinion.

While it is certianly possible, it's not a very effective or a constant capability. Use microphones and the internet. It'll work more reliably.

C'mon, Dan, I wasn't blaming MAN for the prisoner mistreatment. I was blaming "attitude", of which I believe MAN has a mindset not unlike some other folks - all of whom I do not trust at all.

Most of the folks in Washington (Democrats as well as Republicans) did not serve. I believe there are only two congresspersons who have sons or daughters serving - and those few serving are officers.

I find it interesting that it is fine to export our jobs to other countries, but OMG to allow seniors to buy prescription medicine from Canada is positivly unamerican and illegal. Money and power talks. Kind of a double standard, don't you think?

I don't like double standards, and I believe that K1MAN is setting himself up as a standard above everyone else. Note how the FCC mentions that no amateur has any more right to a given frequency than any other. Perhaps that escaped you. Go read the note from the FCC again.

This might bring up another interesting topic. The license classes. I'd like to see extra with full access; general with about half of that, and novice with about 1/4 of extra. Then, I'd limit novice to 200 watts, general to 1.5 KW and extra to 200 watts. Yep, and no more even in the other areas (i.e. extras would still be limited to 200 watts in the general or novice portions). Generals would have to reduce to 200 watts in the novice portions. At least half of the bands would be cleaner. Anyone could request a downgrade so they could run that "gallon", along with the reduced frequency access. Anyone caught using excess power would have their license revoked. No second chance and no reapplies for 10 years. Maybe things would clean up a bit. Wishful thinking LOL.

BTW, perhaps you should take a job writing for the Republican party. Maybe you could put a good spin on what has happened. Then again, I think the Catholic Church might need a good spin writer. Go check with them. I'm not into putting spins on anything; the world is going to judge us regardless of the spin-masters and your wishful thinking..

EB-98-NF-438

103 Browning Drive)

Thomasville, NC 27360-3239)
NAL/Acct. No. 915NF0001

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Adopted: March 2, 2000
Released: March 3, 2000

By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:

1. In this Memorandum Opinion and Order, we grant reconsideration of the Forfeiture Order[1] issued in this case for the limited purpose of addressing one issue that Mr. James Farlow has raised in response to both the underlying Notice of Apparent Liability ("NAL") and the Forfeiture Order. The NAL proposed and the Forfeiture Order affirmed imposition of a forfeiture against Mr. Farlow in the amount of $7,000, pursuant to Section 503(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, ("the Act"), 47 U.S.C. ? 503(b), and Section 1.80 of the Commission's Rules, ("the Rules"), 47 C.F.R. ? 1.80, for willful violation of Section 303(n) of the Act, 47 U.S.C. ? 303(n), and Section 95.426 of the Rules (CB Rule 26), 47 C.F.R. ? 95.426. For the reasons stated below, we affirm the $7,000 forfeiture amount.

2. The Bureau's Norfolk, Virginia, office received a complaint that Mr. Farlow's citizen's band ("CB") radio was causing interference to home electronic equipment. The complaint also contained allegations of use of a linear amplifier by Mr. Farlow in violation of the rules governing the CB radio service, 47 C.F.R. ?? 95.401 - 95.428. After receiving another complaint concerning Mr. Farlow's CB radio operation, an agent from the Norfolk Office went to Thomasville, North Carolina, to investigate the complaint.

3. The agent confirmed that the interference was continuing and went to Mr. Farlow's residence to inspect the CB installation. Once at the Farlow residence, the agent noticed a truck in the driveway with a CB radio inside. He then knocked on the door of the Farlow residence and was met by Mr. Farlow. The agent requested permission to inspect the CB radio installation inside the residence but Mr. Farlow refused to allow the inspection. This fact is not in dispute. According to the agent, he then requested permission to inspect the CB installation in the truck but was not allowed to do so. As a consequence of the failed inspection attempts, the staff issued an NAL for $7,000. Mr. Farlow has always maintained that he never refused permission to inspect the truck and that the agent never requested to inspect the CB radio inside the truck.

4. The Forfeiture Order states that Mr. Farlow "does not offer an explanation as to why he denied the agent entry to inspect his truck." We are granting reconsideration to acknowledge that Mr. Farlow did provide such an explanation insofar as he contends that he did not refuse inspection. However, although we are granting partial reconsideration to correct the record, this action does not affect the amount of the forfeiture. There is evidence in the record that there was a CB radio installation in the Farlow residence. Mr. Farlow did not allow the inspection of that installation, in itself a clear violation of Section 303(n) of the Act and Section 95.426 of the Rules. Because the NAL was issued for $7,000, the base amount for one violation, the Forfeiture Order affirming assessment of a forfeiture in that amount was not incorrect. The staff addressed all the remaining issues and properly decided them in the Forfeiture Order. We therefore affirm the staff's decision reached in the Forfeiture Order.

5. Accordingly, pursuant to Section 405 of the Act, 47 U.S.C. ? 405, the petition for reconsideration of the Forfeiture Order in this proceeding is hereby GRANTED to the extent indicated above and is otherwise DENIED.

COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

Rules violations. Seems he has fixed all but 2 such problems. One that needs to be corrected is starting his transmissions on top of existing QSOs.
Even W1AW has to QSY up or down several KHz to find an unused frequency. Hams who wish to listen to K1MAN know how to tune a receiver to find him.

A more serious issue would be pecuniary interests he might be having in his transmissions.

Wacky opinions are still protected by the 1st Amendment.

dc is nice if one is careful. the tube is great and interesting that one can see an approaching train by a series of lights illuminating. its for the folks at galluidet (sp?) university who are hearing impaired.
georgetown has some very good restuarants.
will be in baltimore monday to test some subsea repeaters and will experience the nightlife there.

You should email Road W and fill him in on that scene, since you know a little about it. He's bumming. (email me for his email) lavendar eh? still a dangerous f'ball team this upcoming year.

spent some time in the area working military related projects years back. its a bitch to work that area on ssb due to it being close, 200 miles or so.

Ummm, they are maneuvering here. That "general compliance" means that they are doing an end run around the broadcasting issue and prepping to go after him on the other issues.

He ought to be a tad worried now. The broadcast issue was a sticking point, as there is a thin line between what he is doing and the ARRL reports. That sticking point has been negated.

Yeah, that was quite a jump there, Dan! I think Jim learned that tactic from the neocons. I hear Rush and Anne do it all the time. And remember they are still blaming everything on Billary! Might as well get used to it. The libs have learned.

ROGER THOMAS SCAGGS) EB Docket No. 03-241
) File No. EB-02-IH-0886 Advanced Class Amateur Radio) Operator and Licensee of)
Amateur Radio Station W5EBC

ORDER OF REVOCATION

Adopted: April 22, 2004 Released: April 23, 2004

By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. By this Order of Revocation, acting pursuant to authority delegated to the Enforcement Bureau under section 0.111(a)(16) of the Commission's rules,1 we revoke the above-captioned Amateur license held by Roger Thomas Scaggs. We conclude, based on the evidence of his conviction for murder, that Mr. Scaggs lacks the basic requisite character qualifications to be and remain a Commission licensee.

II. BACKGROUND

2. On November 21, 2003, the Commission, by the Chief, Enforcement Bureau, designated this case for hearing.2 The OSC specified the following issues:

(a) to determine the effect of Roger Thomas Scaggs' felony conviction on his qualifications to be and to remain a Commission licensee; and

(b) to determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the foregoing issue, whether Roger Thomas Scaggs is qualified to be and to remain a Commission licensee and whether his Amateur Radio

Advanced Class License W5EBC be should revoked.

3. The OSC ordered Mr. Scaggs, pursuant to section 1.91(c) of the Commission's rules,3 within thirty days of the date of release of the OSC (i.e., by December 22, 2003), in person or by his attorney, to file a written notice of appearance in order to avail himself of the opportunity to be heard.4 The OSC provided that the notice of appearance state that Mr. Scaggs would appear on the date fixed for the hearing and present evidence on the specified issues.5 The OSC informed Mr. Scaggs that, if he failed to so file a written notice of appearance, his right to a hearing on the matter of his amateur license would be deemed waived, and the proceeding would be resolved thereafter in accordance with section 1.92(c) of the Commission's rules.6

4. The Presiding Judge determined that Mr. Scaggs had received a copy of the OSC but had failed to file a written notice of appearance seeking to avail himself of the opportunity to be heard.7 Accordingly, the Presiding Judge concluded that Mr. Scaggs had waived his right to a hearing, and the Presiding Judge terminated the proceeding and certified the case to the Commission for disposition in accordance with section 1.92(c) of the Commission's rules.8 The Commission has delegated authority to the Enforcement Bureau for such revocation proceedings, terminated on the basis of waiver, pursuant to section 0.111(a)(16) of the Commission's rules.9

III. DISCUSSION

A. Facts

5. Mr. Scaggs has held an amateur license since 1954. The Commission's records do not reveal any violations by him of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (the ``Act''),10 or the Commission's rules. However, on November 16, 1998, approximately six months after the Commission's last renewal of his captioned amateur radio license,11 Mr. Scaggs was convicted for the March 6, 1996, homicide of Penny Scaggs, his wife of thirty-five years.12 The record in that case showed that Mr. Scaggs beat his wife to death with a galvanized lead pipe and then stabbed her several times in their home.13 Mr. Scaggs was convicted of murder by a jury and sentenced by the same jury to a prison term of thirty-two years and fined ten thousand dollars ($10,000.00).14 Mr. Scaggs' conviction was affirmed, and his request for rehearing overruled on June 22, 2000.15 Mr. Scaggs reports that he is pursuing post-conviction relief in the United States District Court.16

B. Discussion

6. Section 312(a)(2) of the Act provides that the Commission may revoke any license ``because of conditions coming to the attention of the Commission which would warrant it in refusing to grant a license or permit on an original application.''17 Among the factors that the Commission considers in determining whether the applicant has the requisite qualifications to operate the station for which authority is sought is the character of the licensee or applicant.18 In making character assessments, the Commission focuses on misconduct that demonstrates the licensee's or applicant's proclivity to deal truthfully with the Commission and to comply with its rules and policies.19 The Commission has consistently applied character standards developed for broadcasters to applicants and licensees in the amateur radio service.20

7. The Commission considers relevant ``evidence of any conviction for misconduct constituting a felony.''21 The Commission believes that ``[b]ecause all felonies are serious crimes, any conviction provides an indication of an applicant's or licensee's propensity to obey the law'' and to conform to provisions of both the Act and the agency's rules and policies.22 In this case, Mr. Scaggs has been convicted of a most serious felony - in this case the brutal murder of his wife of thirty-five years.23 We find that such egregious criminal misconduct justifies a finding that Mr. Scaggs will obey the law only when it suits him.24 Mr. Scaggs' record as an amateur licensee and the assertions of Mr. Shifrin, Mr. Scaggs' sole character witness, who, notably, did not address Mr. Scaggs' criminal conviction or any of the related circumstances, are not sufficient to overcome the impact of Mr. Scaggs' crime.25 Thus, we find that Mr. Scaggs does not possess the character qualifications required by this Commission to be or remain a licensee.

C. License Revocation

8. The Commission's character policies26 provide that any felony conviction is a matter predictive of licensee behavior and is directly relevant to the functioning of the Commission's regulatory mission. The extremely serious conviction described above mandates the conclusion that Mr. Scaggs does not possess the requisite qualifications to be or remain a Commission licensee. Based on the foregoing, we conclude, as a matter of law, that Mr. Scaggs' above-captioned license should be revoked.

IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

9. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED, pursuant to section 312 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended,27 and sections 1.92(d) and 0.111(a)(16) of the Commission's rules,28 that the captioned amateur license held by Roger Thomas Scaggs IS REVOKED, effective the fortieth (40th) day after release of this Order, unless Mr. Scaggs files a petition for reconsideration or application for review within thirty (30) days of the release of this Order, in which case the effective date will be suspended, pending further Order of the Commission.

10. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that copies of this ORDER OF REVOCATION shall be sent by Certified Mail Return Receipt Requested to Roger Thomas Scaggs, RR 2 Box 4400, Gatesville, Texas 76597, with a copy to Charles R. Burton, Esq., Minton, Burton, Foster & Collins, 1100 Guadalupe Street, Austin, Texas 78701.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

Adopted: November 20, 2003 Released: November 21, 2003

By the Chief, Enforcement Bureau:

I. introduction
1. By this Order to Show Cause, and pursuant to Sections 312(a) and (c) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (the "Act"),[1] we commence a hearing proceeding before a Commission administrative law judge to determine whether Roger Thomas Scaggs, the licensee of the above-captioned Amateur Radio Station and Advanced Class Operator license, is qualified to remain a Commission licensee in light of his 1998 felony conviction for murder and whether his authorization should be revoked.

II. background

2. Approximately six months after the Commission granted Mr. Scaggs' subject amateur radio license,[2] on November 16, 1998, he was convicted for the March 6, 1996, murder of Penny Scaggs, his wife of thirty-five years.[3] The record in that case showed that Mr. Scaggs beat to death his wife with a galvanized lead pipe and then stabbed her several times in their home.[4] Mr. Scaggs was convicted and sentenced by the jury to a prison term of thirty-two (32) years, and he was fined Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.00).[5] His conviction was affirmed and his request for rehearing overruled on June 22, 2000.[6]

III. discussion

3. Section 312(a)(2) of the Act provides that the Commission may revoke any license on the basis of "conditions coming to the attention of the Commission which would warrant it in refusing to grant a license or permit on the original application."[7] Among the factors that the Commission considers in its review of applications to determine whether the applicant has the requisite qualifications to operate the station for which authority is sought is the character of the applicant.[8] Before revoking a license, the Commission must serve the licensee with an order to show cause why revocation should not issue and must provide the licensee with an opportunity for hearing.[9]

4. In assessing character qualifications in broadcast licensing matters, the Commission considers, as relevant, "evidence of any conviction for misconduct constituting a felony."[10] The Commission believes that "[b]ecause all felonies are serious crimes, any conviction provides an indication of an applicant's or licensee's propensity to obey the law" and to conform to provisions of both the Act and the agency's rules and policies.[11] The Commission has consistently applied these broadcast character standards to applicants and licensees in the Amateur Radio Service.[12] Thus, very serious felonies raise potential questions regarding an amateur licensee's qualifications.

5. Here, Mr. Scaggs' murder conviction[13] raises very serious questions as to whether he possesses the requisite character qualifications to be and to remain a Commission licensee and whether his captioned license should be revoked. For this reason, we are designating the matter for hearing before a Commission administrative law judge.

IV. ORDERING CLAUSES

6. ACCORDINGLY, IT IS ORDERED that, pursuant to Sections 312(a) and (c) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended,[14] and authority delegated pursuant to Sections 0.111, 0.311, and 1.91(a), of the Commission's rules,[15] Roger Thomas Scaggs is hereby ORDERED TO SHOW CAUSE why his authorization for Amateur Radio Advanced Class License W5EBC SHOULD NOT BE REVOKED. Roger Thomas Scaggs shall appear before an administrative law judge at a time and place to be specified in a subsequent order and provide evidence upon the following issues:

(a) to determine the effect of Roger Thomas Scaggs' felony conviction on his qualifications to be and to remain a Commission licensee; and
(b) to determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the foregoing issue, whether Roger Thomas Scaggs is qualified to be and to remain a Commission licensee and whether his Amateur Radio Advanced Class License W5EBC be should revoked.

7. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 312(c) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, and Section 1.91(c) of the Commission's rules,[16] to avail himself of the opportunity to be heard and the right to present evidence in the hearing in this proceeding, Roger Thomas Scaggs, in person or by his attorney, SHALL FILE with the Commission, within thirty (30) days of the release of this Order to Show Cause, a written appearance stating that he will appear on the date fixed for hearing and present evidence on the issues specified herein.

8. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 1.92(c) of the Commission's rules, if Roger Thomas Scaggs fails to timely file a written appearance within the thirty (30)-day period, or has not filed a petition to accept, for good cause shown, a written appearance beyond the expiration of the thirty (30)-day period, the right to a hearing shall be deemed to be waived.[17] Where a hearing is waived, the presiding administrative law judge shall, at the earliest practicable date, issue an order terminating the hearing proceeding and certifying the case to the Commission.[18]

9. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 312(d) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended,[19] and Section 1.91(d) of the Commission's rules,[20] the burden of proceeding with the introduction of evidence and the burden of proof with respect to both of the issues specified above SHALL BE on the Enforcement Bureau.

10. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, the a copy of this ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE shall be sent, by Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested, to Roger Thomas Scaggs, RR 2 Box 4400, Gatesville, Texas 76597, and to his counsel, Charles R. Burton, Esq., Minton, Burton, Foster & Collins, 1100 Guadalupe Street, Austin, Texas 78701.

11. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, the Secretary of the Commission SHALL CAUSE to have this Order to Show Cause or a summary thereof published in the Federal Register.

THE BPL FIGHT: FCC REFUSES TO EXTEND COMMENT CUTOFF ON BPL

The FCC has issued a ruling denying a request from the ARRL to extend the Commentary cutoff date on the introduction of BPL as outlined in ET Docket 04-37.

The ARRL had asked the Commission to extend the deadline for Comments and Reply Comments by 45 days in the Broadband over Power Line Notice of Proposed Rule Making. The League had argued that this would give it and others the time required for the National Telecommunications and Information Administration to conclude its study at BPL, issue an initial report and give commenters time to evaluate it.

In its April 30th release denying the request the FCC gave no overriding reason for turning it down. Instead the agency said that the now past May 3rd commentary cutoff date stands. It added that those wanting to address the issues raised in the NTIA report can do so during the Reply Comment period. That's open now and ends on June 1st. (ARNewsline(tm))

THE BPL FIGHT: NTIA RELEASES LONG AWAITED REPORT ON BPL

Meantime, as reported last week, the National Telecommunications and Information Administration has issued its long-awaited report on the interference potential of BPL. Amateur Radio Newsline's Mark Abramwicz, NT3V, is here with an in-depth look at the report and the affect it might of on the introduction of BPL technology:

The very title: "NTIA Report Lays Groundwork for Responsible Deployment of Broadband Over Power Lines" doesn't sound encouraging.

But like any package - or the glowing press release that accompanied it - the more than 100-page document contains so much more once you open it.

And, you don't have to go beyond the executive summary that accompanies the report to find the glowing praise by Acting NTIA Administrator Michael Gallagher in the press release is quickly muted. Muted by the facts and some disturbing interference problems the agency's own technical review identified.

CQ Magazine Editor Rich Moseson, W2VU, digested and analyzed the NTIA report and agreed to share his findings with the Amateur Radio Newsline audience.

"It is one of the first really objective looks at the real danger of interference caused by BPL," Moseson says. "As of objective as studies by the ARRL might be, they would be perceived as someone with a certain interest here.

"The NTIA is a federal agency and their engineering study should carry a lot of weight with the FCC."

Moseson says he identified five major conclusions. First, among them, that the methods currently used to measure noise levels and interference potential are not adequate, according to the NTIA. Essentially, he says, there's an underestimation of peak-field strength. And, peak field strength is the leading contributor to high-interference risks.

"As applied in current practice to BPL systems, Part 15 measurement guidelines do not address unique physical and electromagnetic characteristics of BPL-radiated emissions," Moseson says. "That's a quote. That's pretty significant that the Part 15 guidelines do not address the unique physical and electromagnetic characteristics of BPL emissions. So the measurement system being used is not right."

Second, he says the NTIA engineers said noise levels must be measured from power lines carrying BPL as well as the device that couples the signal to the power lines.

"What the NTIA is saying here is that you can be 100 feet down the street from the actual coupling device or up to 300 feet down the street and if the signal bumps into one of these corroded connecters or something, then, it's going to start radiating there," Moseson says. "And you have to measure all along the line as well as at the coupling device."

Third, Moseson says NTIA found interference to weak- or medium-strength signals is likely to affect aircraft operation and the navigational frequencies used by aircraft.

"Interference to aircraft reception of moderate to strong radio signals is likely to occur below 6 kilometers altitude - that's 20,000 feet - within 12 kilometer center of the BPL deployment," says

Moseson, quoting from the report. "Interference would likely occur to aircraft reception of weak to moderate signals within 40 miles of the center of the BPL deployment area."

NTIA's fourth major conclusion, according to Moseson, is that results of BPL tests and implementation in other countries has met with mixed results. And, in some cases, it has been shut down entirely. He cites an example:

"During an emergency exercise of the Austrian Red Cross in May 2003, communication was massively disturbed - that's their words - by BPL with interference levels exceeding the limits by a factor of 10,000," Moseson says.

The fifth NTIA conclusion identified by Moseson is the agency's desire to conduct more testing.

"They proposed some more stringent measurement standards and procedures along with some of the interference mitigation techniques that were mentioned in the FCC's Proposed Rulemaking and others that weren't," Moseson says. "But they're saying here that they're not even sure that those are going to work. They want to do more testing on them and report on it later in the year."

The bottom line: Will the FCC's commissioner take seriously the findings and red flags raised by the NTIA report?

"In this case, I'm not really sure because they seem to have made up their minds going into this as to what they were planning to do," Moseson says. "So, I am not as optimistic as I might be in other rulemaking proceedings."

So, how soon could the FCC act? Moseson says he wouldn't even begin to speculate.

"At this point the comment period is closed. Comments closed on May 3," Moseson says. "There's a two-week reply comment period. And, then it's up to the commission of what they're going to do and when they're going to do it.

"There is no requirement that the FCC issue a ruling in a given amount of time after the close of comments on a proceeding. So, they very well could wait until the NTIA issues its second report. And, I'm sure that it would be accepted into the record as coming from another federal agency."

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, in Philadelphia.

RADIO LAW: LEGALIZING AMBER ALERTS ON THE HAM BANDS

Hams worried that they might get into trouble if they relay lost child or AMBER alerts on the air may soon have regulatory relief. This as wording in an omnibus 71-page, Notice of Proposed Rulemaking on a variety of ham radio issues issued in mid-April tackles the problem had on.

One of the proposals in the April 15th NPRM proposes to and we quote: "clarify that amateur stations may at all times and on all channels … make transmissions … which may be instrumental in saving human life and property." In other words, if enacted as proposed, retransmitting AMBER Alerts and just about any other type of live saving communications would become legal under Federal law.

The proposal is part of FCC WT Docket 04-140. The Comment deadline is June 15th. (CQ)

RESCUE RADIO: YOUNG HAM TRIES TO GET AID FOR DROWNING VICTIM

A tragic story from the Great Smoky Mountains National Park near Townsend, Tennessee. That's where a youngster on a field trip drowned at Cades Cove while a classmate with a hand held 2 meter transceiver tried to get help to save him. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, reports:

It started about an hour after the group arrived at the campsite on Friday, April 30th. According to news reports, a group of people including the ill fated teen took to the water. In a short time, the victum, identified only as Chris found himself in trouble. Others tried to save him while teachers using cell phones tried to call for help.

When it was found that there was no cell phone coverage, another student, Jordan Webb, KI4AVG, said he would try ham radio. Jordan had brought along his two meter hand held radio. He found a near-by high location and called for help over the Knoxville area WB4GBI repeater. He was answered by Jim Bond, K6SPY, who notified Park Rangers. Unfortunately they didn't arrive in time to save the victum, but because KI4AVG had the foresight to bring along his 2 meter talkie, his classmate's body was recovered within hours, instead of days.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, reporting.

Jordan Webb, KI4AVG is only thirteen year old and attends the Vine Middle School in Knoxville. He has been a ham for just about a year and serves as net control for the weekly Young Amateur Radio Net on the Radio Amateur Club of Knoxville W4BBB repeater. (K4PZT, KG4UJC, KG4YTT, WBIR.com)

ENFORCEMENT: NET INTERFERENCE FOUND

Authorities in the United Kingdom were quick to act when a propagation net became the target of a jammer. We have more in this report:

Listeners to the DK0WCY Solar Geomagnetic Information broadcast on 75 meters recently experienced interference from an unmodulated carrier on the channel. The interference, which appeared to be deliberate jamming, was reported by the DK0WCY team to the authorities in Germany who founf that the interference was coming from from the United Kingdom.

With support from the Radio Society of Great Britain's Amateur Radio Observation Service and other U-K hams, authorities traced the interference to an amateur station in the Chepstow area. The interference ceased abruptly at 0608UTC on the 25th of March. No explanation was given but it is assumed that government regulators took the station off the air.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

No word on who the jammer was or what punitive action will be taken by U-K telecommunications authorities. (GB2RS)

ENFORCEMENT: YOU BETTER STAY OFF THE RADIO

Back here in the U-S-A, the FCC says that a former ham who has been to jail for operating without a license is back on the air and still has no FCC authorization to be there. Again, the FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W:

Duckworth: "Richard A. Burton of Harbor City, California, has been sent a Warning Notice of unlicensed radio operation on 2 meters in the Los Angeles area. Mr. Burton has been convicted in 1984, 1990, 1993 and 2000 of unlicensed radio operation under Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934, as ammernded, and has served time."

--

According to Duckworth, the Notice sent to Burton states that additional instances will lead to -- and we quote -- to the same result. The FCC has also designated for hearing a second General Mobile Radio Service application that Burton had filed with the agency. (FCC, RAIN)

ENFORCEMENT: CRANK CALL TO CUBA'S CASTRO LEADS TO $4000 FINE

The FCC says that a Florida radio station should be fined $4000. This, for permitting the hosts of the Morning High Jinks show placed a crank-called to Cuban President Fidel Castro and broadcast the recording.

As previously reported, Joe Ferrero and Enrique Santos of WXJD FM used snippets of an earlier prank call involving Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez get past a Castro receptionist and up the chain of command in a five-minute broadcast June 17th of last year. They then fed pleasantries to Castro before breaking in and calling him an assassin.

On April 28th the FCC concluded that the station should be forced to pay a fine for the broadcast. The agency rejected claims that a rule requiring people to be notified before their voices are used on the air does not apply to people in Cuba.

WXJD was given the usual 30 days to pay the fine or to file a further appeal. (Published reports)

RADIO RECORDS: XL TO UA ON 137 KHZ

Hams in New Zealand and Asiatic Russia have claimed a new world low-frequency distance record. ZM2E at Quartz Hill near Wellington and UA0LE near Vladivostok say that they completed a two-way contact the night of the 20th of March on 137.70kHz. The path length is estimated to be 10,311 kilometers or 6392 miles. (Q-News, GB2RS)

HAMVENTION 2004: THE ARRL PUBLIC RELATIONS FORUM

The ARRL sponsored Public Relations Forum at the 2004 Dayton Hamvention will be held at 8:30 A-M on Sunday morning, May 16th. The venue is Meeting Room 1 at the Hara Arena and those planning it say that this will be a do not miss event for anyone interested in promoting the hobby.

What will be discussed you ask? Well the major items include public service, spectrum protection and of coarse Broadbnd Over Powerline internet access. The session will also explain how to tell the world outside the hobby about Amateur Radio and how to address our concerns to public officials and local media.

Again, that's Sunday, May 16th at 8:30 in the morning for the ARRL Public Relations Fourm at Hamvention 2004. We will see you there. (Dayton Hamvention(r))

HAMVENTION 2004: A NICE PLACE TO LAND

And if you are a private pilot planning to fly your own plane to next weeks Dayton Hamvention, the events planners have a tip for you. Consider landing and tie-down at Greene County Airport in the near-by town of Xenia.

That field is located just south of Route 35 approximately 7 miles east of Dayton and is the closest airport to downtown. Its also among the easiest to get in and out of using small aircraft. Fuel prices are reportedly some of the lowest in the area, and the facility is well kept and capable of handling quite a bit of traffic.

Green County is just one of many airports catering to pilots of small aircraft in the Dayton area. More information about it is on-line at www.gwaohio.co. (Dayton Hamvention(r))

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: SPAM LOWERING LEGIT E-MAIL

Meantime, a recent survey finds that Americans are e-mailing less and trusting e-mail less because of the growing flood of junk messages. According to the Pew Internet and American Life Project, 29% of e-mail users have reduced their overall use of the medium while 63% of e-mail users say they are less trusting of e-mail overall because of spam. That's up from 52 percent in June of 2002. (Technology OnLibe)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: SCIENTIST TO BE NEXT SPACE TOURIST

The next space tourist plans to spend his time on-orbit studying environmental issues. Gregory Olsen, the founder of Sensors Unlimited Inc. in Princeton, New Jersey says that he plans to bring along infrared sensors, which detect varying levels of heat, to analyze pollution in the Earth's atmosphere and the health of agricultural systems on the ground.

Olsen told a recent news conference that he hopes to inspire young people with his mission, and want to arrange a video teleconference with Trenton High School in New Jersey and a school at the Crow Indian Reservation in Montana.

The 58-year-old Olsen has hired Space Adventures to get him to the I-S-S. This is the same company that brokered the first space tourist trip of millionaire Dennis Tito's flight aboard a Russian spacecraft in 2001. Olson's eight-day voyage to Earth orbit is currently scheduled for April of 2005. As with all past space station visitors, Olson is expected to be trained in Amateur Radio and operation of the ham gear aboard the I-S-S as well. (Published reports)

WORLDBEAT: NEW RADIO RULES IN KENYA

Visiting hams now have a way to get on the air from Kenya. Ted Alleyne, 5Z4NU, the Chairman and Secretary of the Amateur Radio Society of Kenya sdays that that the Communications Commission of Kenya announced on April a new and more relaxed policy towards amateur radio licensing.

Until now it was "practically impossible" for most visitors to obtain an amateur radio license in Kenya. The previous stumbling blocks for reciprocal agreements, Security and Police vetting, have been dropped entirely. However, applicants' countries must have diplomatic relations with Kenya and 5Z4NU says that the ARSK will be happy to supply the new license application forms. (GB2RS)

THAT FINAL ITEM: HONORING THE MILITARY

And finally this week, ham radio will be honoring those serving in the military. Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, is here with the details:

Amateur Radio Military Appreciation Day will be held world-wide on Saturday, May 29th from approximately 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Central U-S time. According to Emery McClendon, KB9IBW, this will be a day-long operation to talk to troops, and associated groups around the globe in appreciation of their service and personal sacrifice.

The main operating location will be from Johnny Appleseed Park and Wizards Memorial Stadium in Ft. Wayne, Indiana, using Emery's KB9IBW call sign. That station will be on from about 4 p.m. Central Daylight Time through the end of the Wizards game.

Planners say that they know of at least 25 military bases and club stations that will be operating the event. This includes stations in Iraq, Kuwait, and bases around the globe. More information on this event is in cyberspace at www.fortwaneradioclub.org

Glenn Baxter truly is K-1-MANkind as his associate Mr. Murdock has often said. K1MAN is a kind person who only has the best interest of the hams of the entire world in his heart. His love of ham radio and those in it is truly god like. My admiration for him grows with each passing hour.

My one wish would be for him to bring his leadership to where all the "good buddies" are, because he is so much like them. And that's a big 10-4!

You would be much better off investing money into a good antenna and feedline. The peaking/tuning isn't going to give you noticable difference in performance. Not only that but if not don properly, it can shorten the life of the rig.

I agree with IANG on this one, Steve. Lets make a site called rec-radio-cb.com or something, not someone's personal numbers, even if the person is an asshole. I wouldn't want someone making a domain based on my phone number or drivers license number just because they didn't like me.

I am really bumming about the location. A friend is already at the site, and he said the location is really bad. IIRC, the words he used were "creepy - in a ghetto drive-by shooting kind of way". Why would the US Gummint do that to such a nice group of folks that are just helping them install their ERP systems? Leland seems to forget that the amateur community, of which he is a member, has its share of felons. In most cases he ignores pedophile behavior of some amateurs. In this case he forgets to cite murder.

Anyone ever have a 2970 DX lose amplification out the speaker? Seems to have good audio still when you transmit but no receive audio out internal speaker or external speaker. Microphone has been checked and is ok. I can here it but its like its not being amplified just very low level.

How this happened: I was connecting the radio up to power and my external speaker was grounded and it seems the radio ground through that.

Then on the other hand lets see if SteveoChicken has the nerve to show up at the resident of the Ham you posted the info about and see if he wants to start some crap with him. For all you know somebody did and the joke was on Totally relevant, you made a post, I countered with one of dozens of hams doing far worse things. Shall I post the one about a Ham broadcasting illegally on FM? How about the one that was interfering with Police & Fire Emergency calls?

Hey, we can even give you the one about a Ham trying to be an air traffic controller, how about that one?
If you just want to harrass Mopar, do it! But I still wouldn't want to be in your shoes (harassing a guy of his size, living in an area where you have to answer the door with a gun, etc etc)

That is what I struggle most with on Usenet. It's so easy to be incredibly rude here; but those same folks would never do anything like that in real life. Is this place just a form of target practice to burn off the frustration of a bad week at work? Well, for those of us that do work. Frank need not answer that statement, as I did not mention out of work mop jockeys.

Make me SteveoChicken. You ran you feather covered hide off when Doug pointed a so-called "BB-Gun" in your face. So you're in the habit of running away from toys. Yeah people should worry about you, NOT. You're a looser.
Drink a few more beers and go beat your wife some more. Sooner or later she'll dump your pathetic carcass and end up with the house, the business, and the race cars. How would she like seeing photos of your car, with license plate clearly visible, parked at the local motel? Those trips you make to pick up stuff where you're gone for several hours aren't all business related. 8-))

The only thing you are gonna slap is your meat, your a pussy Funny no one in medina has ever heard of you either. You are pretty good at posting others names and addresses, well how about someone show up at your house for a change, but as usual no nut sack, except on his neck, you will never see him post his address or provide his real name, he just forges and whines like a woman

Hello, Mike

Actually, that jump took since 1967 to form. My parents were Republicans. I was going to be (couldn't vote until you were 21 back then).

I've seen what that kind of thinking can do. When I was in boot camp, someone got on the wrong side of someone. He was taken into the shower and when he came out (do not attempt to tell me otherwise - I was there and saw this kid when he came out of the shower), his lip was split and he had a nasty bruise on his forehead. This was company 43, Great Lakes, in 1967. I mentioned this to someone else and the guy laughed - "that was nothing. The next company over, some guy's shirt was dirty. They stripped him naked and scrubbed him over every inch of his body with a scrub brush!". The discription was actually more graphic than that, but I'm sure you get the idea. That second story I cannot confirm; but it finally got me to thinking. If we treat our own that way, how would we treat prisoners (from whom we wish to obtain information). Over 3 decades later, I have my answer. And a lot of non-thinkers screaming that it is nobody's fault. LOL

The city mayor (a democrat) ran agains the county treasurer (a republican) last year. The republican said "no more taxes, no reduction in service". The democrat stated "anyone who thinks we can continue services and not raise taxes is either not telling the truth or they are kidding themselves."

Of course, the republican won and became county manager. Aid was cut to the city (natch), but OMG - a huge deficit. They are going to borrow more funds. Their credit rating has been cut again (I think this is 5 reductions in credit rating in 6 years). Now the courts have ruled that in New York State, there is underfunding of poor school districts (surprise, surprise - all 8th graders in Mendon - a high income area nearby - got free laptop computers!). None of this has caught me by surprise. It isn't a matter of if; rather, when.

So, go ahead and giggle in your self-rightousness. It isn't going to change what is happening and what will happen. Perhaps we should give away amateur licenses. Get some of those 20 KW class C amps up on 75 and 20 meters and out of 11 meters. Heck, if someone can afford to run a 20 KW rig, they should be entitled to do so, right? :))

You guys are a scream. Pardon me for not laughing.

Funny you should mention that. I was watching Hannity and Colmes the other night, and Hannity was coming up with a rationale for why the perps wre justified in treating those prisoners that way. Thought I'd puke.

Then last night I go to the local Barnes and Noble, and I see he has a book out "Deliver us Fron Evil". That was amusing enough, but then I read a review (plug actually) on Thebookservice.com. One of his "Insights" as they called it was:

"Why it's so difficult for liberals to see clearly on moral questions -- including the moral dimensions of the war on terror."

Sorry, Mike

Guess this thing got my dander up just a tad. The most frustrating thing is that I can see something wrong, but I'm at a loss for an answer. Should a unit come under fire (and I've been combat stations aboard ship), everyone has to follow orders. Period. Lives depend upon it. So, the military wants to weed out folks that aren't suited for military life, and some problems occur. What the proper answer is beats the heck out of me.

Certainly, in civilian life, we should at least be civil - even if we don't agree ;)

I guess that the actions of a few amateurs I would not consider at all "considerate" and I'm not too certain about "civil" either.

Off my soap box (finally - LOL)

The orange maybe the one that goes to the battery. Red for ACC and black for ground. This way when you turn the radio on, it will not automatically go to channel 9, it will stay on the channel you left it on...

Dumbass Vic, W1WCR, was spouting his lies on the Lib Net again tonight.
Dumbass said the United States provided Iraq and Saddam Hussein with the poiseness gas Hussein used on the Kurds. Vic said the gas was used to kill "a few" Kurds and Sheites.
Duh! Apparently Vic views the 5,000 gassing deaths of the Kurds as being "a few".
Where the heck does Vic manufacture these "facts" from?
Oh, wait. For guys like Vic and his malingerers it is not necessary to have facts OR proof. Any lie will do and Vic is surely full of them.
Aside of Al Jazeera, Vic is the best propaganda machine that Saddam could hope for.

These guys are nut cases in the extreme. A bunch of cranks, kooks, and a conglomerate of conspiracy theorists.

I can't seem to get it to work right. It's made by Electronics Unlimited in Lebanon, Tennesse. The capacitors on the primary side of the output transformer were changed at some point and I can't find the right value. If anyone has one of these or a schematic, it would be extremely helpful.

It has a high/low switch. If I put it on low or put in less power, the power meter reading shoots up to 150 or so with a reflected reading of 40 watts, but drops back to 50 watts with modulation. On high with 4 watts in, it seems fairly normal, but not completely. It bounces around 75 watts. Is anyone familiar with this amp? Is it class C? It has an AM/SSB switch. The transistors are 2 MRF455A's. The bases are grounded through the input transformer, which has a center tap to a choke to ground. I see no forward bias. Is this what causes the erratic behavior? Any help with this thing other than toss it in the river would be appreciated.

Chris

Jeebus on a rocket powered sled in the Utah desert!
Do you mean to say that those imbred freaks on the Saturday night Liberty Net are still around....??
I would have thought by now that 80% of those bitchin and moanin fatasses would be six feet under by now.
I can recall listening to them outgass back in the 80's and I can only imagine how pathetic they must ound now 20+ years later...!

Does Vic still have that ANNOYING habit of eating while he is talking? I can recall years ago this bozo saying he was stuffing his face full of apples (like a demented chipmunk) and talking and slobbering all over his mic. I'll bet you dimes to a dozen Krispy-Kreme doughnutz that ole Victor has balooned up to near 300 pounds. Probably looks just like ole fat Junkyard Sid in Estenchia N.Mex. Poetic justice?

Does ole KJI still get on there and drive them up the wall or has he keeled over into cemetary mulch by now also..?

Vic & Baghdad Bob (r they one and the same??) rotflmao!

Does Harrisson from Florida still get on there and monologue and play his stupid tapes? How about that other guy DKJ? He used to get on from W. Va was a former KKK and every other word was "nig--r".

Does the 14313 dentist from NNJ and the nutcase from Central Pa still qrm them for hours at a time?

Jeeze, I gots to listen there next week. I bet half of the guys who used to get on there from the 80's are either dead or so hen-pecked their wives won't let em on anymore. Probably all new lineup of kooks and goofballs.
The Lib Net was always one of ham radio's biggest "kook magnets"...

That Kraco was a great radio; has a 02A chip, worked on many; Don't let the brand fool you. This one was a talker; screaming loud modulation with a power mike.

No schematic. The output impedance of the MRF455 is about 1.5 to 2 ohms, so those caps are going to be fairly large -- somewhere around 500 to 1000 pF depending on the band you want to splatter. I would suggest 680 pF to start, and only change them if the output trimmers won't tune into a dummy load. And they really should be silver-mica caps.

The transistors are indeed biased class C which makes your amp just another cheap CB splatterbox, but that's not responsible for the unusual behavior. It's very possible that you have a bad component somewhere, or that you don't have a power supply that can handle the load. But it may also be your operation of the amp. Each MRF455 can be squeezed for about 80 watts, but remember that rating is peak power, -not- RMS. In other words, a pair of MRF455's will get you 160 watts PEP which is great for SSB, but in AM you -must- reduce your input power so your deadkey does not go above 40 watts RMS (or 1/4 of the rated peak power). Feed it more than that and you start clipping, causing even -more- harmonic distortion & splatter than a 'clean' class C amp.

You're claiming to speak for both leland and dogie, from the comfort of your keyboard. I really doubt they have the nerve to talk to me like you do, but you just change names again so who really gives a fuck?

lelnad and dogie will deal with me. It doesn't matter

Dag Nabbit Timmy you been knowing what these guys are for years. Too bad Riley came along and made everyone behave.

I bet if Riley would leave us alone, Sir Sidney and Kind Jewish Indian would show The Great Liberty Net a thing or two.

Donut matter..the bpl makes your ears fubar'd eventually, so it's every station for themselves.

I'm gonna have to dust off an amp I swore I'd never use again.

Cool. The wife and kids all piled into the Bronco and went out for a kick ass Brunch.
After that, little drive out into the countryside
for a while, then home.
Washed the Bronco and Buell, then relaxed
while the wife and kids were at the in-laws (watched Master & Commander on the Surround sound big screen).
Things are looking good!

I HIGHLY doubt it's even possible. UHF is so far from 11 meters in the radio spectrum that aside from scrounging parts, one cannot simply convert a UHF x-cvr to 11 m or vise-versa.

Irrelevant. This is a CB newsgroup. The "bad apples" of the ham radio fraternity have no bearing on what happens here.

Besides, two wrongs do not make a right. The fact that there are a fair percentage of bad hams, does not diminish the seriousness of illegal CB operation.

The original poster was not asking for information about "peaked and tuned" ham radios.......

Possible? Yes. Dependant on atmospheric conditions.

Practical? No. Those same atmospheric conditions are unpredictable and far from reliable on the CB band.

As someone else suggested, use internet chatting, it's probably just as cheap and far more reliable.

He's probably convinced that it's possible because he knows most CB sets have UHF coax connectors.

It may interest some to know that the "UHF" coax connector does not mean Ultra High Frequency. It actually comes from the US Military (and probably NATO) designation: Universal High Frequency Coaxial Connector. In this sense "Universal" means it is found on "practically all" military HF rigs.

Sure it does, Lee posts stuff about cb'rs getting busted, Jer does, N8 does, WA3MOJ does, so why can all these people put up things about cb'rs, but I can't post this about Hams? A little one-sided don't you think? Naw, never mind.

> Besides, two wrongs do not make a right. The fact that there are a

Agreed, but the fact that this is a CB newsgroup that a couple of certain hams (N8WWM, WA3MOJ) are trolling this group and posting that just to inflame is ok? I think not, anymore than if someone went onto the Ham groups and posted about Hams being busted and then making statements that most hams are illegal, I would think that would make them upset too.

> The original poster was not asking for information about "peaked and

OK, so? This is a CB newsgroup. Not a Ham newsgroup.

References?

This sounds more like a retroactive acronym.

NATO didn't even exist when the UHF connector series was first made.

The UHF connector was designed as a mate for RG-8 coax. It was found on virtually all radios designed to drive RG-8 during that era. Typical examples of WWII vintage non HF radios that used UHF connectors were the ARC-1 (120-150MHz), SCR522(108-150MHz), BC-645 IFF (VHF/UHF) ... much later, the UHF connector was used on the ARC-27(220-400MHz), URR-13/35(220-400MHz), all two way base station radios in the 400-500MHz bands...

I am inclined to go with the "they just didn't know any better" explanation.

Chuck Harris

Of course. Also, the BNC connector was originally devised for military applications during the war because existing connectors would rust badly under field conditions. The improved BNC was called that because the Base Never Corrodes.

The SMA connector is just too small to be able to carry any reasonable power level, which is why it got that designation. SMA stands for Stops MicroAmps.

I'd tell you what the designation on the N connector stands for, but it's obscene.

My 1956 ITT "Reference Data for Radio Engineers" lists

Which was along the lines of my post to this a few moons back. He may have been referring to the UHF Citizen's band - which this conversion may have then be possible from another UHF range. BUT to take it to 26-27 MHz, I don't think so!

You might wanna explain in more detail. Not sure Mr. Davies is familiar with the following terms:
kielbasa
Castro Street
'complete' (in the context to which you referred).

In the interest of travel time, he could possibly achieve the same effect in midtown Atlanta. Or Key West. Or the French Quarter.

He knows his history.

Back in the 80s our big mid-east enemy was Iran, and Iraq was the enemy of Iran and was also at war with them.
(Starting to make sense now? Remember the hostage crisis?) Saddam Hussein was also dealing with his own civil wars and was equally brutal in dealing with his own people.

As distasteful as this sounds, back then the US supplied Iraq with weaponry, intelligence, munitions, export-banned dual-use technologies, and biological products including anthrax. This was all done under "the enemy of our enemy is our friend" philosophy.

Check out this link, it's an easy read. The photo of Reagan Envoy Rumsfeld shaking hands with Hussein is classic.

The residents of a Allentown urge the sheriff to arrest George. Seems he's been propositioning all the teenage boys in town.

The sheriff ditfully arrests the fag and says to him, "ok George, you got 15 minutes to blow this town!"

George says, "I'll need at least two hours."

No. If you really want to shut him up them it wouldn't matter were it was at. It does not have to be at his place. Does it? You are just hiding behind the fact that he prefers to keep his residence out of this. You have determined that you can display your false bravado by challenging him only if it's at his place. Couple things gang.

The original note was likely a Troll. It wasn't a serious request for information. I don't know the 3MOJ story but there's something odd going on, flame-war, troll baiting, etc.

The use of "UHF" might be a typo, where the intent was "HF".

The other possibility is the freebanders have a different terminology from standard radio talk.

VHF and UHF in freebander, bandit CB lingo isn't 100 mhz, 500 mhz, etc. VHF and UHF are band segments just above 27 mHz and below 30 mHz. .

Yes this is a cb NG, Steveo is a troll, BP is a troll road warrior is a troll, randy is a troll, icecold nyc is a troll, scott69 is a trolllandshark is a troll, twisty is a troll, but there are 2 hams waaaa waaaa. The fact remains most cbers are illegal they post thier illegal wares here they post their illegal setups here, go to a ham ng and find where every post is about thier illegal equipment, bet you won't and if you do then you can tell them, if they are illegal and you say something what can they say... it is no different here twisty openly admits to freebanding calling him illegal is not the truth, the truth upset you Mark Beck, here is 2 100% true statments, 1) you were caught posting in a transexual Ng, and 2) I am not wa3moj. Deal with it.

I purchased a used motorhome that has a factory installed CB. It's lousy! Can't transmit or receive more that a half mile. I have tried to tune the SW on the antenna but no matter if I lengthen or shorten it the SW stays pegged at the top of the arc. I installed a new, thru the glass mount antenna, and the same thing happened. I just brought home a new radio and tried it with both antennas, but no luck.

Any suggestions?

sounds like the coax might have a dead short in it
OR the PL-259 connector has a short in it.
See if you can get a mag mount antenna to try.

Hello, Gary

It could be a bad solder joint in the connector. Bend the coax back and forth where it connects to the radio while you transmit and see if the SWR jumps down (and back up). The coax might be bad or the connector(s) may be bad. Check the connection at the antenna as well.

Good luck!

Best regards from Rochester, NY

Steve;

Most motor homes are manufactured using Aluminum so a mag-mount won't work.

Oh yes it does. Sooner or later the chicken is going to have to come home.
Any place else just lets him skip out of what's coming to him. Who ever wants to fight him can go out back in the other building and sit on his precious race car and carve their initials in to the paint job until he decides to show up.

If they're not aluminum, they're fiberglass..

get a "no-ground" antenna, or build yourself a dipole out of Wilson SilverLoads to hang off the mirror, if you have "west coast" style mirrors..

FCC logs of enforcement action which pertains to illegal CB operation is relevant to a CB newsgroup. Logs of similar action against illegal hams is not relevant.

The fact that you view such information as "fucking with CB'ers" is a perception issue.

That's easy. THIS IS A CB NEWSGROUP. Articles which pertain to CB, including the publishing of the eventual consequences for thumbing one's nose at the FCC, are part and parcel of CB operations.

> A little one-sided don't you think? Naw,
>never mind.

Not at all. If you want to go to the ham newsgroup and remind them about their bad apples, it would be perfectly appropriate. Why would you think that enforcement action against hams has a place on a CB newsgroup?

So reminding people of the consequences for illegal operation, is nothing more than "trolling"?

If that is true, then wouldn't the best course of action to take in this case, would be to ignore those who troll? Trolls want attention.
Responding just gives them what they want.

> I think not, anymore than if >someone went onto the Ham groups and posted about Hams being >busted and then making statements that most hams are illegal, I

It's not my problem if the truth upsets you. The simple fact is that most people who operate on CB ARE running illegally to some degree.

Conversely, the percentage of hams who are illegal is much less, but they have higher visibility, simply because the FCC is more serious about enforcement on the ham bands, due largely to the fact that the hams themselves asked for it. Hams, for the most part, want to be rid of troublemakers. Most hams did not go through the trouble to pass the test and earn their privileges, only to have to deal with idiots. When you earn something, you are more likely to want to protect it.

If you want to post ham related enforcement logs on ham newsgroups, then by all means, go for it. At least they'll be on a relevant newsgroup.

>> The original poster was not asking for information about "peaked and

What does ham have to do with it? Operating modified radios on CB is illegal. I know such mundane details like FCC rules are a thorn in the ass of many people's fun, but the point needs to be made.

Well Dave, you know I don't have a problem with you, but Lee doesn't own a cb radio, talk on a cb radio, but does post this stuff just to start a flame war. I bring up the Ham, Because the ones that always post these things are Hams, that don't own a CB or even talk on one, so why are they here?
To gain information on CB?
You really think that posting those things here has some sort of impact? The things Jer does has more of an impact then any of the posts, repost, re-post of reposts of CB'rs getting busted 4+ years ago by the FCC in a cb group.
News Flash, CHP/NHP is doing a 0 tolerance on Highway 80, from the SF Bay Area to the Nevada/Utah Stateline, broadcast on TV/Radio/Newspaper/Internet, did that slow people down?
Some 400+ tickets written during that one day enforcement, CHP said up some 15% from previous year when they did the same thing.

Through glass antennas, on CB, are extreme compromise antennas. Even when they are working perfectly, they are about as effective as a toothpick.

When you tried both antennas, did you use the same cable? If so, I'd think that the cable is likely the problem.

If you have a dummy load, attach it at the end of the cable, then read the SWR from the other end of the cable. If it's not 1-1 then the cable has a problem. If you don't have a dummy load, then about all you can do is read resistance from end to end in the center conductor (should be zero) outer conductor (should also be zero) and from the center to the outer conductor (should be infinite) but that's not a really good test for RF carrying cables.

Physically inspect the cable for any "dents" or pinches, if it has any, then replace it.

I purchased a used motorhome that has a factory installed CB. It's lousy! Can't transmit or receive more that a half mile. I have tried to tune the SW on the antenna but no matter if I lengthen or shorten it the SW stays pegged at the top of the arc. I installed a new, thru the glass mount antenna, and the same thing happened. I just brought home a new radio and tried it with both antennas, but no luck.
Any suggestions?

Yep...buy a no-ground fiberglass marine mount antenna such as Radio Shack sells. Problem solved. I used one for this exact purpose on a camper.

I have installed many antennas on motor homes, they are not much fun, but it can be done.
You need to run a seperate ground from the metal studs of the motorhome to the mounting bracket of the antenna, this will usually take care of the problem.
Make sure you do not attach the ground to the center load of the antenna, as this will short the system out and damage your radio. If there is a CB shop near you, they should be able to help you out.
Take your time to get it done right, then you will have years of good use out of both.
Hope this helps...

So where is your criticism of his constant threats of violence towards various posters on this group? It seems to me that by your silence on the matter that you condone his violence based temper and actions, just like the CO's looking the other way in Iraq. When I see "slime" like you telling SteveoChicken to stick is attitude where the sun don't shine in public I'll change my attitude. But we know you're not going too because you agree with his politics, and any means to achieve them is fine by you, i.e. the end justifies the means. It's logic like yours that has this country in the mess we're in with the prisoner abuse charges in Iraq. So don't waste your time

Do you know that for sure? How much information does anybody really know is true or not on these newsgroups? People are not who they claim in many cases, and how they represent themselves is equally suspect.

> I bring up the Ham,
>Because the ones that always post these things are Hams, that

THAT is a good question. I don't understand why any ham, who is not also interested in some form in CB, would waste their time here.

>To gain information on CB?
> You really think that posting those things here has some >sort of impact?

In the grand scheme of things, probably not. A small fraction of CB operators actually read this newsgroup. But a small group of people do seem to get some sort of satisfaction by raining on other people's (illegal) parade. Many have left the group as a result.

>The things Jer does has more of an impact
>then any of the posts, repost, re-post of reposts of CB'rs >getting busted 4+ years ago by the FCC in a cb group.

Jerry's not the only one. There are a number of hams who routinely monitor the lower end of 10 meters and report trespassers.
Personally, I am way too busy to play radio cop. But I applaud the efforts of those who do.

It's one thing if the kids in the neighborhood want to play in the vacant lot next door. Nobody really minds. But when they go beyond the vacant lot and into the occupied home on the other side, there's bound to be trouble.

So what you are saying, in essence, is that people are well aware of the rules. If they choose to break them they will do so at their own risk. Efforts to enforce the rules are a waste of time, since it will not stem the tide of irresponsible behavior. Is that about right?

When have I EVER done that? YOU are the one who sees fit to paste it in, when it suits you. I deliberately do not bring my ham status into this group as a rule, since it is not relevant. The fact that my call is part of my email address is incidental, not deliberate.

You didn't indicate whether you used the came coax cable when trying both antennas. If so, I'd suspect that the cable connections are faulty. Try again with new cable.

Thru-glass antennas are notoriously poor performers on CB frequencies.
They're just not efficient. What I did on my RV, was to mount a mirror mount antenna on the luggage rack on top of the roof. A 3' fiberglass whip works well, although it will hit low bridges and trees, so I use a shock spring. Most RV's have an aluminum metal roof so the ground plane is excellent. It's just not a steel roof, so you can't use a magnet mount antenna.

Good luck!

Oh? Someone ELSE made your email for you, making it "incidental"

And of course, the inclusion of your call in your email was "unplanned"

Leland has said so a number of times, Doug too. Jerry has said he doesn't care at all about cb, just 10 meters.
If by their own statements they don't care about CB, then

I don't know about you, but as a kid & currently where I live there really isn't any sort of fences, especially in the front yards. so most "kids" play where they want. Now, it's probably going to cause problems in the future when some "kid" hurts himself, but right now no big deal.

No. It is the job of the duly appointed Officer (Sheriff, constable, Highway Patrolman, Trooper) to enforce the laws, not me.
There would be no reason for me to go chasing after a speeder
and pull along side of him and start to berate him on how he was speeding. It would just piss him off and maybe create an even worse situation, road rage.

Most true happiness comes from one's inner life, from the

Admittedly, a good inner life is hard to achieve, especially in these trying times. It takes reflection and contemplation and self-discipline.

No, but it is your responsibility as a citizen to see that those laws are enforced. That is, of course, assuming you want the laws to work in your favor;
i.e, the prosecution of those that violate your rights, safety, property, etc.

The least you can do is set an example (and enjoy the ride a little more) by leaving a few minutes early and driving a little below the speed limit. It may not make a noticable difference, but it's something, and it's certainly more than your 'do-nothing' attitude. Apathy is not a solution. If you are not part of the solution.....

FREE!!

For advanced techs and serious radio hobbyists, we're now offering a FREE copy of our previously published "CB EPROM DATA BOOK" by Martin Pickering. (EPROM = Erasable Programmable Read Only Memory.) We sold it for many years but it's now out of print. This little manual of 60 illustrated pages is an absolute GEM of CB technical knowledge you'll just never find anywhere else. And it's yours for FREE from our Web site.

This book reveals the secrets of advanced channel programming, and picks up where our "CB PLL DATA BOOK" (www.cbcintl.com/pllbook.htm) leaves off. You'll get a thorough background in how these amazing programmable chips can be used to modify many popular CB PLL circuits for expanded frequency coverage. Covers the basic programming techniques, and even includes real PC board artwork for making EPROM circuits. Sample artwork includes EPROM boards for the popular MB8719, PLL02A, ï¿½PD2824, and ï¿½PD858 PLL circuits.

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out!

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

For details on our Galaxy-Ranger Service Manual (2nd Ed.) go to:

They claim that data stored magnetically can remain readable for 10 years or more without rewriting on floppy disks, not to mention the longer life times for hard drives. Looks like Twirt is going to be reminded for a very long time to come. I have to get my library of his past goofs transferred to this laptop so I can use them again for sig lines. They're too funny to give up using. The last one - "swimming in google excrement" is a classic example.

You talk like that to your female employees you'll get sued chicken, if you haven't already. Talk like that to your wife and she gets the divorce attorney, and I'll bet she'll be talking to one soon.

Hi Bert,
This reply is in the best of spirit also. To help answer your question, I must pose a similar question of you and the group.

<LMAO POOR POOR LELAND WHAT A DUMBFUCK>

What do you think Train's

<EXTRA EXTRA READ ALL ABOUT IT LELAND HAS NEW GOD THE MIGHTY TWISTY HAS FALLEN TRAIN IS NOW WORTHY OF YOUR IDOLATRY>

purpose is, and what does it appear he might want to accomplish here on rec.radio.cb? I have provided a number of posts of his where he openly promotes illegal cb and even offers to sell illegal gear. To me, his agenda is obvious and clearly stated, which is to break FCC law, and to promote the breaking of FCC law.
I am simply an alternative voice to that agenda. Since people like Train do not seek any "middle ground", neither do I. I employ the same methodology that those who oppose legal CB use.

<YOU MEAN YOU USE THE SAME BULLSHIT YOU ALWAYS DID>

My purpose and what I want to accomplish is best expressed by Sparky and the Anti-KeyClown movement.

<ON YOUR KNEES LOOKING FOR SAME SEX?>

Perhaps it is easiest to post their FAQ here below.
I will be glad to answer further questions, provided they are serious ones that pertain to this topic.

Sigh. I should have known I'd have to explain it to you in the same manner that I have to use when explaining things to my 4 year old.

I made up my email address. But its inclusion in any headers is not a deliberate act on my part. It's a normal part of internet traffic. I am hardly "flaunting" my ham status. You will not see me signing it in the message body of any message posted on this group.

You need to dig some more. The only thing you're coming up with are Many people have said many things. I take what I read with a grain of salt. A lot of people take advantage of the relative anonymity of the internet to behave in ways that they would never consider face-to-face. Unless you fully understand and are willing to work within that framework, and deal with people accordingly, you may fall victim to trolls.

I was using that as an analogy. The biggest rule to follow if you are going to freeband is to tread lightly and keep a low profile. The more attention you attract, the more likely it will be that you will cross paths with the FCC at some point. Most of the freeband frequencies are vacant (The vacant lot), and if the "kids" want to play there, not too many people will mind, as long as they aren't making too much noise (RFI), or they don't wander onto the neighbor's yard (10 meters).

Do you think that this may be a part of the problem with society these days? If no one is willing to support the laws, and instead place that job fully on the shoulders of LEO, is it any surprise that there are so many people willing to ignore those same laws?

> There would be no reason for me to go chasing after a speeder

Maybe so, but if people routinely did this, there would be a lot less people speeding, and the cops would have an easier job.

Do we, as American citizens, not have a responsibility to stand up for what is right? Do we have a responsibility to instill the need to be more law abiding?

What event(s) took place that made it seem more "cool" to be a law breaking rebel, rather than someone who obeys the rules?

When did social responsibility give way to social indifference?

It's no wonder when serial killers are caught, there will invariably be those interviews with neighbors who can't understand why he was a killer ("He was such a quiet guy"), and how he never gave any outward signs. Maybe if people were more observant, they'd have seen the signs.......

If you're going to go through the trouble it would take to remove the inner roof lining to gain access to the underside of the aluminum skin to mount the magnet, you might as well just drill a hole and mount the antenna directly.

I suppose. I used this trick once, but it was pretty easy to get to the underside, and the owner was adimant about using a mag mount.

They are more forgiving about hitting low obstructions. A mag will fall over, but if I snag my super-gainer, it will peel my roof like a grape.

Agreed, but when you continually announce that you have nothing to do with CB, then you must be taken at you're word. As for saying things face-to-face, you'll be right in most cases.

I think you should support the job that Law enforcement is doing, but that does not mean chasing down speeders and people that do break minor laws.

Any cop will tell you not to confront a law breaker, call them and let them know, that is their job. Throw a ball in front of a speeding car, make him swerve, possibly crash, injure himself or someone other, you will be the law breaker, not the speeder.

Yes, but as for "enforcement" of most laws, that is the responsibility of the Police, not average Joe on the street.

Don't know, again up bringing, but look at it this way, if there were no traffic fines, cities, counties etc etc would be broke.

Can't you do better than that, Twist? You have all the time in the world (or at least until your mommy comes home from work), yet all you can do is post a few contextually isolated quotes? Heck, if I didn't know better I might think that you are busy filling out job applications at the local fast-food establishments, but of course that can't be true since you are allergic to an honest day's work. It's more likely that you are focusing your attentions on a flame war in another group as another one of your other sock-puppets. Hmmmm...., let's see now.... which group might that be? Could it be a Bush-bashing group? Perhaps a fishing group? Or maybe even a hammie group..... LOL!

Right, but it's the responsibility of every citizen to apply the social equivalent of peer pressure to those who refuse to "tow the line". This form of intimidation was widely employed in days long gone, but has largely been abandoned in this age of indifference.

People need to be made aware that "minor laws" are not always as "minor" as they may think. Many people believed that crimes such as cable TV theft of service were "minor" because what was being stolen was not physically tangible. But when the lost revenue for the cable companies were added to the picture, it's not such a "victimless" crime.

Speeding, on the surface, does not seem to be a big deal either. But consider what can happen when there is a traffic mishap. Speed lessens reaction time, and increases the potential for damage and injury.

Most laws were not created to ruin people's fun. They were created to protect society as a collective whole.

That would not be a good idea. But leaving a little "note" on the offender's car every time it happens, including the forwarding of their license number to the cops, might make someone think a little.

As a parent, I have become very conscious of people speeding through residential neighborhoods. I would hate to have my kid or an neighbor's kid fall victim to someone who's ignoring a "nuisance" law.

The police are given the jurisdiction to make arrests and levy fines. But we all share the responsibility to make it known that we will not stand by and allow these things to go on. By doing nothing, you are giving your passive condonation, which further re-enforced the attitude that breaking the law is "ok".

Like in the case of illegal CB use, it may seem that the guys advocating legal operation are grossly outnumbered, but to ignore it, is giving your acceptance of it.

A capitalist solution to a social problem. Turn the problem into a windfall. Maybe if the fines were raised sufficiently, people might be less inclined to take the risk.

Ouch! That's why I use a shock spring and limit the size to a manageable length.

I've used mag-mounts before, but a capacitive ground does not always give you as good a performance as a direct ground, depending on which bands you are operating on. They are, like most antennas, a compromise, designed to accommodate those who's desire to operate a 2-way radio in a mobile is overridden by a stronger desire to not drill holes.

I never understand why people need to drive their amps with so much power. With my amp in an out of box condition, 4 watts will push it to 500 watts carrier (In the high position), with little headroom left for peak modulation (And it sounds fuzzy). Why would anyone need to drive it with another amp?

Your wife doesn't fully trust you right now, and I can't blame her. Nothing like you getting followed around by PI. One day you'll be at work waiting on a customer when you get served with the divorce papers in front of your employees.

Nice job Steveo! You finally got him to admit what we all knew...he is george busch or at least his residence is owned by wa3moj.

Think his dad will get pissed when he gets mail?

It was totally wrong, and extremely disturbing. That having been said, this moron got exactly what he was looking for. No reasonably sane Jew should be in Iraq looking to make a few extra dollars per hour over something he could have been doing home in Cleveland. He put greed over sanity. Any normal Jew would stay here, knowing full well that going to Iraq will end up in the cycle of kidnap/torture/murder. What a fucking idiot. His final days should be a shock to nobody. Would anyone in this group be insane enough to throw a Star of David around their neck and head to Baghdad looking to make an extra $10/hour?

Those extremists have kidnapped anybody who isn't a Muslim like - Japanese, Chinese, American etc. What the news talking-heads don't mention much is the Muslim faith sanctions the killing of non-believers. When you hear the clerics say that Islam in a non-violent religion they're not being entirely truthful.

I find your comments about him being a Jew etc. as being way off base. I don't care if he was making $100 an hour. Sooner or later somebody has to rebuild that country and the extremists are going to continue their campaign of violence to prevent it. They will use any excuse they can find. Somebody has to do the work there and its not a "safe" job right now. Getting paid more money is no different than the iron workers who build skyscrapers, or the guys who work on the power lines while they're hot to restore power after a storm here in the states. Would you walk along an I-beam 50 floors up for $5 an hour, or how about working on local power lines at voltage levels of 13.8 KV?

Here is an idea I will call Steveo an assclown a few times and when he is all worked up we get the US goverment to air drop him into Iraq with a baseball bat and a map to Al Qada headquarters. He can fight as much as he wants and who knows he may take out a few of there leaders. Chances are he will eventualy be surounded and taken out but he will finally be doing something worth while instead of stalking ham radio operators on usenet.

That can be done safely. I do it, and no one has kidnapped me yet, or threatened to cut my head off. I don't understand your point. Yes, it's not the easiest job in the world, nor is it the hardest, but if you follow the rules, it is doable. This guy, on the other hand, was kidnapped for no other reason (as far as I know), than being an American, and the extremeist wanting to make a point to deter others.

To get a ticket, an officer must see the offence happen, just telling him that Jimmie was speeding won't do anything.
Maybe if we all lived in Mayberry RFD something might happen, but not in this day & age.

Good Luck! I've gone to the city and county councils, tried to get the street closed at one end, to prevent all the people from speeding down my street to get over to their street faster, but not a chance. Speed bumps? Yeah right! I don't want to hear the sound of cars "jumping" the speed bumps at all hours of the night & day. So the best they can offer is "selective" enforcement, LOL!! Useless!

Looks like a good company, you would think the pay their employees better though.

George, Please stop changing your screen nics. Do you crave attention so much that you have to change your screen nics some seventeen times in a four day period?
Others may not care, but this constant changing of screen
nics is not necessary.
Again, stop changing your screen address to by pass filters!

While I could care less anymore about what George says, I have gotten tired of seeing his constant posts of no value at all, other than to harass and abuse cb'rs. If he stayed with one screen nic, I wouldn't care, but to change it 17 times in a 4 day period is ridiculous.
Here is an email I sent to abuse@comcast.net , if you find what he posts as offensive, feel free to copy it and send a complaint.
Please remember to include the full post, including headers.

Hello,
I know this sounds like old stuff, but this person insists on changing his screen nic for only one reason, to harass, accuse, make false accusation, use foul & vulgar language and purposely by pass news reader filters. Why else would he change his screen address some 17 times in a three day period.
Would you like you daughter or son reading the stuff this person posts? I think not. I wonder what my local Congressman or Senator would think if he saw these posts forwarded to him?
How about the local media TV/Radio/Newspaper, I wonder what they would think if children in there community could read the vulgar language that this person is constantly posting.
I ask again that you have this person refrain from posting such language. I would hate to have to forward these an many others of exactly the same types to the media, and my local Congressman or Senator.
I guess if all else fails, I could send copies of these posts along with copies of complaints to the board members, regents and corporate trustees, showing them the continued abuse by this person.

It's never too late to reform.

I've readily admitted that I was one of the "bad boys" to some degree, back in my younger and somewhat socially irresponsible days. I was a product of the 60's and 70's, and it took a little time and maturity to finally put things into their proper perspective.

I still enjoy talking about the technical aspects of radio, including things which operationally are illegal on CB, but interesting from an experimenter's standpoint.

And my statement still stands. If you believe in something, you need to fight for it. Otherwise, you have no right to complain when things are not the way you like them.

You'd be surprised at just how many people's habits are influenced by the habits of other, complete strangers. Take a look at some of the ridiculous fashion trends over the years, which have nonetheless become popular, for the most obvious evidence of this peer influence.

Ok, you have the right to disagree. Since you do not agree with my idea of active community involvement in awareness of laws, then what would you suggest that we, as a society, do to stem the rising tide of indifference to laws?

Maybe that needs to change to some degree. You're right of course, and that knowledge just enables lawbreakers. Perhaps if people could be cited without a LEO physically witnessing the offense, the problem would diminish.

Technology offers yet another solution. GPS technology and OBD-II emission control systems can be integrated to the point where all functions of the car can be monitored. If the car travels down a road over the posted speed limit, it sends a little "On-Star" type message to a LEO, and a ticket in then issued. This has the added benefit of enabling the tracking of the car if it were to be stolen. This is similar to the idea of mounting cameras to take pictures of people running red lights.
People will scream "Big Brother". But maybe that's what it takes when you can't trust people to behave on their own.

Hmm.... I'm not sure how I want to proceed here. On the one hand I can lambast you for your duplicitous position with regard to "selective" speeding (It's ok, just don't do it on my street). On the other hand, I might be tempted to say that you give up too easily. Politicians have to answer to the people, usually those who make the most noise.
Record the problem. Present the issue to the town council, their decisions are public record. Make it known that if, at some point in the future, a kid does get killed due to a speeding car, that they can be held as a party to the crime, due to their negligence, and refusal to act to mitigate the situation in the face of irrefutable evidence.

We're not really parting company. I'm not advocating that you play cop. But reporting the issue repeatedly WILL get the attention of the LEO's, and the problem will get some attention. If nobody takes the responsibility to make those reports, the cops will think that all's well in happytown.

If you are truly not who he thinks you are, then why worry if he sends mail? It will end up in the wrong place.

It's a logical conundrum. Advanced thought processes like this go beyond the simple ad-hominem tactics of an intellectual lightweight like Twisty...

I'm sure Frank posted that quote fully aware of the paradoxical nature of it. That Twisty latched on to it as some sore of revelation just makes it all the more humorous.

Have at it George.
This forum used to talk about cb radio, illegal or legal,
but you and I do mean you and Doug have turned it into a forum of insult, accusations, vulgar language on every post made.
You know I don't think anyone would mind if you tried to be civil to people, but you don't, it's like you get some sort of jollies being an ass here.
I truly don't believe anyone can ever take you seriously on this forum, you have been doing this so long, angered
so many people, why would they want to be civil to you?
So if you start doing the same thing fine, but remember, you will have to lead by example, so that means you're little tirades will have to end for any of your complaints to have bearing.

Landshark

PS, please don't change nics again, I will not respond to any direct post you make to me for now. I'll just save them, print them and spend a little time and possibly send them snail mail.

Hey dude,
The history Channel had a show on muscle cars of the 60's and early seventies last night.
Man, was that cool. All the cars with commercials from that era and designers & engineers giving

There's a difference with "community" involvement and State involvement. While I might say something to someone in my town, I will not bother with some guy on the highway, that would never see me again in a million years.

Never happen, due process of the law. We are not deputized by the local government to enforce the law. Also, same issue as with enforcing FCC rules by local law, we would have to go through many hour or training, do you have the time? I don't raising two kids working 9+ hours a day.

Already done, dismissed in the courts. A rental car agency was doing that, issuing speeding tickets to thier customers, the courts ordered them to stop.

Yeah you could, but then this thread will have gone from a civil thread to an abusive thread. I am a little that way, as for around town I don't really speed, out in the coutry side, on the bike, yeah. But again about the worst that can happen there is tha I kill myself. As for on the freeway, Bronco doesn't go over 70MPH, so don't speed there. My other cars on the freeway, I'll admit that I ocassionally go over the speed limit, but nothing dramatic, most cars are still passing me, so the cops go by me and catch the guy that's going 20-30 MPH over the speed limit.

That's correct, petitions, 80% of residents, they still didn't care.
Yes, it usually takes a fatality for locals to install stops signs, speed enforcement etc etc in the state of California.
You usually can not hold a California politician accountably unless they show gross disregard or criminal activity.

Most true happiness comes
from one's inner life, from the disposition of the mind and soul.

Admittedly, a good inner life is hard to achieve, especially in these trying times. It takes reflection and contemplation and self-discipline.

Oh? Someone ELSE made your email for you, making it "incidental" (definition: "Happening or likely to happen in an UNPLANNED conjunction")?

Your 4 year old has been that age for years. Why is that child not aging, Davie? Ah..never mind.

I said never mind, but you have exhibited an uncanny penchant for invoking your child into this newsgroup on many occasion, but such is to be expected from fathers who are separated from their child and only permitted supervised visits. Your pain manifests in the strangest of places, such as this group, but really, it isn't relevant, except to illustrate you couldn't even maintain a successful relationship with the mother of your child, let alone anyone else.

No one mentioned headers, Davie, except you. Let's look at what you said again.

LOL..of course you would say NO to looking at what you said, it presents your idiocy and self-contradictions.

You said:

The back pedal is all yours. To "peddle", is to sell your wares, Davie-son. but since you again ran your mouth and fingers before you had your brain engaged, you made that erroneous statement and are now being force-fed the correction.

>I am hardly "flaunting" my ham status.

No one accused you of doing such. You're way too paranoid.

I did no such thing. I claimed you brought your call sign to this group after you claimed you did not. Anyone with normal cognitive deficits sees that you most certianly did bring your call here. To wit:

Again,,the call is most certainly deliberate and NOT incidental. Sit down and take a rest, as your are quite dizzy from all that spinning you attempt.

>You will not see me signing it in the message

Never claimed such,,,,merely claimed that you indeed brought your call to the group, and you did. Now you're angry once again because I illustrated your goofy lies and you resorted to what you always do when caught in lies,,,,,insults. You're a lowlife, davie-son.

No need to dig. One merely needs to watch your posts full of contradictions and lies.

The point is some types of work, while they can be done safely, do carry a high element of danger that can result in loss of life if one isn't very careful. Most jobs don't. Working in Iraq you're in an active war zone. I doubt that many people would opt to work in an area where active shooting can break out ant any time any where, road side bombings, or kidnappings etc.

That's why he was most likely there. Until something happens he many not have fully realized just how dangerous the environment was. For some people money isn't an issue. They want to do what they can to help rebuild the country, and the money is just a secondary concern. I'm sure that may not be true of many others working there.

The extremists are betting on the idea that if they kill enough Americans we will loose our resolve, pack up, and go home. They're wrong.

Berg's father said he carried a Jewish cloth on his person. I'm with the other poster, I believe his faith played a large part in his execution by the terrorists. Several say Berg looked at his Iraqi detainment and arrest as "fun and an inconvenience" .
Quoted from AP reports today:

-"They thought he was a spy", said Hugo Infante, a Chilean who works for the United Press International News Service and lives at the Fanar Hotel. Infante, 31, said Berg didn't seem particularly alarmed about his arrest and detention in Mosul. "He wasn't mad. It was adventure for him," Infante said, a view echoed by another friend, Andrew Duke, who said Berg shook off his detention. "Basically, his attitude was it was all sort of fun, inconvenient," recalled Duke, 43, of Boulder, Colorado. Duke, who drank beer with Berg the night before he left, said Berg told him he had made a lot of money and was thinking about going sailing in Turkey.-

Clearly, Berg had more nads than brains. He was warned by the FBI AND the US military that wandering around Iraq as he did, alone, was extremely unsafe. Add to this his carrying around a Jewish cloth on his person, and the kid appears to have been of unsound mind, or carrying a death wish.

The comparison was right on. Take the same logic, ignore the rules when you feel like it, and apply it in another context. When people delude themselves in to justifying some illegal actions on their part they can do it for anything. Even now Saddam has been reported as telling his interrogators that he has done nothing wrong. Sounds like some people on this news group when commenting about Part 95.

Brings back memories of a time when you could order a car right out of

SB SPACE ARL ARLS007
ARLS007 Ham radio-carrying rocket hopes to reach space

An amateur rocket team this month will attempt to send a 21-foot-tall rocket carrying a ham radio avionics package into the fringes of space. The launch by the Civilian Space Xploration Team (CSXT) could occur as early as Monday, May 17, from Black Rock Desert in Nevada. A CSXT try to reach space in 2002 ended some three seconds after launch when the rocket's engine exploded. Avionics Team Leader Eric Knight, KB1EHE, says CSXT has since rebounded from that devastating blow with a newer, bigger vehicle.

''We are very pumped,'' the Connecticut amateur told ARRL. ''Our confidence level grows with each launch. All the ingredients are there for success.'' Knight's avionics team includes eight Amateur Radio licensees, most of whom also were involved in the 2002 launch attempt. The entire CSXT team, headed by CSXT founder and Program Director--and former Hollywood stunt man--Ky Michaelson of Minnesota, has 18 members.

In terms of Amateur Radio, the GoFast rocket, named for a corporate sponsor, will transmit telemetry on the 33-cm amateur band and Amateur TV at 2.4 GHz using a high-quality color camera. The avionics also incorporate multiple global positioning system (GPS) units to record the vehicle's precise location and flight path, redundant data acquisition and storage systems, and a variety of data sensors.

Once the rocket goes up, appropriately equipped amateurs may be able to receive signals from the approximately 2 W transmitters onboard, even at some distance from the launch site, Knight says. Specific frequencies have not yet been selected, however. In addition, the team may set up an HF station at the launch site.

Knight says the avionics crew even salvaged a few electronic components for the 2004 launch from the 2002 avionics package, which continued to function flawlessly until the rocket crashed into the desert.

Plans call for the solid-fuel rocket to zip upward from the desert floor and reach a speed of more than 4000 MPH in about 9 seconds. Assuming all goes well, the suborbital vehicle will, on its own momentum, attain an altitude of 100 km or 62 statute miles--high enough to be considered ''space''--linger there for a couple of minutes then arc back to Earth some 26 miles down range. The whole thing will take somewhat less than a half-hour, Knight says. If successful it would mark the first amateur rocket launch into space.

Knight is optimistic that the team has gained valuable knowledge from its past failures. ''We've learned a lot that you can't get from a textbook,'' he said. ''We feel we have a chance to make history.''

SB SPACE ARL ARLS007
ARLS007 Ham radio rocket hopes to launch Twistedhed into space

An amateur rocket team this month will attempt to send a 21-foot-tall rocket carrying the outlaw CBer Twistedhed into the fringes of space.

''We are very pumped,'' amateurs told ARRL. ''Our confidence level grows with each launch. All the ingredients are there for success.''

In terms of Amateur Radio, the GetRidOfHimFast rocket, named for a corporate sponsor, will transmit telemetry on the 33-cm amateur band and Amateur TV at 2.4 GHz using a high-quality color camera to beam Twistedheads reactions to a zero G environment to scientists on the ground.

Plans call for the solid-fuel rocket to zip upward from the desert floor and reach a speed of more than 4000 MPH in about 9 seconds.
Assuming all goes well, Twistedhed will attain an altitude of 100 km or 62 statute miles--high enough to be considered ''space''. If successful it would mark the first NG troll launched into space.

There's more information on the CSXT Web site,

Damn right BadaBing. I don't see why we can't break a few laws without these prudes acting all holy. After all it's us who have to pay the price if we get caught. Unfair laws are meant to be ignored. We're just giving people what they want. Who says it's illegal? Ham cops should keep their noses out of our business. They wouldn't last a second on the street. Enuf said.

It is not nonsense I am trying to make use of resources that are being wasted. Do you know how much gas it takes for Steveo to drive out to Lelands and back every time he has one of his tantrums?? dont know the exact figure because Steve is scared to say his address but it is a lot of gasoline and anger that gets wasted every time Steveo goes out harasing ham operators.

The guy had to be a CIA mole who was set up as bait to bring out Al-Qaida that are in hiding. No way he was there to fix antennae. Jews don't go to Nope. Jews do not go to Iraq. This was CIA bait. Jews know better than to go to that shit hole, even for an extra few dollars. And we are also taught at an early age exactly what Muslims have planned for us.

O ye who believe! Lo! many of the (Jewish) rabbis and the (Christian) monks devour the wealth of mankind wantonly and debar (men) from the way of Allah. They who hoard up gold and silver and spend it not in the way of Allah, unto them give tidings (O Muhammad) of a painful doom. [Koran 9:34]

Then when the sacred months have passed, slay the disbelievers wherever ye find them, and take them (captive), and besiege them, and prepare for them each ambush. [Koran 9:5]

Lo! those who disbelieve, among the people of the Scripture and idolaters, will abide in fire of hell. They are the worst of created beings. [Koran 98:6]

Fight those who believe not in Allah nor the Last Day, nor hold that forbidden which hath been forbidden by Allah and His Messenger, nor acknowledge the religion of Truth, (even if they are) of the People of the Book, until they pay the Jizya with willing submission, and feel themselves subdued. Thanks Jim. There are many Hams that hang out on this group plus I would assume that those who are not maybe are in to scanners etc. Trying to pick up the signals would be a nice challenge and a change of pace.

I know when a local group lauched a high altitude balloon, 98K feet, several years ago, west of Flint Michigain, the 1w signals were heard as far away as New York and other states.

There's not much you can do about society as a whole. You can only make your part of society the best you can. Raise the children with good values and to respect their elders.
I can not see the regress of CB as the eminent downfall
of society.

Yes Technology is available, but it won't be used, at least probably not in our lifetime. As for the rental car agency, they were turning them into the state troopers, the DA then threw the cases out of court.

Speed limit in this state on the highways and freeways is between 55 & 75 MPH.

Again, good luck trying in this state. I'm sure there is some sort of immunity laws that protect the bastards.

Doubtful, look at the how we had to spend billions to get rid of a governor, that took a surplus of billions of dollars and made it a deficit of billions of dollars in only a couple of years.

A single individual cannot make much of a difference. But if every individual joined with other like-minded individuals, pretty soon you develop a force to be reckoned with.

> You
>can only make your part of society the best you can. Raise

A lot of good it does when they are thrust into a world which does not share those well taught values. When your (and mine) kid has to hang out with other kids who think it's cool to be stupid, indifferent, or rebellious (even if they don't fully understand what they're rebelling against), all of that good upbringing goes out the window unless they have a strong support system.

>I can not see the regress of CB as the eminent downfall
>of society.

One is simply a reflection of the other. The gradual, but definite, regression of morality and good character is evident on both CB and in society as a whole. Having been involved with CB radio for the better part of 30+ years, I had a front row seat for the show.

How far this "regression" continues remains to be seen.

Most likely a case of expectation of privacy. A joke. People have the right to privacy so that they can break laws with a reasonable chance of getting away with it.

Actually it does a lot of good. If you taught them right and they can tell the difference between right & wrong, they won't hangout with those "other" kids. As you said, did dumb things when younger and since have learned better, that's what you hope you can instill

Well a lot has to do with location, location, location. Been through a lot of place in the state and mostly the big cities have the agitators. The burbs and small places usually are pretty A-typical type of CB.

SB SPACE ARL ARLS007
ARLS007 Ham radio rocket hopes to launch I Am Not George into space

An amateur rocket team this month will attempt to send a 21-foot-tall rocket carrying the gay activist I Am Not George into the fringes of space.

''We are very pumped,'' amateurs told ARRL. ''Our confidence level grows with each launch. All the ingredients are there for success.''

In terms of Amateur Radio, the phallic shaped rocket, named for a corporate sponsor, will transmit telemetry on the 33-cm
amateur band and Amateur TV at 2.4 GHz using a high-quality color camera to beam I Am George's reactions to a zero G
environment to scientists on the ground.

Plans call for the solid-fuel rocket to zip upward from the desert
floor and reach a speed of more than 4000 MPH in about 9 seconds.
Assuming all goes well, I Am Not George will attain an altitude of 100 km or 62 statute miles--high enough to be considered ''space''. If successful it would mark the first man wearing a pink g-string launched into space.

To adhere to what you an extremist and minority view feels is acceptable...LOL..perhaps you ought move to a country that shares your views, because in the US, such bullshit is just that,,,bullshit. Stalin echoed the same words when he said the masses can not be trusted to act on their own free will without the guidance of his governing hand.

Let me tell you, good judgement is sometimes placed on the back burner when kids struggle to be "popular" and on the "A-list". They may come to their senses when they get in their 20's, but by that time they may have done things that will forever affect them. You either have to remain ever vigilant and provide some moral re-enforcement, or you have to do your best to remove your kids from temptation. Neither one is easy to do in today's world. Sex, drugs and violence are only a click of the remote away. Modern music is laced with all sorts of "wrong" messages. It's hard to compete with the mass media and pop culture.

> As you said, did dumb things when younger >and since have learned better, that's what you hope you can instill

I can only pray that this remains a true statement. But when I was a kid, the intensity and sheer magnitude of abhorrent behaviors was a fraction of what it is now. Getting caught smoking on school grounds was considered a big deal back then (And only in high school).

Yea, it's going to vary depending on location. But I would also offer that the character of the people themselves varies in the same proportion in those areas.

Many laws would not be enacted if we left it up to the people to "let the government" pass them. Would we be paying taxes right now, if we could vote them out? If a strong enough case could be made that these "big brother" steps would significantly reduce accidents, then the benefit to society as a whole would override the individual privacy aspects.

I was just remarking on how absurd it is to extend privacy rights to allow people to facilitate the subversion of laws. You shouldn't be allowed to hide behind the 4th amendment. The 4th amendment is there to protect the innocent from harassments, not to give haven to criminals.

You have got it wrong Dr Death. if you have been reading this NG for a number of months you must have missed the post where steveo gave lelands apartment managers tel number and instructuons for making false complaints about interference.

Oh yeah and you must have missed the posts where steve drove to lelands and dougs house and took pictures and posted them in this NG along with there home addresses.

You also must have missed when steve posted doug's court records in this NG.

So far Steve has kept his identity hidden and is able to escape the kind of harassment he dishes out to others. Talk about cowardice LOL.

I have the original footage and it doesn't say anything. Another thing to consider - remember when USA said that an aircraft black box said one thing, and then the Egyptians reviewed the tape and it turned out this guy was not saying anything that FAA interpreters originally asserted? USA interpreters are typically owned by either the NSA or CIA. And we know they never lie.... :-)

Makes more sense than a Jew going to Iraq wearing his prayer robe and yarmulke, looking to make a few extra dollars. FBI and CIA held him for 2 weeks after the Iraqi Police handed him over. What were they talking to him about? It wasn't the history of the Cleveland Browns.....

Ok, I finally gave in and downloaded the video. I didn't watch it with the intent of checking it's authenticity, but some things were obviously fake:

1. The most obvious is the jaw when the head is being held up. The problem is that the jaw didn't drop. Anyone that has ever seen a freshly dead person with the head held vertically (beheaded or not) knows that the jaw drops due to lack of muscle tone in the jaw muscles, and the mouth is wide open. Even if nobody has seen such things in real life, the history books are full of paintings from the French revolution and other incidents which show what I'm talking about.

2. Also in the video, the skin color dead is the same as alive, which is bogus. Again, anyone that's ever seen a dead person, beheaded or not, knows that the skin would be white as the face-shroud of the guy holding the head, and that's even more true considering the massive blood loss from being decapitated. And why isn't the blood still draining while he's holding it up? Which brings me to the next point.....

3. Where's the blood? The video shows barely a pint of blood spilled on the floor. When you cut through one of the temporal arteries the blood should have been squirting all over the place like a lawn sprinkler. And once the aorta was cut they would have been swimming in the stuff. In the time it took them to perform the beheading the body should have drained most of it's blood.... where did it go?

4. And time is the next problem. What were they using -- a dull butter-knife? All you need is two or three quick strokes with a decent blade to get down to the spine, or hasn't anyone ever field-dressed a deer? Geez, I'll bet even OJ by himself didn't have as much trouble with two people as those five 'terrorists' did with just one!

5. Then there is the poor video quality, the convenient gaps, and the terrible sound-sync. Maybe that was intentional, like they did with that alien autopsy video, thinking that a fake would be determined too easily if it was of higher quality......

I don't believe this video is authentic. I'm not saying the guy isn't dead or that he wasn't beheaded -- I don't know. And I don't know who faked the video. But my first suspicion is that the US faked it so as to take the heat off the prisoner abuse scandal. Maybe it was done by the same folks who "discovered" those additional pages from Bush's military records that didn't exist....?

Frank,

While you bring up some good points, it might be that the terrorists didn't want anything to go wrong as there couldn't be a second take.

One possibility is that they started the video with the prisoner talking.
After one of the many fades, the prisoner was possibly taken out and shot (in the heart). In this way, they would assure the decapitation with no problems in front of the camera later. Depending upon time and location, it might have been a couple of hours before they continued the recording. At this point, he would be dead and not much blood would be left on the floor and little or nothing on the captors. Had rigor mortis started setting in, it might have made the decapitation a bit more difficult and might explain the mouth not dropping open.

Of course, this does not explain the coloring of the face. The quality of the video is, of course, poor at best.

Had our people faked the whole thing, I'd still have a problem with it originally being posted on a terrorist board. Of course, people have been known to hack web sites, but usually, the web site owner(s) will usually take the site down and fix it as soon as it is known. So, I sort of doubt the "conspiracy" theory.

The whole situation over in Iraq is frightening and frustrating to say the least.

That's a possibility.

It's like it was done with a video-phone.

Which is exactly what happened. I just learned (and this is odd) that the US news networks had this video no more than an hour after it's release, and they had it before Al Jeezera (however it's spelled). Apparently AJ checked the original site and didn't find the video. Something is definately something goofy going on here.

> So, I sort of doubt >the "conspiracy" theory.

Well, the story is that Berg entered Iraq on an Israeli passport, got arrested by both the Iraqi police and the US/CIA, and after his release he was under constant surveillance. I noticed that other sites have suggested that Berg was a willing party to the faking of his own decapitation. However, I'll keep an open mind on the subject.

>The whole situation over in Iraq is frightening and frustrating to say the >least.

That's war. And it's much more complicated because of the upcoming election, especially with an incumbant that is struggling with serious integrity issues. We all know the US has a long history of creating misinformation in many forms to manipulate the public. We also know that Islamic extremists prefer to keep their hostages alive since a living hostage is more valuable to them than a snuff flick. Etc, etc, etc. There are just too many warning lights going off for me to believe that this video is genuine.

How does that old proverb go.... "Believe none of what you hear and only half of what you see"?

5236. Another antenna mount question

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb

From: Bobby <bobby.bennett@alaska.net>
Message-ID: <40a566fe$1@news.acsalaska.net>

I recently purchased an 89 Bronco, and I'm looking for a good antenna mounting idea for this beast. I know that I can't put it on the roof of the truck (clearance issues around town). I've thought about a bumper mount, but options are limited due to the placement of the taillights. After looking online for a bit I'm thinking of something like a doorjamb mount at the tailgate... but I'd like to know if anyone else has mounted an antenna on a similar vehicle to learn from their mistakes\experiences. Right now I'm using one of the cheapie magnet mounts on the roof of the truck that forces me to crank the squelch up so high I must be within 50 feet of whomever I'm talking to. Been reading this group just long enough to know that antenna mounts is a subject that gets posted frequently enough. Unfortunately, I'm not the exception.

frank you posted your views of a lot of inconsistencies (perceived or not) which makes a viewer of your posts ask questions.
are you saying there is a conspiracy to muddy the alleged abuses of iraqi detainees by showing a dubious video of an american being beheaded?

You mean you couldn't care less. If you could care less that means you do care some.

Interesting that he knew and shared an e-mail account with the leader of the 9-11 WTC bombings, eh? His throat was cut for being a high risk to al-Qaida; and the CIA sent him over there in an attempt to flush out the al-Qaida members that eventually killed Berg. Father probably new as well. This Bush finger pointing is a smoke screen by the family to add confusion to the truth - which is that his son was a CIA spy / terrorist bait.

Doesn't matter what he was there for, the poor soul is dead and his family is now suffering his loss.

And I am sure Atta's parents suffered when he died taking down the WTC building in a hijacked 737. No way he was a poor soul that was in the wrong place at the wrong time. Jews don't go to Iraq. Period. He had a hidden agenda, and I get the sneaking feeling he got exactly what he deserved. Turns out he shared an e-mail account with the guy who ran the WTC bombings when the two went to college together. And this is not the guy's first trip to Iraq either. Can someone say "al-Qaida spy"?

My opinion is that the video is a fake. I gave my reasons why I think it's fake. I also suggested one possible reason why such a thing would be done, and that scenario seems the most probable. But, like I said in another post, I'll keep an open mind to other possibilities.

The link I used is down. They seem to come and go quickly as the server quotas are exceeded. I suggest you do what I did -- type "Berg video" into google and sift through the results.

OK. I had (some days back when 'it' happened) typed into google his name and couldn't come up with anything.

On topic now. Is a Uniden 2510 a good cb radio? How much does it do....etc. I emailed the guy.

I think he and I have spoke in RRS(recradioshortwave.)

I'm not angry. Dr. Death is not my CB handle, just an old nic I used for years on IRC. If I were younger I would have no problem serving my country in Iraq.

The internet gets constipated when something like that first comes out. I didn't start looking until a couple days after the 'rush'. Keep trying.

>On topic now. Is a Uniden 2510 a good cb radio? How much does it do....etc. I

The term 'good' is relative. If you want a radio that will still work after being tossed, dropped, dunked, run over, wired wrong, and left outside for months exposed to nature's worst, I highly recommend the venerable Johnson Messenger III or 123. If you want mondo power and performance then save your money and get a high-end Kenwood or Yeasu. But if you just want to impress someone on the superbowl then get yourself a kilowatt class-C splatterbox and fart into the mic. The point -- if you have something to say that's worthy of someone's attention, they will hear you regardless of your equipment; if you don't, they will ignore you despite the same.

We did in this state. We got enough signatures to vote the Governor out, that took millions. Then got enough votes to put a different person in as Governor. That took tens of millions of dollars to do, how much are you willing to spend on your agenda?

If you are innocent and being persecuted, you won't think it's an absurd right. It is unfortunate that it can work both ways, but it works the right way a lot more than for the guilty.

They don't. Jews just do not put on a Tallit (Jewish prayer shawl) and a Yarmulke (like Berg did) and head off to a fundamentally Islamic country in the midst of a war-torn anarchy with the intent of making an extra $10/hour fixing antennas. Now CIA moles on the other hand, they go where they are told. You can convince me that someone who is culturally Jewish would go to an Islamic country. Hell, I saved up and went to Egypt for two Grateful Dead shows when I was 17. But someone who is so religious that he wears a Tallit and Yarmulke is Orthodox, whereas I am Reformed. My wife is Orthodox, BTW. And an Orthodox Jew would not go to an Islamic country. His/Her Rabbi (who represents the views and approval of the Congregation) would not approve of it and his/her family would not allow it. Additionally, once you have an Israel (Ben Guiron Airport) stamp on your passport, you cannot even get off the plane in most other Middle Eastern countries. I have know of people being refused exit from the plane in Egypt, Jordan and Kuwait for that (which are rather liberal Islamic countries), and I know for a fact you cannot get off the plane with an Israel stamp in Saudi Arabia, Syria, Lebanon, Yemen, Libya, Oman, Iran, Iraq, Sudan, or Somalia. If you do not believe me - spend time in soc.society.palestine or soc.culture.israel. I understand where you are coming from, Jim - the statement is certainly quite blanket; but it is the truth. Jews do not go to Iraq. Period.

You brought a tear to my eye. Ah, I loved those Hammarlunds. Heck, I had one of those Q-multipliers back when. That really helped a lot.

Thanks for the memories!

Mag mount is the on Wal-Mart sells for about 10 bucks. I wanted to be sure that my old radio still worked. Every time I drive into an area with low clearance, I must get out crawl across the roof of the vehicle and remove the antenna. Before spending a bit more money on a more permanent mount, I would like to lose that particular inconvenience

That is, although I'm at a loss for cable routing. The only way I see to route the cable would be through a window or the door and doorframe (current method used) which pinches. I see that mirror mounts seem to be the most popular, but would a 3' antenna higher up on the vehicle be more effective then say a 5' mounted a bit lower?

It may be, however you've got to admit tha the stupidity of an American Jew, not affiliated with any CPA Corporation or Contractor, going to Iraq

Conspiracy theories exist because conspiracies exist, or have you forgotten about the Watergate mess, the Banana wars, the Iran-Contra scam (there is still more to that story than what has been exposed), the Teapot Dome scandal, etc.?

There should be a flexible wiring duct between the door and the frame, and you can route it through there without any pinching.

Considering that both antennas are chopped and loaded versions of a 9' whip, there probably isn't much difference in performance between them. I would go with the antenna and mount that gets it as high as possible.

American Jews to not put on a Tallit and Yarmulke and head to an Islamic country in the midst of war-induced anarchy. CIA moles and bait do that. And he had been there before. CIA mole - and dressed like he wanted it. Darwin Award candidate for 2004.

Oh, he may have been Jewish alright; but the CIA used him as a tool. He was bait to bring out the scumbag al-Qaida from hiding. But somewhere around the moment of capture, CIA fucked up and the AQ got away with the Jewish bait. It was a covert operation gone bad.

cia: ok berg we are going to put a tracking device on you its a radio transmitter that goes in your ass we will be able to know where you are all the time you will lead us right to the al qada hide out.

berg: you sure it works?

cia: dont worry nothing can go wrong it is tuned for cb channel 6.

berg: here i go cb: haloo auuudio auuuidiooo mr. 137 just got down no doubt about it

cia: darn we lost him too much rf interference

I think it was more of a double spy play. He was already best friends with Atta (they spent enough time together in college to share e-mail addresses and passwords). As you know, Atta was terrorist leader of the 19 during WTC 9-11. Berg had been to Iraq before. Before Gulf War II. So he flips from al-Qaida to CIA. FBI briefs him, and US Military holds him for 13 days. Look - the guy that killed Berg was the head of the al-Qaida in Iraq. He trained Atta. How do you think some Jewish Antenna fixer who doesn't speak Arabic suddenly finds the kingpin? And ends up in a CIA orange jumpsuit? Tell me how this happens to the person that was buddies with Atta in a USA college. Coincidence?!?!? From best friend of 9-11 planner Atta to FBI interrogation to 2 weeks in Iraq to being killed by the head of the al-Qaida and trainer of the 9-11 terrorists. Oh yeah, that was just a random fluke..... And that father gets on a USA TV station and says "al-Qaida killed their best friend". Do you need a link to that from CNN, or have you already read that one?

LOL!

I'm reading chatter about Berg's chair -- it's the same style as the one in the prison abuse pics. Wall color is the same, too. Just a couple more coincidences in an increasingly long list of notable issues. And have you ever seen video of terrorist hostages wearing US government prison jumpsuits? This just gets more and more interesting.....

Since people come and go on here fairly often, I figured I'd post this again...

I am looking for a CB tech in the Ocean County, NJ area. Specifically I need a TRC-458 base CB run through the alignment procedures (I have Sam's Photofacts available) and I need a Paradynamics frequency display hooked up.

If anyone is able to help me locally, please email me. Thanks!

Yes. Hussein forced all the Jews out of Iraq and froze all of their assets (read: stole). I have to leave for the airport in 30 minutes, or I would dig up some links for you. One of my monthly magazines had a really sad article about a whole enclave of Jews that had to flee to France to escape death, and the ones left behind were imprisoned by Saddam and never heard from again.

"Looser"? Ok, let's talk about a "looser". Let's talk about a college dropout that lives in his mommy's home in Texas, has no steady job, very little talent, but a deranged and prolific imagination. Let's talk about a pathological liar that uses 'artistic license' as a crutch for his sociopathic behavior. Let's talk about a usenet troll who spends most of his unemployment check on various internet accounts just so he can maintain his countless sock-puppets (his only friends). Let's talk about an obese shut-in that has learned to thrive on negative attention because it's easier than earning people's respect with honesty and integrity. Let's talk about a disgruntled nobody who has come to the conclusion that the world is filled with sour grapes and blames all his problems on anyone but himself, and especially on those that represent everything that he is not. I drive a 9900 International. I am getting a loud whine in the CB speaker, but not in the radio speakers, even though they share the dual antennas. The whine increases and decreases with the rpms of the motor. After disconnecting the coax from the CB transceiver the whine is gone. Does this mean the coax or antennas are definitely the problem? ... or are they just picking up on a problem with the alternator? The coax will be extremely hard to replace, maybe impossible since this is a company truck. The alternator would probably be easier to repair.

Any help to eliminate or even reduce the whine would be greatly appreciated.

I've heard the cia on the international call freq, 27.555, a few times lately. You'd think they would pick a more private channel, but at least most of us can listen in on the goings on.

The coax run is never easy, even with a magnet mount. Like Frank said you can go down thru the door and out the door boot. It sounds like a reasonable alternative for you.

The longer the antenna, the better.

Speaking of someone that would 'dress up in a jew costume', maybe you should take a closer look at who you are responding to..... Scott A. Gilbert, aka Road Warrior, aka KotM, aka Dog-killer, etc, etc, etc. Even claims to have a Ph.D. from a college that doesn't even offer the degree.

Just thought you should know.

Wow! How can anyone be so dumb as to think that when someone refers to a person in Texas with same name as someone in Maryland that it must be in reference to the same person? I know Twisty is that dumb, but Landshark? Well, ok, I stand corrected.....

What I get to work with makes CB amps look like children's toys.

Then there is another company in the group, of 80 different companies, that makes your hack CB amp maker look humble too. I've visited their facility some time back, impressive.

http://www.comdel.com/

Click on "RF Power Generators" at the bottom of the page. Then look at the bottom of the chart where the frequencies are listed. See the "27.12 MHz" at 100 KW or more. Model "CHX". And that kind of equipment has a 100 percent duty cycle too. So you get to enjoy the noise 24 x 7. If CB doesn't clean up its act the FCC will just let it become a general dumping ground for all kinds of EM emissions over the whole band. You people don't know just how close that is to reality.

swr is ~ 3

I am just learning about CB radios. I know the antennas are using plastic inserts to keep them from being grounded.
I am using Firestik II antennas and have not tried adjusting them yet. I thought I needed to eliminate the whine first.
This International has a fiberglass top making for a bad ground plane, from what I have been reading.

That is about all I know of my situation.

I am using a Cobra 29 NW right out of the box.

Antennas are 4' Firestiks II

swr ~ 3

I used to own both a Jeep & a full-size Chevy Blazer. In both, I used the magnet on the "inside". I peeled just a few inches of carpet back in the tailgate area & just stuck it there in the back corner. Although enclosed in the trucks, it did just fine. I used a power mic for a little added enhancement. Worked like a charm.

Give it a try for a week & see. It's not permanent & it may work for you.

Thanks!

There's no stupid questions, Randy. The first thing to make sure of is your antenna, it's just like any other electrical connection and it has to be right. Good ground and swr and separation from the body metal just for starters.

Some of that noise can be from the electric fuel pump on certain vehicles. Get your swr down to 1.5 or less for starters.

You'll have to process of eliminate for any static after you know your antenna is working properly. They do sell filters for some of that noise, it goes on your hot lead.

Longer is better for antenna's..you can un-screw it without getting out of the truck if you mirror mount it.

Your SWR is high. High SWR isn't responsible for whine, but it is a good indicator of other problems. From what you said in your other post your cab roof is fiberglass, so you don't have any ground plane -at all- for your antenna. But even that isn't responsible for the whine. I suspect that the radio isn't very well grounded. The mounting bracket should be bolted directly to the dash or some other chassis metal, and the negative power lead should be as short as possible (inches) to the same. You can also try a noise filter on your positive power lead, and tap the wire as close to the radio as possible. That should eliminate your whine. It should also get your SWR down below 3.

As for your antenna, you need to find a point on the rig where the antenna can be mounted directly to the chassis. A mirror mount is ok if the bracket and door are well grounded. A 9' whip on the front bumper isn't a bad choice either (don't forget to tie it back a bit so it doesn't flop around). You could also try one of those 'no-ground-plane' antennas but don't expect great results. Ask around the watering holes and see what others have done.

I had this same setup on another truck of the same year and model without any whine. That setup also had a fairly high swr but zero whine.

Are you suggesting that because I have high swr that this is somehow allowing this whine to be picked up by the antennas? .. or maybe causing the whine? What is actually causing the whine?

I'm suggesting perhaps your transmitting off just your coax, with your swr being 3. Start with your antenna problems, then fix the whine.

It's not real popular, but I'm seeing it more and more -- probably due to the

Just on the back bumper, and not too many of those. Seems everyone is so paranoid about resale value these days that they are afraid to drill holes even in the bumper. My Dodge has a 9' whip mounted dead center on the roo-guard right above the winch, but I'm strange that way.

I thought that because the whine went away when I disconnected the coax that the problem was not related to the power supply and one of those noise filters would not be of much use.
My biggest obstacle is that this is a company truck. The CB, radio and TV are all using these antennas thru some kind of combiner. Running new coax would mean drilling holes in the cab. I am not sure how my boss would feel about this. If it were my truck I would rip it all out and start from scratch but I must do the best I can with what I have.
The antennas are mirror mounts. I have been reading about grounding. I thought that two antennas actually were better on the fiberglass vehicles because they could create a ground plane between each other. My antennas use a plastic insert to keep them from being grounded to the mirrors. If I ground them would this short out the transmitter?

I appreciate your feedback Frank, I know that it is difficult to diagnose something from a distance but I am willing to try anything except routing new coax.

You said the noise is not present on your broadcast radio, which tells me that the noise isn't coming from the antenna. If the noise goes away when you disconnect the coax then it must be being picked up by the coax shield. If the coax shield were grounded then the CB would not hear the noise. Since the coax shield is connected to the chassis of the CB, that means the CB isn't grounded (by 'grounded' I mean an RF ground). The radio should be grounded by mounting it directly to the metal chassis and using a very short negative power lead. The noise filter helps prevent noise from any possible ground-loops or other RF feedback paths.

Your boss wants you to deliver the payload in the shortest amount of time with the least amount of hassles. To do your job well, local communication with a good CB is -extremely- helpful, and almost essential for a long-haul driver.

Dual antennas have no practical advantage over a single antenna in a mobile installation. They do not create a ground plane between them, nor do they work as a counterpoise to each other. They do look cool, but if I were you I would just use one and avoid the hassle.

As for the antenna mount, the shield of the coax should be -well- connected to the chassis (ground-plane), and the center conductor to the antenna. The plastic insert is used to keep the two apart. If you disconnect the coax at the radio and check it with an ohmmeter (center conductor to the shield), it should be wide open; i.e, -not- shorted.

> I appreciate your feedback Frank, I know that it is difficult to diagnose >something from a distance but I am willing to try anything except routing

Don't spend -your- time or money -- convince your boss that you need a CB radio, then get him to have his contracted radio shop do a proper installation. That's what most trucking companies do, and I'm suprised your's doesn't.

I've installed a few roof-mounts, but GM seems to be stingy when it comes to steel. If you don't reinforce the roof with some 0.064 or better it goes 'pong' whenever you go above 20 mph.

FREE!!

For advanced techs and serious radio hobbyists, we're now offering a FREE copy of our previously published "CB EPROM DATA BOOK" by Martin Pickering. (EPROM = Erasable Programmable Read Only Memory.) We sold it for many years but it's now out of print. This little manual of 60 illustrated pages is an absolute GEM of CB technical knowledge you'll just never find anywhere else. And it's yours for FREE from our Web site.

This book reveals the secrets of advanced channel programming, and picks up where our "CB PLL DATA BOOK" (www.cbcintl.com/pllbook.htm) leaves off. You'll get a thorough background in how these amazing programmable chips can be used to modify many popular CB PLL circuits for expanded frequency coverage. Covers the basic programming techniques, and even includes real PC board artwork for making EPROM circuits. Sample artwork includes EPROM boards for the popular MB8719, PLL02A, ï¿½PD2824, and ï¿½PD858 PLL circuits.

Best of all, the price is right! Download your FREE copy of "THE CB EPROM DATA BOOK" (948 KB Adobe PDF) at:

www.cbcintl.com/docs/EpromBook.htm

Don't forget to check out all our other CB specialty books, plans, kits, & high-performance accessories at:

The problem with bags of crap like you SteveoChicken is when the bag gets wet it starts to stink reminding everybody of what the contents are. I'll bet you get mistaken for crap all the time when that hole in the bag, called a mouth, opens spilling out the contents on the store's floor.

If his fender is metal, he can put a mount on there. He can also possibly use where the fender bolts up as a mount area.

Just so I am clear about one thing .... In all of these articles that I have been reading, when they talk about grounding the antenna, they are referring to a RF ground (ground plane) and not a physical ground? If for some reason the shield is not grounded would this be my problem?

My boss will not care that this unit has a whine. I am not sure he would care whether it has a CB or not. I had to take the truck down to the shop last week to get the steer tires balanced, I had to pay for everything. He is not a bad guy ... just cheap!

The unit might not be grounded very good. It sits in an upper header console, just strapped in not bolted. I will ground the unit and purchase a noise filter then adjust my antennas.

I tried reading as many articles as I could but they all were saying the same things and some of that I could not understand. I thank you for your time. I will let you know if the problem persist after these changes.

Thanks again

You should spend more time getting out, instead of changing nics to troll my posts and harrass me. he can put a mount in between hi front fender & hood, put an antenna there, if it's metal, if the mounting system for the fender is metal and has a good ground.
You also should get out and talk on the radio more often, instead of harassing cb'rs.

You should be able to remove the plastic inserts where the antennas are mounted. You may also have a problem with the splitter that allows the stereo and TV to use the same antennas. Maybe you can use one antenna for the CB and the other for everything else. As for the whine, I agree with everyone else. Once the antennas are working properly, it may go away.

You could try a trunk mount antenna on the hood. It works for my minivan.

The hood is fiberglass

I grounded the unit to the header and did a little adjusting on the antennas
... swr @ 2.1

whine is still there .. possibly louder .. about to try noise filter from the SHACK

If I remove the plastic inserts from the antenna mount, will that create a direct short when I am transmitting?

I believe the splitter could be the problem also, like I said earlier if this my truck I would rip it all out and start from scratch. I did a little work ... swr @ 2.1. I just transmitted > 9 miles. Whine still there ... might be louder.

I am still wondering what is actually causing the whine i.e. alternator, fuel pump ..... maybe I need to look at the source of the whine rather than the ability to filter it out?

I just bought a new Magnum 257 and when I opened it up, I noticed that that "diode D2" mentioned in the mod (http://www.radiomods.co.nz/albrecht485magnum257mods.html) isn't there. There's a purple wire soldered onto the board where one of the legs of the diode would be. Anyone have any experience with these new versions?

The mounting bracket should be grounded to the truck and attached to the coax sheild. There SHOULD be an insulator between the antenna and the bracket so leave it there.

Close. Whine is RF interference from the engine electrical system (and sometimes other electrical devices like the fuel pump) and occurs on almost all vehicles. The difference is that an engine compartment which is fully enclosed by metal will shield the radio and coax from this noise (the noise can also pass through the electrical system, but that doesn't seem to be your problem). If you have a fiberglass hood, or if your coax passes through the engine compartment, the coax must be grounded at the radio end or it will pick up this noise just like an antenna.

An RF ground is both an electrical ground -and- a physical ground. It is a low-impedance path for RF and is very dependent on the physical properties of the connection. Usually, a good RF ground is any point where electricity can easily take many different directions -- kinda like pissing into a lake. Just about any point on the chassis will be a good RF ground. A single wire to the chassis is a better antenna than an RF ground. For example, if your radio is grounded with a wire longer than just a few inches it will allow RF voltage to develop on the radio chassis, and the radio effectively becomes part of your antenna system. That makes it very suseptible to engine noise and other types of RF interference that may be picked up by the coax shield (which is connected directly to your radio chassis) or passed through the electrical system to your power leads. So by RF grounding the radio (and therefore your coax) you are shunting all that RF interference to ground so the radio doesn't have to deal with it.

Not having a good RF ground at the antenna can screw up your SWR, but that's about all. It's much more important to ground that radio!

If it's a business expense it should be paid for by the business.

The upper header console is a terrible ground if your roof is fiberglass. I would recommend mounting it on the dash or the hump, close to the chassis. That will require rerouting the coax, but at this point that seems unavoidable.

I believe he said that the whine follows the engine RPMs, so it's probably the alternator. Regardless, if you reduce or eliminate the source of the noise you are not fixing the problem, because the radio will still be suseptible to other sources of RFI such as the whine from other vehicles, power lines, industrial equipment, etc. It's as annoying as those pop-ups in your internet browser. Properly grounding your radio works like a good pop-up blocker.

Actually the header is aluminum and part of the cab, not bolted or riveted. After working with it today I feel the alternator is the primary problem. Since I have no ignition and no whine with the key in the ON position (Fuel Pump), the alternator seems to be the culprit. I have been reading about installing a micro_farad capacitor between the alternator and ground in order to steady the voltage thus reducing the whine. I understand the theory but could use some feedback about the practical application.

I feel this might be my least time consuming and least expensive solution.

It's a cheap attempt to get my address, he already knows my name. We know his name too, but he continues to lie about it.

Change the subject, how are the Mariners doing this year? I haven't been looking at the standings..the Tribe is in the middle of a low budget rebuild. But they spent a lot on their farm teams.

Then you might get a fairly good ground right there. Bolt the bracket right to the aluminum and run the black power lead to one of the bracket bolts, cutting the wire as short as possible (no longer than six inches should be fine).

You could try that, too. Find yourself a 'motor run' (NOT a 'motor start') capacitor of around 1 to 5 uF. They usually have tabs for terminals so you can use crimp connectors, and they can be mounted just about anywhere with a cable clamp. Mount it as close as possible to the alternator, or even right on the alternator if possible. Run one wire to the output and the other to ground, again keeping the wires as short as possible. The capacitor is not polarized so it doesn't matter which terminal goes to ground.

But know that some regulators are messed up by putting a cap across the alternator. If you screw up your engine, don't blame me.

The Mariner's suck lately. They just had a big turnover. Lots of talent, lots of new names (as well as getting Ibanez back), but they are having problems pulling it together as a team. Time will tell.

How can some one guarantee such a thing I am open to suggestons, so far this guy moparholic has been able to hide who he really is while harassing two hams at there homes. the big question is how can you guarantee that any address he gives is a real one and not a fake, he has been hiding for a long time I doubt he will come out in the open because he is a geniune chicken. The offer still stands moparholic or whoever you are, I will meet you on your front lawn and you can have the first swing free.

good going Leland. Steve who ever he is his biggest fear is to get forced on to a level playing field with you and doug, he can only play the tough guy when he has your name and address but you dont know his.
Watch him run away and change the subject now rotflmao.

A little. I was there on leave in '84 after we got back from Beirut. I almost married a girl there -- the sister of a Marine buddy. Gorgeous thing she was, a farm-girl right out of high-school. But I remember that was a neat little town.

You remember it when it wasn't filling up with yuppies, up to their brows in credit debt. It's happening up fast now, you might not recognize it anymore.. except the downtown area is still kind of slick.

It's still a great town, don't get me wrong but times are changing out here. Lots of farmers are selling to builders.

Crissy rocks! My cousin used to hang out with her before the Pretenders hit it big. He said she always had her guitar with her and would strike up some tunes right now.

That song does sum it. (it's stuck in my head now)

I don't listen to him either but that tune has been his intro since he got famous, and he's still paying it.

I turned on some Poco to get the Ohio tune out of my head.

I'm ready to hang a few meteorologists right about now..We layed down 800,000 sq ft of weed control today, it was the only day without rain in the forecast.. It's been storming with warnings on the weather radio since I parked the truck.

Weed control needs a good 12-24 hrs to trans-locate thru the target plants to work well. I'll have to re-do them for free
now. Bastards!

Lucky you. It's been dry as a bone here for three or four years. We got about half an inch in the last couple days, but still nothing that will really soak the ground. It's gonna be a nasty fire season!

Bummer, I hate it for the farmers the most, those weather extremes spell gloom and doom for the family farmer. The ground is saturated here, and they're calling for rain all week. I think mother nature is trying to correct the low water levels in Lake Erie, so it's a good cause.

Didn't know, but Randy clarified that too, Thanks.
I thought that maybe the front end was still metal, could mount it on the fender side like you see on a lot of wheelers.

"Looser"? Ok, let's talk about a "looser". Let's talk about a college dropout that lives in his mommy's home in Texas, has no steady job, very little talent, but a deranged and prolific imagination. Let's talk about a pathological liar that uses 'artistic license' as a crutch for his sociopathic behavior. Let's talk about a usenet troll who spends most of his unemployment check on various internet accounts just so he can maintain his countless sock-puppets (his only friends). Let's talk about an obese shut-in that has learned to thrive on negative attention because it's easier than earning people's respect with honesty and integrity. Let's talk about a disgruntled nobody who has come to the conclusion that the world is filled with sour grapes and blames all his problems on anyone but himself, and especially on those that represent everything that he is not. You know who I'm talking about, don't you, Scott?

Subject: Warning Notice--Unlicensed Radio Operation
Case #EB-2004-2549

Dear Sir:

Information before the Commission indicates that your vehicle bearing Georgia license plate C-125217 was the source of radio transmissions on the Ten Meter Amateur Radio Band (28.085 MHz) on March 19, 2004 on Interstate 85N at the Belmont Abbey Exit in North Carolina. Operation on the 10-meter band requires a license from the FCC.

While many truckers use Citizens band radio equipment, please be advised that operation of radio transmitting equipment without a license is a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 301, and will subject the operator to fine or imprisonment, as well as an in rem seizure of any non-certified radio transmitting equipment, in cooperation with the United States Attorney for your jurisdiction. Monetary forfeitures normally range from $7,500 to $10,000.

You are requested to contact me at 717-338-2502 to discuss this matter.

Rocket Carrying Ham Radio Payload Reaches Space!
NEWINGTON, CT, May 17, 2004--An amateur rocket carrying a ham radio avionics package reached the edge of space May 17. Launched from Nevada's Black Rock Desert, the 21-foot Civilian Space Xploration Team (CSXT) GoFast rocket quickly attained the 100 km altitude to make Amateur Radio and amateur rocketry history. Two earlier CSXT attempts to reach space--the last almost two years ago--were unsuccessful. A jubilant Avionics Team Leader Eric Knight, KB1EHE, called the successful launch "a phenomenal experience."

"It just roared off the pad and flew into space," said Knight, who lives in Unionville, Connecticut. "Everything went like clockwork this morning, and it was an awesome experience. We're all kind of on an adrenaline high right now."

The GoFast vehicle--named for one of the project's commercial sponsors--lifted off from the desert floor at approximately 11:20 AM PDT. The CSXT team, plus observers from the Federal Aviation Administration, were up and at the launch site several hours beforehand, however, and Knight said the rocket crew--which includes several radio amateurs--did a "dress rehearsal" prior to the actual countdown and launch.

Knight said several West Coast hams who learned about the rocket launch from ARRL news accounts showed up to assist in locating the vehicle, which was estimated to have returned to Earth some 26 to 30 miles downrange from the launch site. Knight said Monday evening that the rocket had not yet been recovered, but the ham radio telemetry package was continuing to transmit.

"We have a telemetry beacon telling us where it is--that it's alive and waiting to be found," Knight said. The rocket transmitted telemetry on the 33-cm amateur band and color Amateur TV pictures on 2.4 GHz. An HF special event station, K7R (for "rocket") didn't get much airtime, Knight said, "because we've been really focused on the mission."

"Everything came together very well," Knight said. His avionics crew includes eight Amateur Radio licensees, most of whom also were involved in the 2002 launch attempt. Former Hollywood stunt man--Ky Michaelson of Minnesota, directs the 18-person CSXT team.

Still haven't found a job, Twist? Well, when you finally realize that those get-rich-quick schemes don't work and the only way to financial security is through hard work, I'm sure there will be some place that will hire an overweight and obnoxious basement-dweller like yourself.

And what does that predictable non sequitur of yours have to do with you being powerless over cb'ers?

I miss my old cars, I know they weren't strictly speaking mopars, one was a 29 model A and the other a 32 ford coupe. The 29 was pretty much a classic restoration with the exception of the cromed wire spoke wheels. The 32 Coupe however was turned into a street rod, with complete frame off restoration from the ground up, had 440 Interceptor with a 6-pack, 411 rears the interior was all done in red crushed velvet seats, burgandy pile carpeting, the dash was hand worked cherry with chrome trim rings around guages and controls. Exterior was bright yellow with orange and red flames airbrushed, and twin chrome sidepipes. Now thinking about picking up another old Dodge pickup to restore.

Dumbest installation I have ever seen, a guy bought an older S-10 4x4, it needed some body work but not much, he went out and bought a roll bar, had lights mounted on it, and mounted his antennas on it. It looked really sharp, Only one problem, he never got around to actually mounting the roll bars to his truck, one day he took off from a stop light in Toledo trying to act like Mr Bada$$ leaving Franklin Park Mall, his roll bars flew right out of the bed taking the lights and antenna with them.

The FCC also has proposed essentially eliminating its rules prohibiting manufacture or marketing of Amateur Radio Service power amplifiers capable of operating between 24 and 35 MHz. Originally put on the books in 1978 to keep high-powered amateur amplifiers out of the hands of CBers, the rules now "impose unnecessary restrictions on manufacturers of Amateur Radio equipment and are inconsistent with the experimental nature of the Amateur Service," the FCC said in its NPRM. The Commission noted that its Part 95 rules governing the Citizens Radio Service already prohibit use of external power amplifiers with CB equipment, which must be FCC certificated.

The Commission further proposed amending §97.315, "Certification of external RF power amplifiers," and §97.317, "Standards for certification of external RF power amplifiers," of its amateur rules "to clarify and simplify the exceptions in our rules." The FCC also wants to eliminate §97.3(a)(19), which defines an external RF power amplifier kit, "because of the uncertainty created by this rule."

Mr. Steve L. Wingate
168 Lakeside Drive
Corte Madera, CA 94925-1052

RE Warning Notice: Amateur Radio license AE6QD
Case #EB-2004-2548

Dear Mr. Wingate:

Monitoring information before the Commission indicates that you have been deliberately interfering with ongoing communications on 75 meters at various times this month. The interference consists of jamming, making threats to other operators and to law enforcement officers, and broadcasts in which you appear incoherent.

Continued incidents of such interference will subject you to revocation and suspension proceedings, as well as a monetary forfeiture (fine). Fines normally range from $7,500 to $10,000.

We note that you hold a pilot's license. This matter is also being referred to the Federal Aviation Administration.

RE Renewal Application of Amateur Technician Plus License KE4NOK
File No. 0001710976

Dear Mr. Barrett:

The Wireless Telecommunications Bureau has referred the above renewal application, filed on April 16, 2004, to the Enforcement Bureau for review.

That action was based on information coming to the Commission's attention that you have used your station to interfere with various repeater operations in North Carolina on 145.350, 145.450 and 147.120 MHz, have ignored requests of repeater control operators to refrain from using their repeaters, and ignored the Commission Warning letter dated December 24, 2003 regarding use of and interference to the repeaters. Apparently your use of, and interference to, these repeaters continues.

In view of the above, your renewal application will not be routinely granted. The Commission may need additional information from you in order to determine your qualifications to be remain a Commission license, and it may be necessary to designate your application for an evidentiary hearing before an Administrative Law Judge. In such a proceeding you would be required to appear at a hearing in Washington, DC, and would have the burden of proof to show that you were qualified to retain your license. You will be contacted by the Enforcement Bureau shortly.

Subject: Warning Notice--Unlicensed Radio Operation
Case #EB-2004-2549

Dear Sir:

Information before the Commission indicates that your vehicle bearing Georgia license plate C-125217 was the source of radio transmissions on the Ten Meter Amateur Radio Band (28.085 MHz) on March 19, 2004 on Interstate 85N at the Belmont Abbey Exit in North Carolina. Operation on the 10-meter band requires a license from the FCC.

While many truckers use Citizens band radio equipment, please be advised that operation of radio transmitting equipment without a license is a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 301, and will subject the operator to fine or imprisonment, as well as an in rem seizure of any non-certified radio transmitting equipment, in cooperation with the United States Attorney for your jurisdiction. Monetary forfeitures normally range from $7,500 to $10,000.

You are requested to contact me at 717-338-2502 to discuss this matter.

RE: Warning Notice: Amateur Radio license W8YZ
Case #EB-2003-367

Dear Mr. Smith:

Monitoring information before the Commission indicates that you were deliberately interfering with ongoing communications on 3.960 MHz on March 9, 19, 30, and April 7, 15 and 20, 2004. Some incidents of the interference continued when you moved to an adjacent frequency, close enough to cause harmful interference to 3.960 MHz, and apparent did so deliberately. Recordings are available if you wish to review them.

Continued incidents of such interference will subject you to revocation and suspension proceedings, as well as a monetary forfeiture (fine). Fines normally range from $7,500 to $10,000.

Mr. James D. Bell

RE: Amateur Radio license N7IJS
Case Number EB-2004-2518

Dear Mr. Bell:

On February 17, 2004, we wrote you enclosing an opinion from the Ninth Circuit of the United States Court of Appeals, dated September 19, 2002. That opinion upheld the conviction and ten year sentence of a James Dalton Bell for interstate stalking and using the facilities of interstate commerce for interstate stalking, in violation of 18 U.S.C. Sections 2261A and 2261A (2) (B) (i).

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 308(b), gives the Commission the authority to obtain information from applicants and licensees regarding the operation of their station and their qualifications to retain a Commission license. Accordingly, you were requested to respond to the February 17 letter within 20 days indicating whether you were the same James D. Bell as reflected in the Court of Appeals Opinion enclosed. The February 17 letter stated that if you were, the criminal conviction may reflect adversely upon your qualifications to hold an Amateur license and an administrative hearing may be designated to take evidence on that issue.

Finally, our letter stated that if you are the same James D. Bell, you may wish to provide additional information on the convictions, for consideration by the Commission; or you may wish to voluntarily submit your license for cancellation in order to avoid a hearing on the issue. We asked that you indicate your preference in your response.

In your responses dated March 10 and 24, 2004, you disputed our authority to obtain the information requested, and threatened to sue the Commission claiming that our letter was in retaliation for a lawsuit you had filed. In fact, we unaware of any such lawsuit, and any lawsuit you choose to file, and any defendants you choose to name, is a matter entirely up to you.

The information we sought is relevant to your qualifications to retain your Amateur license. You should be aware that in 1990, the Commission revised its character qualifications policy, expanding the types of non-FCC-related misconduct that it would consider as bearing on licensee or applicant character qualifications (Policy Regarding Character Qualifications in Broadcast Licensing, Policy Statement and Order, 5 FCC RCD 3252 (1990) (Character Policy Statement), recon. granted in part, denied in part, 6 FCC Rcd 3448 (1991), further recon. granted, 7 FCC Rcd 6564 (1992). The Commission concluded that "a propensity to comply with the law generally is relevant to the Commission's public interest analysis, and that an applicant's or licensee's willingness to violate other laws, and, in particular, to commit felonies, also bears on our confidence that an applicant or licensee will conform to FCC rules and policies.

The 1990 Character Policy Statement applies to Amateur Radio licensees just as it does to all other FCC licensees (See, e.g., Herbert L. Schoenbohm, Decision, 13 FCC Rcd 15028 (1998), recon. denied, 13 FCC Rcd 23774 (1998), aff'd in part, dismissed in part sub nom. Schoenbohm v. FCC, 204 F.3d 243 (2000), cert. denied, 121 S. Ct. 405 (2000); Leslie D. Brewer, Order to Show Cause, Notice of Order of Suspension, Notice of Opportunity for Hearing, and Notice of Apparent Liability for a Forfeiture, 16 FCC Rcd 5671, licenses revoked, 16 FCC Rcd 12878 (2001).

For your convenience we are enclosing the April 23, 2004, revocation order in the case of Roger Thomas Scaggs, W5EBC. Additionally, we have reviewed your legal analysis outlined in your letters referenced above, and suggest that you may wish to retain counsel to assist you in submitting any future ones.

LOL!!!! yeah right Leland.....

Toy weapons are increasingly being used to commit real crimes, and more children are being killed when a toy gun is mistaken for a real gun, or a real gun for a toy. Consider the following alarming facts about toy guns, crimes, and children/youth being killed:

1. On January 2, 2003, in Brooklyn, New York, police shot and killed a 17-year-old, Allen Newsome, after he pulled a pellet gun on a detective dressed as a delivery man.
2. On October 4, 2002, in Carson, California, a sheriff's deputy shot and wounded a man who had a toy gun that looked real, even though the toy gun had an orange tip, according to a witness.

3. In August 2002, in Brooklyn, New York, a man was fatally shot by a police officer, for wielding something which turned out to be a toy hand gun.

4. In 2002, in New Jersey, 14-year-old twin girls held up and robbed a bank, with an air pellet toy gun.

5. In 2002, in Whitmore Lake, Michigan, Tommy Davis, a 7- year-old boy, faced three counts of felony assault charges for pointing a toy gun at three other youngsters and threatening to shoot them.

6. On May 31, 2001, in Georgia, a man was almost shot by North Augusta Police Officers, for pointing a toy pellet gun at motorists from his car. He was arrested and jailed later.

7. On November 20, 2000, in Charlotte, North Carolina, the Charlotte-Douglas International Airport had to shut down flight operation for two hours, when the scanner spotted a gun which turned out to be a young boy's metal toy gun. More than 100 flights were delayed and many missed their connections for the thanksgiving holidays.

8. On November 6, 2000,in Portland, Oregon, a 3-year old boy shot his 25-year old father, Jonathan Davis Christian, when he mistook his fathers loaded .38-caliber revolver for a toy gun. His father left it on the kitchen table just for a few seconds while he went to go get the key to lock the gun 's trigger.

9. On October 28, 2000, a Los Angeles Police Officer Responding to a loud Halloween costume party at a mansion in Beverly Hills, California, shot and killed 39-year old Anthony Dwain Lee ("Liar, Liar," "ER," and "NYPD Blue"). Lee was inside enjoying the party when he was killed. The officer that shot him thought he had a .357 magnum semi-automatic, when in fact it was a rubber toy gun.

10. On March 31, 2000, in Brooklyn, New York, two teenagers, 19-year old Tysheen Bourne and 17-year old Andre Fields, were fatally shot by two undercover Narcotics detectives while brandishing toy handguns.

11. On November 10, 1999, in Monterey Park, California, a 13-year old boy was shot twice on his upper left arm by an undercover cop, because the boy had a toy gun resembling a real gun.

12. On April 13, 1999, in Hartford, Connecticut, Aquan Salmon, a 14-year old boy was fatally shot to death by a Hartford police officer, in which the police claim the boy was reaching for a weapon. No gun was found, but the police said they found two gun-shaped cigarette lighters.

13. On September 6, 1998, in Fort Myers, Lee County, a 12-year old boy, Ronald L. Harris, was arrested for pointing a toy gun at a man demanding money. He is probably the youngest child who has used a fake gun in a robbery.

14. On August 23, 1998, Michael Jones, a 16-year old boy, was shot 17 times and critically wounded by two police officers in Brooklyn, New York while riding a bicycle because he had a water gun that looked like a 9mm MP5 submachine gun.

15. In August of 1998, an entire terminal of the Los Angeles International Airport was evacuated when a toy gun was mistaken for a real gun. Many flights were affected, and many passengers were delayed.

16. On August 6, 1998, in Pacoima, California, 23-year old Issac Alvarez was killed by his own gun when a 4-year old neighbor picked up the loaded rifle hidden under a bed and shot him in the back of his head. Police said the boy had stated that he thought it was a toy gun. Police said, "Toy rifles are out there, they play with toy rifles all the time. They are just like real guns."

17. On June 1, 1998, in Gardena, California, a 9-year old girl found a loaded handgun mounted underneath a desk in a woman's office. While playing with it, she shot and killed her 6-year old sister when she aimed it at her chest. She said she believed "it was a toy." The two sisters were brought to the business by their mother's boyfriend, who works there.

18. On April 3, 1998 a 3rd grade boy took and displayed an small loaded 70-year old real gun in Queen's Elementary School. The principal delayed notifying the police because he thought it was a toy gun, and did not think it could have created a real disaster.

19. On January 9, 1998, in Troy, Michigan,(suburban of Detroit), police arrested a cross-dressing bank bobber who pointed, what looked like a handgun, at the Bank teller. It turned out that the gun actually was a toy. He is the probable suspect linked to at least a dozen bank heists in the area.

20. On January 8, 1998 in Spokane, Washington, Lisa D., a 23-year old woman, was arrested for robbing five banks for $5,500, with a toy gun.

21. On December 26, 1997, a father and his two sons, ages twelve and fourteen, were shot several times and injured by their neighbor, while the two brothers were playing in their backyard with the paint ball gun that the younger brother had received as a Christmas present the day before.

22. Tragedy, involving toy guns, also occurred November 5, 1997, when an explosion of a machine wrapping popping caps for toy guns and play hand grenades, at the Imperial Toy Factory in Downtown Los Angeles claimed the life of four innocent female workers (Juana Martinez Gonzalez, 33, Maria Valenzuela, 39, Gloria Jaramilo, 26). The explosion also injured about two dozen others and several were hospitalized.

23. Air guns, are considered toys, and have caused injuries and deaths, especially in boys 10 to 14 years old. A study conducted by researchers at the University of Washington School of Medicine, Seattle; University of Cincinnati School of Medicine, Cincinnati; and Children's Mercy Hospital, Kansas City, Mo.(published in "Pediatrics," the Journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics, Oct. 1997)reported that of 101 children hospitalized for air gun injuries, three died, fifteen were blinded permanently, twenty five suffered permanent visual loss, and half of those 101 needed surgery.

24. On June 21, 1997, an entire terminal at Los Angeles International Airport was evacuated, grounding at least 15 flights, when a cigarette lighter shaped like a pistol was mistaken for a real gun.

25. On March 1, 1997, a 6-year old boy's toy gun caused the evacuation of the San Jose International Airport, in California. More than 20 flights were affected.

26. On January 31,1997, Laurie Leitner, a 26-years-old woman, was shot in the chest and killed by a police officer in West Islip, Li, because the police officer thought the gun that Laurie carried was real, but it turned out to be a toy.

27. In December 1995, police almost shot at a 10-year-old boy hiding in the bushes pointing a gun at them. The gun turned out to be a toy.

28. On November 4, 1995, in National City (South of San Diego), Johnny Angel Navarrete, an 18-year boy, was shot in front of his house after an argument with several youths. When he pulled a replica gun (a cigarette lighter) from his waistband that looked like a real gun, another youth pulled out his real gun, and shot him thinking the lighter was genuine. Johnny died two days later.

29. On Memorial Day, May 29, 1995, in Carson Park, California, Freddy Palacio, a 12-year old, was shot twice by a Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deputy who mistook the $2 toy gun for a .22 caliber pistol.

30. On Sunday, April 2, 1995, in the City of Torrance, California, 18-year old Santiago Lopez Garcia, was shot to death by the police because he had a cigarette lighter, which resembled a gun in his hand. (Ironically, this was the same day that we were collecting the toy guns, and educating the children about the danger of toy guns and real guns, in apark, only a few miles away).

31. On April 3, 1995, police almost shot at Robert Alvarez, a 28-year old man, in East L.A. because he had a lighter the shape of a semiautomatic pistol. He was arrested and charged with suspected brandishing of a firearm "on a public thoroughfare."

32. In October of 1994, Nicholas Heyward Jr., a 13-year old boy, and straight-A student of Brooklyn, NY, was shot in the chest and killed by a police officer when he was playing with his toy gun.

33. Jamiel Johnson, a 16-year old boy, was shot and wounded on the same day, and in the same city as above, for the same reason.

34. In Montgomery, Alabama, a 7-year old boy was shot by his own 9-year-old brother while playing with the gun they found in the glove compartment of their dad's car. The boy died, even though this happened in a hospital parking lot.

35. In 1994, toy guns were reportedly used in 329 felonies in New York alone.

36. In 1993, in Las Vegas, Nevada, a 3-year old girl found his father' s loaded gun, a revolver. Thinking it was a toy, she aimed, shot, and killed her pregnant mother who was asleep on the sofa. Th mother died on the way to the hospital.

37. In 1991, a 3-year old boy, in Northern California, was shot and killed by his grandfather while playing, mistakingly using his real gun, instead of his grandson's toy gun.

38. In 1990,according to statistics from the U.S. Bureau Of Justice, between January 1985 and September 1989, police departments nationwide have reported confiscating 31,650 imitation guns, during crime-related incidences.

39. Statistics from U.S. Bureau of Justice also show that in 1987, over 1400 toy guns were used in crimes in New York City alone. This is a Sharp increase(80%) from 4 years earlier.

40. In 1987, Leonard Falcon, a 19-year old boy from Rancho Cucamonga, California, was shot and killed by a San Bernardino County Sheriff's Deputy, while playing with a laser tag gun, which resembled a real gun.

41. In 1987, a 12-year old boy was shot and killed by a police officer in San Francisco. His toy gun was mistaken for real gun.

42. In 1983, a 5-year old boy was shot and killed at his home, by an Orange County Police Officer because he was holding a toy gun.

Well I have learned a tremendous amount about whine in a CB in the last week. I stopped by a shop today to purchase a capacitor that I was going to place on the alternator and the tech said he could fix the problem for twenty dollars. I watched him open the unit, desolder a capacitor and resolder a larger one in its place, he then shorted a couple of connections, probably tweaking the unit. I figure he was doing the same thing I was going to do but he did it inside the unit. I can just barely hear the whine ... well worth twenty dollars.

I want to thank everyone for taking time to help me ... I did learn a lot and I might put it to use when I have more time.

P.S. You all leave poor old George alone. If you would quit fueling the fire the fire would burn itself out. I do not know what started it but it is very detrimental to this group.

if you want to now what started it check out the guy that calls himself steveo bragging about stalking hams at there homes and posting court records, personal info and making threats to people to beat them up. presently he is hiding his identity from his victims nice guy huh. He lit the fire and yes it will burn itself out but probably not

It's really amazing how a lot of amateur radio experimentation is actually going on in the 11 meter CB realm and the rest of the licensed bands consist of expensive computerized transceivers that are did you ever stop to think maybe experimentation is more than how to

He didn't fix the problem, he just covered it up for a fee. It would cost you much less than twenty dollars to mount the radio properly, which would eliminate the whine (as well as other noises that the tech's 'fix' won't fix, as you will soon find out) -and- improve your antenna's SWR.

Better save these posts. You will need them in the future. You should also do a radio check to see if your audio is clipping -- the tech's 'tweak' may have been to bypass your limiter, which will cause your signal to splatter onto other channels.

It's even more amazing how a lot of amateur radio experimentation is actually going on under Part 15 rules (especially the 1750 meter band), and below 9 kHz where the FCC has no control.

Yes , I have already noticed alot of background noise where there was none before.

I have already saved all of these post. When I have more time I will apply what I have learned. You will probably hear from me again :)

Who cares Leland? I know that Cb'rs get busted. So a few Cb'rs get busted out of tens of thousands, it just shows that Hams are just as bad, don't follow the rules any better.
I wonder if the FCC knows about Doug's felony conviction? From what I read, he could have his license revoked. Maybe someone should forward those court papers along with the posts offering a modified cb for sale, throw in a few of his colorful posts for a little icing.
Since you seem to like posting these things, why don't you do your duty and turn Doug in for his crimes? Come on Lee, you are so gung ho to post this drivel here to start flames. Do your Ham duty and turn Doug in for his crimes to his family and the ham community for selling modified cb's.
LOL!!!

Many care. In fact, it is highly indicative of the ratio of hammie vs.
cbers getting popped and disciplined, a fact you like to ignore, since you are one of the bad apples in hammie radio that breaks the law and brings down the collective average of hammies.

More hammies than cbers get popped on a regular basis. One needs weed through the many hammie busts to find the erant cber.

Your err is in your flawed interpretation of "this was gonna work", illustrating you have no clue of the concept of what is to be achieved by such an act.
Your second err, is collectively calling liberals "stupid". Liberals founded this country. The phrase has become misappropriated to an insult and encompass all those who dare oppose GW Bush, a tired and no-longer-effective poor attempt at rhetoric that even the most jaded and staunch conservatives have abandoned. At this point, neo-cons like Oxendine are desperate.

What started it? N8wwm getting his clock cleaned after harassing cbers for discussing various aspects of radio. His butties KC8LDO, N7VCF, WA3MOJ and N3CVJ all ran to defend him and his (felonious) law breaking ways while harassing others. They pushed too hard and sealed their own reputations as law breaking lids and have been angry ever since. They blame everyone else for their self-created misery and take no responsibility for their own actions. Hence their tired acts of trying to get off-topic personal information on those they are unable to debate intelligently. When the tables are turned, they begin to menstruate all over this group. They have always been able to dish it out but must be forced to swallow their own bitter prescription of what entertains their double-digit feebled minds.

What's more amazing is you are one of the lone holdouts that feel the FCC has control over eleven meter.

A person operating on a ham band without a license is what the FCC calls an 'unlicensed amateur', not an 'illegal CBer'. Violations within the Citizen's Band are, for the most part, ignored by the FCC.
Officially, the FCC tries very hard to avoid the fact that 10 meter incursions are mostly overflow from the anarchy which they allow to continue in and around 11 meters. Instead, the FCC relies on hams like you and Oxendine to unofficially pass reports of these incursions to the CBers. Because if the Commission did it themselves they would be admitting their own failure, and would then be forced to do their jobs. And do you know why the FCC doesn't want to do their jobs and enforce the CB? Because it is 'unprofitable' -- the legal process costs more than the fines will return.

You are wrong again, Twist -- I have been one of the biggest critics of the FCC for them -losing- control of the Citizen's Band. Go swim through google juice once again and see my posts on the subject. Also, how about digging up the URL for that military group?

yeah HTML on usenet sucks, and I don't much care for it in email either, I had some email from EMA and FEMA officials that I couldn't read because of the HTML, the background they used, and the color of the text, made it darn near impossible to read, so when I relied I sent the same type reply, then sent a second reply w/o HTML with a sub heading "much easier to read this way huh". Since then they have always sent me email in plain text format.

No idea, but you see alot of these fools around here, I saw a guy here in Napoleon who took a mint condition 70 Corvette, and turned it into a jacked up 4x4, modified the frame all to hell ect. This thing is literally so far off the ground he has a rope ladder rolled up inside the door, when he opens the door, he pulls the release, the rope ladder unrolls and he climbs up. He even painted it some god awful orange color. I'll try to take a picture of it next time he has it parked up at Family Video.

I modified a 67 mustang, it had belonged to a friend of mine, but she rolled it and it was totaled. If you ever get over to the "Muddy River Run" in Ft Wayne Indianna, chances are you'll see my 32 coupe, I sold it to a friend of mine, so I get visitation rights heheh, same with my 91 Soft-Tail that I sold to my cousin after my head on collision in 91 that laid me up for 2.5 years. Now I am thinking about buying a friends Low Rider.

Specifically they were truckers. If you investigate further you will discover that in the union contracts the drivers are allowed to use CB radios only. No export radios, no modified CBs etc. That was mention specifically when UPS drivers were caught. Not only are the drivers at risk from being fired the companies they work for face stiff fines for allowing the violations to occur. The companies are responsible for making sure their employees don't violate the law. If I had a driver that cost me $7,500 to $10,000 in fines I'd fire them. There are plenty of hungry unemployed truck drivers out there who are more than willing to follow the law.

> it just shows that Hams are just as bad, don't follow the rules any

The point for a long time big by mouthed CBer have claimed that incurions in to the Ham 10m band was a minor deal and the FCC wasn't going to do anything about it. Both claims are wrong. Having a few Hams contacted by the FCC for Part 97 violations does not change the fact that there are millions of CBers, there are only 650K to 750K Hams, operating illegally.

I'll bet they won't do a thing. In fact somebody mostly alread has and nothing has happed.

> Since you seem to like posting these things, why don't you do

I don't turn in CBers either, I just like posting the news, so fair is fair.

> Come on Lee, you are > so gung ho to post this drivel here to start flames.

It takes two. If you just ignored it then there wouldn't be a problem. But you can't leave it alone. You're attracted to it like a moth to a bug zapper.

> Do your Ham duty
> and turn Doug in for his crimes to his family and the ham community > for selling modified cb's.

Hams can sell all the modified equipment we want per Part 97, go look it up.

> LOL!!!

Yeah, lot of laughs on this side because your trying to argue a point while being totally ignorant of the rules. It would be different if you knew what you were talking about. But that's been the case with most of the illegal CBers on this group, big mouth and no facts.

HAMVENTION COVERAGE

The 2004 Dayton Hamvention is about to open its doors. One of this year's Hamvention themes is going back to the future. Our producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, flew in a few days early to find out what it really means for those who will be attending the show.

Bill, Mark Abramowicz NT3V and yours truly will all be at Hamvention to bring you all the highlights on next week's Amateur Radio Newsline report. (ARNewsline(tm))

THE BPL FIGHT: B-P-L EXPECTED TO DRAW ATTENTION AT DAYTON

While the latest in ham gear is certain to be grab the interest of most of those attending this year's Dayton Hamvention, the topic of Broadband Over Power
Lines internet access is likely to be on the lips of many. Amateur Radio
Newsline's Mark Abramowicz, NT3V has more...

--
While not much has happened in the past week on the B-P-L issue, look for lots of discussion on the Dayton Hamvention floor. You can expect to see

American
Radio Relay League President Jim Haynie W-5-J-B-P in the middle of it.

We told you here on Amateur Radio Newsline two weeks ago of Haynie's call to arms and his direct appeal to President Bush to abandon support for B-P-L technology.

Haynie is convinced Bush has been misled by his advisors. He and A-R-R-L's Washington corps have asked for a meeting with the president. There's nothing new to report on that front.

But Haynie says it's important for the ham community to continue to make its voice heard by writing to the White House, your congressman and your senator about B-P-L. Even though the Federal Communications Commission turned down the A-R-R-L's request to extend the May 3 deadline for comments on B-P-L, Haynie says there are still ways to be heard.

The A-R-R-L's website (www.arrl.org) has helpful tips on writing that letter or email or picking up the phone and calling your representative in Washington.

Meanwhile, the FCC is now studying the National Telecommunications and Information Agency report on B-P-L. And while the glowing press release put out by N-T-I-A touted the possibilities of B-P-L, the technical data in the report presents another picture.

And that picture is anything but fuzzy. N-T-I-A cites major interference concerns and suggests the methods used to measure B-P-L interference are inadequate.

It also cites worries B-P-L signals could affect aircraft operations and suggests more stringent measurement standards and interference mitigation techniques need to be explored.

Could that B-P-L fast-track train be slowing? No one is willing to speculate on that, especially since President Bush and F-C-C Chairman Michael Powell appear to be on the same page in their push for deployment of B-P-L.

Could the F-C-C be convinced to wait for the next N-T-I-A report and table the issue for a few months? No one knows how to read the tea leaves in Washington.

Tune in weekly to Amateur Radio Newsline and we'll keep you on top of the issue with the very latest news and views of those close to the B-P-L issue.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, in Philadelphia.

And look for Mark's report on the B-P-L buzz and other topics from the Hamvention floor during our special program next week produced in Dayton.

RADIO RULES: FCC MKES "MINOR AMMENDMENTS" TO PART 97

The FCC says that it has minor amendments to various Amateur Radio rules. A bulletin from the ARRL highlights some of them including the most significant one. It involved revising the wording of Section 97.307(d), which defines spurious emissions. The updated language imposes a slightly higher standard on newer transmitters or amplifiers of any power level.

The FCC also has redefined what constitutes an Amateur Radio operator to reflect the advent of the Universal Licensing System electronic licensee database.
The current rule defines an amateur operator as "a person holding a written authorization to be the control operator of an amateur station." Under the revised Section 97.3(a)(1) an amateur operator is "a person named in an amateur operator/primary license station grant on the U-L-S consolidated licensee database to be the control operator of an amateur station."

The FCC made these and several other regulatory changes on its own motion rather than in reaction to any petitions. The decision appeared May 5 in the Federal Register. The changes become effective June 1st. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: CONVICTED MURDERER LOOSES HAM TICKET

A ham serving a prison sentence for the murder of his wife has had his Amateur license revoked. Roger Thomas Scaggs, the now ex-W5EBC, had his ticket pulled after the FCC determined that he no longer holds the requisite requirements to remain a Commission licensee.

On March 6, 1996 Scaggs was convicted of murder in the death of Penny Scaggs, his wife of thirty-five years. The court record in that case showed that Scaggs beat his wife to death with a galvanized lead pipe and then stabbed her several times. He was sentenced to a prison term of thirty-two years and fined ten thousand dollars.

The Commission says that its character policies provide that any felony conviction is a matter predictive of licensee behavior and is directly relevant to the functioning of the Commission's regulatory mission. It says that Scaggs conviction mandates the conclusion that he does not possess the requisite qualifications to be or remain a Commission licensee and that his license should be revoked. (FCC)

ENFORCMENT: NO FISHING COMS HERE

The owners of four trucking companies, two seafood companies and one fishing boat have all been cited by the FCC for operating without a license on amateur frequencies. According to the C-Q magazine website, three of the trucking companies are in North and South Carolina and the fourth is in Idaho. They were allegedly operating on 10 meters. The fishing boats are in the Pacific Northwest, purportedly using the 2 meter band. (CQ)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC AGAIN WRITES TO K1MAN

The FCC has again written to Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, and the commissions note has both good and bad news for the Belgrade Lakes, Maine radio amateur. On the positive side, the April 14th letter informs K1MAN that a review of his transmissions indicates that he is complying with the Amateur Service regulations regarding broadcasting and bulletins and station control.

The negative? The FCC alleges that K1MAN is in violation of rules regarding use of his Amateur station for pecuniary interest and those regarding deliberate interference to ongoing communications.

Also, the letter again told Baxter that his "felony affidavit complaints" will not be accepted by the regulatory agency. He was also reminded that all frequencies in the Amateur Radio Service are shared. No frequency is assigned for the exclusive use of any station, and that Baxter's station has no greater rights to a frequency at any particular time than does any other Amateur station. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: CONSERVATIVE GROUP CALLS ON CONGRESS TO REPRIMAND FCC

A faith based group is chiding the FCC for not acting more decisively in getting dirty words off the public airwaves. Amateur Radio Newsline's Jim Davis, W-2-J-K-D, has more:

--

AUDIO

--

Focus on the Family was founded by Dr. James Dobson, whose commentaries are heard on radio stations world-wide. (Published reports)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC CHAIRMAN DOES NOT SUPPORT REVOKING BROADCAST LICENSES

F-C-C chairman Michael Powell says he doesn't support legislation that would pull a broadcast station license after a third indecency violation. He is not opposed to high fines to get the attention of broadcasters who step across the indecency line.

Speaking at the recent National Association of Broadcasters convention in Las Vegas, Powell suggested that he would support extending indecency regulations beyond over-the-air broadcasting to other media, such as cable and satellite broadcasts, but only if the FCC is given approval by Congress.

Powell labels as a "red herring" a proposal by Viacom president Mel Karmazin for more specific decency guidelines. Viacom owns C-B-S. That's the network which aired the controversial Super Bowl half-time show with rock star Janet Jackson. (Published reports)

RESCUE RADIO: EMERGENCY TRAINING IN KANSAS

A day-long program on Amateur Radio emergency communications will take place Saturday, July 24, 9 AM in Kansas. This, at The Salvation

Army, 420 E
Santa Fe, Olathe which is 15 miles southwest of Kansas City.

According to the ARRL Letter, the day begins with "New Ham Orientation," sponsored by Johnson County Amateur Radio Emergency Service. This session will provide an overview of ARES and explain how amateurs can get involved.
Following a lunch break the Kansas Salvation Army Team Emergency Radio Network will sponsor an ARRL Emergency Communications seminar.

Seats are limited. For additional information contact June Jeffers, KB0WEQ, by email to kssatern@att.net or call area code 913-856-8674 during normal business hours, Central time. (ARRL)

RADIO LAW: SAN DIEGO TV SHOP OWNER CONVICTED

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: DTV AT A SNAILS PACE

The General Accounting Office has issued a report saying that more than 80 percent of Americans are either unaware or only "somewhat aware" of the transition to digital television signals. They are also unaware that Congress
plans to sell the analog spectrum that will become available when TV stations
convert from analog to digital.

Lawmakers are counting on the money to help balance the budget.
However, the digital transition may be years away unless more consumers start buying digital TVs to receive the new signals. Current sales of those expensive digital sets
appear to be fairly flat at best. (Science OnLine)

WORLDBEAT - ALBANIA: NEWS FROM ALBANIA

Turning to news from around the world, many noticed the signals from OH2BH
and OH2PM bouncing in from Albania not long ago. In fact, the pair made some 6000 QSOs while visiting that nation. They were also there to remind the world

WORLDBEAT - CANADA: SOME RAC APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED

Radio Amateurs of Canada's Board of Directors has approved Eric Ferguson, V-E-
3-C-R, as the organizations new Treasurer. This, for the term ending Dec 31st,
2005. Feguson comes to Radio Amateurs of Canada with extensive banking experience at the Executive level at a major Canadian bank.

The Board of Directors has approved Dave Goodwin, V-Oh-1-A-U, as the Director for Radio Amateurs of Canada's Atlantic Region. Goodwin will complete the term of David Nimmo, VE1NN, who resigned in early March. (RAC)

WORLDBEAT - UK: NEW 6 METER BEACON ON THE AIR

And members of the United Kingdom's Blacksheep Contest Group have activated a new 6 meter propagation beacon located near the city of Hertfordshire, in grid square IO91. This, as a replacement for the GB3NHQ beacon which closed down
some years ago.

The new GB3BAA beacon became operational on 50.016 MHz at 15:10 UTC
on April 20th, and ground-wave reception reports from Normandy and northern England have already been received. Further reports would be most welcome, and should be sent to Mr. I. Phillips, G0RDI, by e-mail to gb3baa@77hz.com (RSGB)

DX

In DX, 3-B-9-F-R has been heard operating from Rodrigues Island on 10 meter
FM. He was heard on the worldwide calling frequency of 29.600 MHz between 1200 and 1400 U-T-C, working Europe. (GB2RS)

Also heard on is A-P-2-J-Z-B in Pakistan. He was monitored on 12 and 17 meters
SSB. Watch 24.955 MHz after 0930 U-T-C and also around 18.110 MHz after 1445 UTC. QSL direct to the operators call directory address.

THAT FINAL ITEM: WHO INVENTED THE SCANNER RADIO - REDUX

And finally this week, an update on our recent story of who really invented the first scanner radio. We previously reported that a group of broadcast engineers working at Cape Canaveral during the early days of the space race developed the first scanner radio. This, so that the late NBC newsman Roy Neal, K-6-D-U-E,
could know when a launch was going to take place.

Well, that is quite true but Harvey Cronen, a S-W-L who is one of our listeners in New Jersey has some further information. He says that musician and inventor
Raymond Scott is the person who holds a patent on at least one form of automatic scanning radio.

Harvey sent us a web link to a site that chronicles the life of Scott. While he is best known as the orchestra leader on the early NBC television show
"Your Hit Parade" and as the husband of the late songstress Dorothy Collins, there was another side to Raymond Scott that few in the public knew about. It is all on the website and it is there where it says that Scott actually patented a broadcast band radio receiver which tunes in on stations around the country and changes frequency by itself at any given interval. This, says the website, permitted Scott to catch most of the nations disc-jockey shows in a brief span and find out what tunes are being played.

There is lots of truly fascinating information at this very informative website

about Raymond Scott, his life, his inventions that impacted on the worlds of recording and communications as well as his music. It is well worth visiting at www.raymondscott.com. (H. Cronen)

heheh yeah, I only ever had one accident on the bike, and that was due to some fool spreading gravel out in a curve. But I was wearing leathers, gloves, and a helmet so all I had was bumps and bruises, no road rash. The most important thing to remember when riding a bike is to keep an eye out for the other people, because they won't keep one out for you. The most fun I ever had though was riding to Milwaukee for the H-D 95th anniversary.

You forgot all the rest Leland.....

>Who cares? I already know about it. So some >bad Hams get busted proves the system >works. For the big mouthed CBers claiming >the FCC doesn't do anything looks like they're >dead wrong.

--
>Leland C. Scott

>KC8LDO

The only one "dead" wrong is you. No one in this group claims the lies you attribute them.

Who cares Leland? I know that Cb'rs get busted. So a few Cb'rs get busted out of tens of thousands,

>Specifically they were truckers. If you >investigate further you will discover that in the >union contracts the drivers are allowed to use

>CB radios only.

Bullshit. No such wording in trucker's union contracts. Such rules are completely voluntary and enacted by the trucking companies. In fact, the last mandate issued to the trucking industry regarding federal rules relates to the carrying of firearms.
Lie upon lie upon lie is all KC8LDO can offer.

> No export radios, no modified CBs etc. That >was mention specifically when UPS drivers >were caught.

It was mentioned when ANY company was notifed of drivers doing such.
UPS enacted their own rule. No union enacted such bullshit as you misattribute (read: LIE).

> Not only are the drivers at risk from being >fired the companies they work for face stiff >fines for allowing the violations to occur.

Very rarely, if at all, and most certainly not for first offenses, only repeat violations after every opportunity is presented to correct the problem,.....something that pains you to the point of howling because you are no longer permitted to get away with breaking the law like you prefer and do.
And many driver's are owner ops, absolving the companies of any and all guilt.

>The companies are responsible for making >sure their employees don't violate the law.

Owner ops are not employees.

>If I had a driver that cost me $7,500 to >$10,000 in fines I'd fire them.

No worry there, as Mopar illustrated, you'll never have much of anything.

>There are plenty of hungry unemployed truck >drivers out there who are more than willing to >follow the law.

(it just shows that Hams are just as bad, don't follow the rules any better)

Yep,,,and KC8LDO and his ilk epitomize such an example,,,it's widely known across the hammie spectrum.

>The point for a long time big by mouthed CBer >have claimed that incurions in to the Ham 10m >band was a minor deal and the FCC wasn't >going to do anything about it. Both claims are >wrong.

But of course, such claims were not made by anyone on this group, only lies by yourself claiming such were made, giving you an ever-collapsing soap box.

>Having a few Hams contacted by the FCC for >Part 97 violations does not change the fact >that there are millions of CBers, there are only >650K to 750K Hams, operating illegally.

(I wonder if the FCC knows about Doug's felony conviction? From what I read, he could have his license revoked. Maybe someone should forward those court papers along with the posts offering a modified cb for sale, throw in a few of his colorful posts for a little icing.)

>I'll bet they won't do a thing.

You also "bet" he was innocent, defended his felonious behavior, and threatened this group with him flooding us again. As I said, you are the epitome of what is wrong with hammie radio, a real cancer to those hammies that actually have the good of the hobby as their interest.

>In fact somebody mostly alread has and

>nothing has happed.

(Since you seem to like posting these things, why don't you do your duty and turn Doug in for his crimes?)

>I don't turn in CBers either, I just like posting

>the news, so fair is fair.

Your "news" is selective to serve your agenda.

(Come on Lee, you are so gung ho to post this drivel here to start flames.)

>It takes two.

Perhaps it does, but the fecal matter somehow ALWAYS originates with yourself and our few fanny pinchers of Doug, Davie-son, Frank, and Geogre.

>If you just ignored it then there wouldn't be a >problem. But you can't leave it alone. You're >attracted to it like a moth to a bug zapper.

More like a fertilizing expert to bullshit.

(Do your Ham duty and turn Doug in for his crimes to his family and the ham community for selling modified cb's.)

>Hams can sell all the modified equipment we >want per Part 97, go look it up.

> LOL!!!

Your ignorance. Many of these hammies are also cbers who don't post their call and besides,you are hard pressed to find ANY hammies at all that would include you in a sentence utilizing the term "we"....as you are an exile, an oddity to be reviled among the hammie community. You are pointed to as a prime example when one needs illustrate a lid.

>Yeah, lot of laughs on this side because your >trying to argue a point while being totally >ignorant of the rules.

You're the ignorantly presenting bullshit and claiming it is part of drivers union contracts. It is you that is highly ignorant of what you profess.

>It would be different if you knew what you >were talking about. But that's been the case >with most of the illegal CBers on this group, >big mouth and no facts.

That reflection and projection of yourself has grown ten-fold since your self-esteem has been raped and pillaged, in additio to your infamous reputation as a stained hammie that encompasses al that is wrong with hammie radio.

Spread your cheeks wide Twirt and prepare to take it like a man. And I'll bet you'll even like it too.

Quoted from full text article following this.

"UPS Attorney Daniel N. Tenfelde last week assured Hollingsworth that his company was taking its Warning Notice seriously and has launched a full investigation.
"We discovered that some employees had obtained CB radios that contained a mechanism allowing them to switch frequencies into the 10-meter Amateur Radio band," he said in a January 28 letter. "It is not UPS policy to allow equipment such as this to be used in our vehicles." He said UPS' contract with the Teamsters Union allows only for CB radios. Tenfelde said UPS is working with its transportation and labor groups to let drivers know that such unlicensed operation violates both UPS policy and FCC regulations."

As you can CLEARLY READ it says >> UPS' contract with the Teamsters Union allows only for CB radios<<.

Twirt you lie to cover the truth, but its out there and there is NOTHING you can do to stop people from finding it!!

http://www.arrl.org/news/stories/2004/02/02/101/?nc=1

FCC Goes After Alleged 10-Meter Scofflaws NEWINGTON, CT, Feb 2, 2004--The FCC is working on at least two fronts to eliminate unlicensed operation from the 10-meter band. Earlier this month, FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth sent warning notices to two shipping companies regarding reports to the Commission that some of the companies' vehicles may be the source of illegal radio transmissions on the amateur band. One of the companies, UPS, has offered its full cooperation.

"Many truckers use CB radio, which does not require a license," Hollingsworth pointed out in letters earlier this month to UPS offices in Ohio and Indiana and to R&L Transfer Inc of Ohio. "However, any person using a radio transmitter on the Amateur Radio bands must possess a station and operator license." Hollingsworth asked the over-the-road shippers to advise their drivers that such radio operation could subject them to heavy fines and seizure of their radio equipment.

UPS Attorney Daniel N. Tenfelde last week assured Hollingsworth that his company was taking its Warning Notice seriously and has launched a full investigation.

"We discovered that some employees had obtained CB radios that contained a mechanism allowing them to switch frequencies into the 10-meter Amateur Radio band," he said in a January 28 letter. "It is not UPS policy to allow equipment such as this to be used in our vehicles." He said UPS' contract with the Teamsters Union allows only for CB radios. Tenfelde said UPS is working with its transportation and labor groups to let drivers know that such unlicensed operation violates both UPS policy and FCC regulations.

In a parallel development, the FCC issued a Citation to Jonathan Edward Stone, doing business as Omnitronics/Pacetronics for alleged violation of ¬302(b) of the Communications Act and ¬2.803(a)(1) of the Commission's rules.

An investigation by the FCC's Dallas field office led the Commission to allege that Omnitronics/Pacetronics was offering more than two dozen uncertificated "Citizens Band" transceivers via its Web site. The FCC says Omnitronics/Pacetronics was marketing the units as Amateur Radio equipment, which does not require FCC certification (formerly known as "type acceptance"), and a check of the company's Web site generally confirmed that assertion.

"The Commission has evaluated radio frequency devices similar to those listed and concluded that the devices at issue are not only amateur radios but can easily be altered for use as Citizens Band devices as well," said the FCC Citation from FCC Dallas District Director James D. Wells. The FCC said it concluded that the devices fall within the definition of CB transmitters and therefore "cannot legally be imported or marketed in the United States." That would include so-called "export" models, the Citation said, pointing to a 2000 revision of ¬2.1204(a)(5) of its rules.

Citing ¬95.655(a) of the FCC's rules, Wells noted that "dual-use CB and Amateur Radio of the kind at issue here may not be certificated under the Commission's rules." He said the clarification was added to Part 95--which governs the Citizens Band--"to explicitly foreclose the possibility of certification of dual-use CB and amateur radios and thereby deter use by CB operators of frequencies allocated for Amateur Radio use."

The FCC Citation also warned Unitronics/Pacetronics regarding the requirement of FCC certification of external RF amplifiers or amplifier kits capable of operating below 144 MHz as well as the prohibition against marketing RF amplifiers or amplifier kits capable of operating between 24 and 35 MHz.

Most of the transceivers in question carry brand names unfamiliar within the amateur community--such as Connex, Galaxy, General and Superstar. Radios being marketed as amateur gear are shown on the Unitronics/Pacetronics Web site displaying 27.185 MHz on the dial--CB channel 19. Some of the purported amateur transceivers have only a channel readout display, not a frequency display, and only operate on AM or FM modes. For an additional charge, Omnitronics/Pacetronics offers such accessories as roger beeps, "turbo echo" and what it calls "basic" and "professional" alignment.

The only recognized amateur manufacturer on the list in the FCC's Citation is Ranger. The FCC Citation singled out the Ranger models RCI-2950DX--a 10-meter transceiver--and RCI-2970DX--a dual-band 10/12-meter unit. Both are shown on the Omnitronics/Pacetronics Web site displaying 27.185 MHz, and the ad copy notes, "you can use this radio in the roughest environments. (Yes, even a Mack.)"

The February QST 1992 review of the Ranger RCI-2950 made note of its CB heritage and features--such as a "roger beep" and a public-address speaker jack. The ARRL Lab said it may be possible to modify the '2950 for operation outside the amateur bands. The RCI-2970DX was reviewed in QST for October 2001. The ARRL Lab said that using then-available information, it was unable to modify the '2970DX it tested for operation on non-amateur frequencies.

Omnitronics/Pacetronics is not related to Omnitronics, LLC, the Ohio company that manufactures Astatic microphones--including the D-104--and other microphones, some used for mobile CB applications.

Hello Frank

Can you recommend a book or two that will teach me about CB fundamentals, repairing and tweaking?

I have an little electronic background and even own an oscilloscope. I think that if I learn the workings of a CB from the ground up it will be easier for me to troubleshoot them. The first book should be very basic so I can get the fundamentals down before diving off into the deep end.

Thanks

"The Radio Amateur's Handbook" by the ARRL is exactly what you are looking for. You can usually find a copy at your local public library, or pick one up on ebay for just a few bucks. Just about any edition printed in the last 20-30 years will be fine. I do -NOT- recommend any of these 'CB-tweak-n-mod' books or CDs -- not only because most of the mods are illegal, but because most of the information is gathered from wannabe techs and power-junkies that have little experience and even less formal education in electronics. Learn electronics the right way and you won't have to unlearn a whole bunch of CB-voodoo later on.

Interesting thought..... but yes, I think the term describes them better than it does illegal operators on 11 meters. The latter would be more accurately called 'freeloaders'.

Really? Just listen across the ham bands and you will find that 99% of the hams are following the rules. Listen across the 11 meter band and you will find 99% of the operators are breaking the rules.

Which proves the FCC cares more about the ham bands than they do about cb. We applaud their efforts to catch the errant hams, more power to them. That is why they also go after the illegal cbers that attempt to operate on the ham bands. They couldn't care less about the cb band anymore as the cbers took it upon themselves to turn it into the sewer pit of the radio spectrum.

Really JUJU, why is it that 99% of the hams are busted, only 10% of cb's busted? Please don't say it's the money, 10K is 10K, no matter who pays it.

Oh but I do Leland, been there, seen it, done it, you on the other hand are doing nothing but sinking your own ship. Defending a known felon, repeater jammer. Talking like you know the union contracts of the trucking firms from OK City, Ok & Lithonia Ga, when you don't know squat! Go ahead and email, better yet, call the local union for both, have them post where it's against union rules to have anything other than a cb in union trucks.....LMAO!!!!

After re-reading the "antenna whine?" thread, I think I have been able to deduce the cause of my noisy cheapo antenna to something entirely different... the radio unit itself not being properly grounded. Thanks to WALRUS for suggesting I mount it inside the truck (caused me to run the radio without the truck running) and to Frank for that kick-hiney analogy that stuck in my mind. Fairly sure that it's one of my fuel pumps inducing some noise. I'm still going with a better antenna. I'm leaning more towards a longer one on the bumper as opposed to a shorter one on the side view mirror. I had planned on keeping the height above the vehicle about the same so I figure the longer antenna, the better.

Thanks to everyone that replied

| I recently purchased an 89 Bronco, and I'm looking for a good antenna | mounting idea for this beast. I know that I can't put it on the roof of the
| truck (clearance issues around town). I've thought about a bumper mount,
| but options are limited due to the placement of the taillights. After | looking online for a bit I'm thinking of something like a doorjamb mount at
| the tailgate... but I'd like to know if anyone else has mounted an antenna
| on a similar vehicle to learn from their mistakes\experiences. Right now
| I'm using one of the cheapie magnet mounts on the roof of the truck that | forces me to crank the squelch up so high I must be within 50 feet of | whomever I'm talking to. Been reading this group just long enough to know | that antenna mounts is a subject that gets posted frequently enough.
| Unfortunately, I'm not the exception.

Try this go post a bunch of FCC reports of busted hams on a ham group no one will get mad there wont be any reaction except maybe they will say that these guys deserve it etc. Now go post a bunch of FCC reports of CBers being busted in a CB news group. opposite reaction, there will be lots of crying, flames and discontent, landshark will attack whoever posted it and moparholic will threaten to beat them up lol. Give me some insight on why this difference somebody.

Pprove the numbers.

> Please don't say it's the money, 10K is > 10K, no matter who pays it

True, but you know that's not the issue don't you. When you bend over and pull numbers out of that dark hole of yours, that's a TwistedTurd's trick, you'll have to fine a better source to convince reasonable people.

If you got busted and had to pay a $10K fine you going to go around a broadcast the fact? But then again we wouldn't know it was you because you like the other CBers hide behind fake names. I'll bet a lot of CBers are getting busted and are just too ashamed to admit it. Heck that would spoil the myth that the FCC doesn't do anything, just like when it was mentioned nothing would be done about intruders on 10m.

The power I have over CBers is given willingly by them to me when they can't stop me from posting my views. The more I post the more they dance the Dance. They're the powerless ones. They just don't know it yet.

Oh, one more thing I wouldn't use "BP" as a screen NIC anymore. "BP" is a line of gas stations and a lot of angry motorists driving SUVs might take out their frustrations on you. They may even think you work for them.

You can't see the forest through the trees, shark. Busting someone that isn't licensed costs much more money in man-hours, equipment usage, travel expenses, etc. There needs to be monitoring and DFing, at least one warning notice, more monitoring and DFing, a request for station inspection, more monitoring and DFing, etc, etc, etc. This is done because once an NAL is issued, the evidence needs to be very nearly unimpeachable to avoid legal challenges in court, which would cost even more money in court fees and lawyers. That's why when you -do- hear of a CBer getting busted the violations are usually quite extensive. On the other hand, it's easy to bust a ham because a lot of the legal process is eliminated by the fact that the violator is licensed -- the license pre-empts most of the issues upon which a legal challenge could be made. All they need to do is record a few illegal transmissions, do a DF and audio comparison against legal transmissions where the ham identifies himself, then cite the ham for a violation against his license. Very cheap and easy.

Then Police officers that out there protecting you & I are chickens too? Why do they shoot people with BB guns (toy guns)? Why are normal citizens shooting people with toy/bb guns? They must be chicken too.
Your missing the point, do you answer your door with a gun?
Are you that paranoid or living in such a bad area, you feel the need to answer your front door with a gun? UPS dude? FedEx Dude? Community volunteer? Collecting donations? You going to shoot them for coming up to the front door?
If you answer your front door in the middle of the day with a gun in hand (real or not) You have some serious mental issues.
As for why am I mouth piece for Steve, I'm not, he can take care of himself. Why are you defending Doug? Do you like the filth he posts here? Do you like what he did to his wife and kids?
That's ok to you?

Hehhee,,,it wasn't the cbers that brought the extra freqs and in between capabilities and amps to cb,,,it was the hammies. They actually did all the cbers a huge favor by their actions,,,,,they turned it into a virtual free for all and many cbers enjoy it just the way it is, much to the chagrin of certain scumbag hammies.
I agree, the FCC doesn't care about the cb band, only scurvy hammies who cause trouble like N8WWM, K4KWH, N7VCF, WA3MOJ, KC8LDO and N3CVJ make such waves about cb and cbers on this group. It's good that the FCC enforces the rules on hammie radio concerning unlicensed operation,,,and hammies operating where they aren't supposed to,,and intentional interference,,,,and license expiration,,,,and repeater jamming,,,,,,and everything else.

No union contracts by the Teamsters address the radios as KC8LDO has maintained. More lies from KCLDO. All can see how he took a single company (UPS) and THEIR specific contract and took it to mean the Teamsters have enacted the contract...such is the price he pays for suffering such a massive deficit in communications.

It's useless trying to talk reason to nad, he thinks he is superior to CBer's since he passed one of the easiest ham license tests ever given, the no-code tech.

If you ever seen where him and dogie live, you'd shake your head in disgust. My employees have better homes than those two losers.

They never expected anyone to call their bluff and actually take them up on their numerous keyboard tuff guy invitations to visit them.

Well I for one am not the least bit afraid to go to madison hts or toledo on a whim. In fact, after seeing dogie, I'd fight him and nad at the same time at inductoheat. I shit you negative.

Set it up, nad.

Concetrate hard and see if you can comprehend. If not any six year old can explaine it to you.

The FCC dosen't give a crap about the cb band anymore. Any idiot can get away with most anything there now. As for those who stray outside the cb bands, like into the 10 meter band and operate without a license, they are more likely to get caught. The FCC still values ham radio, that is why wayward hams and other illegal ops on the ham bands are likely to get caught. And by the way, 99% of the hams don't get busted, 99+ percent of the hams are operating legally, while 99+ percent of the cbers are operating illegally.

I guess that's what Frank wrote.....100% correct.

The point is that making a statement that 99% of cb'rs operate illegally is false, just as 99% of hams get busted for operating illegally.

My point is that you are using a pretty wide paint brush, with no facts at all to back that up. That's why I said that JJ, you can say

Geo, Doug is a proven pussy, porn-posting, repeater jamming, deadbeat dad, section 8 loser. Why in the world would you want to associate or attempt to defend his scum smeared reputation? Hey, the CB band is like the internet. It is unpoliced. That's why it is so much fun. It's like a chat room. Ever try to listen to any of the ham bands other then the liberty net? Well, for one thing, you will fall asleep in a matter of minutes! There just isn't anything entertaining to listen to on the ham bands. Yes, the ham bands are good to have in emergencies because they setup communications. But, other then that, they are pure boredom. Not so with CB.

I disagree. Ham radio offers much greater opportunities for the radio enthusiast than the small, uncontrolled slice of the spectrum around 11m. The only things it demands in return are that you memorize a few technical questions, then pay a fee that will set you back about as much as a happy meal. That seems to be too much of a sacrifice for some people, but I don't think a true opportunist would pass it up.

SWR will not make a difference in the whine and as a matter of fact it may worsen it if you went down to 1.5 to 1. Same as having a good ground will make on difference in the whine. You need to have those fixed if you plan on transmitting to save the finals. Try re-routing the coax and using ferrite chokes on the cables coming from the alternator. I do believe that the 29 has a NB or ANL switch on it. try using them and see if that makes a difference.

This is a direct appeal!

If you rolled tape -- or know of anyone else who rolled tape -- on any TV broadcast that aired during live coverage of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy between November 22nd and the 25th, 1963, please contact me!

I'm interested in any reel-to-reel audio tape that recorded sound from any television broadcast during that weekend in November 1963!

Whether it's a network or local television broadcast, whether the sound recording of that broadcast is of good quality or poor quality, whether the audio is distorted, whether it was recorded in a major market or in a minor market, I want to know about it!

It could be audio tape that your parent or grandparent might have rolled using their old reel-to-reel tape recorder on Friday, November 22, 1963 (or later that weekend). Perhaps you vaguely remember a friend or acquaintance mentioning that they rolled tape on TV broadcasts that weekend. Or you think you know of someone who acquired such a recording.

I'm a collector, so if you have anything like this or know of someone else who does... please email me or have them email me at:

brad.johnson@turner.com
or bkj333@aol.com

P.S. Hey, we don't have to limit this to just TV... I don't rule out radio broadcasts but am interested in those too!

Thank you!

I try to avoid making specific number comparisons since hard data is not usually easy to collect.

But I would hope that you'd agree that a definite majority of CB'ers are running illegally in one form or another. I have certainly seen enough empirical data in my many years of the hobby to make that claim.

It's one thing to be "busted" for operating illegally, It's totally another to just be "operating" illegally. It's true that a higher percentage of hams are busted for operating illegally than there are CB'ers popped for illegal operation. But for the most part it can be explained that hams themselves have requested stricter enforcement.

In other words, just because there are a higher number of reported enforcement actions against hams vs. CB'ers, does not mean that there is a higher percentage of hams operating illegally.

Yes,,,again "UPS contract with the union group,,,NOT vice versa. It makes a huge difference. Reversing the words would change the entire meaning of the sentence. Again,,it is NOT the teamster's contract,,,and speaking of teamsters, you claimed it wasn't even mentioned,,,,you should really read the posts prior to shoveling manure down your throat.

Read:"UPS" contract,,,NOT the Teamster's CONTRACT. Your communication deficit is responsible for your flawed interpretation of such. If you didn;t suffer so massively, you wouldn't have made such a mistake.

>UPS has entered into a contract with the Bullshit. It isn't part of the teamsters contract. it is the UPS contract. Your statement is as false as KC8LDO's lies. A correct statement would read: "UPS, has their own contract which drivers must sign." If it was a teamster contract, ALL drivers in the teamsters would be presented with such a contract, no matter for who they drove.

Old news.

>As you can CLEARLY READ it says >> UPS'

And as anyone not suffering a communication deficit can CLEARLY READ, it does not say "
Teamster's union contract with UPS",,no,,,it says "UPS contract with the union",,meaning it is a UPS contract, meaning it originated with UPS, NOT the unions, whcih is exactly what I maintained and has you howling in psychotic pain.
Again, it is UPS contract, NOT the Teamsters contract.

>They have entered into this contract together

>Union drivers/Teamsters drive for UPS they

Nevertheless, it is not a teamster contract. The teamsters have their own contracts. This was originated by UPS, not the teamsters.

Again,"UPS' contract with the TEAMSTERS"..(see where it was mentioned, oh angry-one? Illegal operation does not end with amplifiers. Anyone who's had a radio "doctored" (peaked, clipped, extra channels etc), runs noise toys (including echo boxes and roger beeps), or laces his conversations with "four letter", words is running illegally. I cannot turn on the CB any more without someone violating at least one of these conditions. Like you pointed out before, some of this may be geographic in nature, but I have to assume, based on my own findings, that even considering geographical variations, that the average still favors the conclusion that more CBers run illegally to some degree, than those who do not..

You evidently have absolutely no idea of the difference between general conclusions and specific numbers. Then again judging by your past performance and lack of comprehensive ability, this should not surprise me.

And it's been my experience after 30+ years of CBing that the majority of CB operators operate illegally to one degree or another. Just turn the radio on any given day and you can hear it for yourself. Every time someone hits that roger beep, every time you hear an echo box, every time you see someone's signal "swinging" wildly, every yahoo on 27.555, and every time you hear some low-life cuss out someone else.

>Merely claiming somehting is

How does one "prove" a claim that is based on empirical observation? What, do you want government census numbers? You're not going to get them. But then again you know that, and you are simply falling back on your old standby excuse that "absence of proof means the same thing as lying".

Do a little searching. Or, be bold enough to ask Riley himself. Hams HAVE asked for better enforcement of the ham bands That is a matter of general acknowledgement for any ham who's spent any time listening to the ARRL and RAIN reports or who peruses ham discussion boards. But on the other hand, hams could not care less what goes on on 11 meters. As long as they stay above 12 meters and below 10.

I have not claimed to have rock solid proof of anything. But if you are going to take the position that unless someone has such proof, that everything they say is automatically a lie, you are the one with issues. A tough and somewhat duplicitous position for someone who claims to believe in God.

He's just trying to save face is all. He was drunk when he wrote it. You should have heard him drunk on my answering machine the couple of times he called awhile back. One of those times he even asked me, more like begged, to have me contact Doug to ask him to quit teasing him on the news group with his posts! At least he thinks it was Doug. Who it was I don't know and I don't really care. So I ignored his pleas for help. The problem he has isn't with me so he's on his own. His last called, which I still have on the answering machine by the way, he called me names because he's frustrated with the fact that I won't help him. Besides I don't see him helping anybody else either so as he said what comes around goes around.

No, you did. I am merely taking your statement to its logical

Yea, if you have the mentality of a junior high-schooler you probably would find the discussions on the ham bands, things like building antennas, equipment, learning about other parts of the world, boring. If you like vulgar language, and the sewer mentality, then cb is for you.

It is the difference between those in the ham ranks that want to operate withing the rules so that operating is pleasurable for everyone, as opposed to the cb ranks where many have no respect for rules or anyone and chaos is the norm.

Of course he has shame. He is ashamed that he is a jobless leech that lives off his mommy. He is ashamed to use his real name when voicing his paranoid, sociopathic opinions. He is ashamed of the truth when the facts are staring him in the face. And he is ashamed of his poor education and that he dropped out of community college, which is why he will never admit he is wrong about anything. The difference is that he won't let his shame interfere with what is probably his only path

Hey,,,explaining and justifying how you come to use "loopholes" of he law, something you posted criminals only criminals do, illustrates your hypocrisy mah' vously!

Besides, you haev posted some gems concerning such acts as "getting around the law".

>What "laws" have I broken that you, yourself,

>are not similarly guilty of?

Justifying your illegal behavior by pointing to another's behavior doesnt cut it.

>If you are going to accuse other people of >being "lawbreakers", while you yourself are >guilty of the same, is pure hypocrisy.

Return fire You had probems with your personal live and come out here and took out your dilemmas on those who speak of topics, such as amps and freebanding, referring to them as criminals. It was I who illustrtaed your hypocrisy to the masses to which you meekly replied: "I guess you'd be surprised by the stance I took back then"..but alas, none were surprised, as all were aware of your personal problems with cbers who do what you used to do. There you have it, YOU were the lawbreaker, accusing others of doing the same.

>People in glass houses......

Oh, but I didn't begin with the stone throwing,,you did and were called on it long ago and you have never moved beyond it.
Remember, I'm not the one justifying my behavior, nor have I ever tried.

>And THAT is the root of your problem.

No,,that is the root of YOUR problem, feeling you are somehow elevated to one of status and owed an explanation when in fact, just the opposite is true, .,you are status starved because you have none in life, so you seek it here and arrogantly feel you are owed an explanation or justification for other's actions.

>You have no shame. A classic sign of >anti-social personality disorder.

Yet, you haver no qualifications for making any judgement based on what you are force fed and permitted. Couple this with your demands for anothers justifications for their actions, and I would surmise many agree your behavior is much more in line with a " personality disorder" than any others in this group, save for N8 and Lelnad.

You, on the other

You've said many things in google yet are apt to "forget" it,,,the Phelps station master you never owned is testament to such examples.

Self-contradictory. You claimed you are a "changed" man and was wrong for your behavior on the radio not so many years back, yet it hadn't stopped you from posting it at the time....if anything, it is a classic case of one who obviously was SO distraught with their life at one point, they felt a drastic change was needed, so now they (you) attempt to portray yourself as above others that did exactly what you did concerning radio, as ,if you had some sort of epiphany that made your past radio behavior "sociopathic"..,,,hyuk...what a card...a hypocritical sociopathic card,,but a card no less.

readily admit freebanding and respond only when addressed concerning such and I have never attempted to placate my freebanding by pointing to your or any other's illegal actions..such behavior is reserved for yourself, one who needs blame others for his actions,,,,,a classic case of not being able to stand and accept responsiblity for your own actions.

>The thing is I am no longer operating illegally

Well, there you have it,,,you first ask me to prove you operated illegally, then you admit it. See Davie, how you attempt to weave and bob when faced with the truth,,you become tangled in your web,,,just like the Phelps you never owned. After all, this all comes down to one thing, you're a chronic liar whose fannie is continually pinched by the other chronic liars,,,Frank and Lelnad and Dogie and Geogre..

> in any manner. You however, are. I have

I really don't. I would think that overall majority runs legally. If I were to take a stab, I would think that between 25-30% are illegal. I think amps are not as prevalent as are converted or export radios.

LOL,,there is that assumed status you are so starved for,,,,,how in the hell can you make such a statement? That's akin to saying illegal drug use doesn't end with pot. You haven't the qualifications to make such statements.

You are wrong. Echo and roger beeps are not illegal.

Very good. "Assuming" is not the same as you claiming you have Since when? This morning? You have presented such specific number "comparisons"

on several occasions in order to shore up a claim of yours, with nothing to back it up except your "claim"..

>When?

On several occasions. Even in this post, unless you snipped it. Are you denying doing such?

> Put up or shut up.

I have several times and it most certainly "shut you up." Again....are you denying producing such claims with number comparisons, Davie?

>But I would hope that you'd agree that a >definite majority of CB'ers are running illegally >in one form or another.

Majority? Hahha,,that would equal exactly what you said you do not do,,,,more than 51%...LOL....your hypocrisy radiates bullshit.

>You evidently have absolutely no idea of the >difference between general conclusions and >specific numbers.

The word "majority" IS most certainly specific Davie,,,it defines exactly more than 50% or half.
You evidently have no concept of the difference between,,,,ah hell, we all know what your problem is, Davie,,,,,you can't help slinging bullshit everytime you open that mouth of yours.

> Then again judging by your past performance >and lack of comprehensive ability, this should >not surprise me.

Me either, since it is your interpretive and intellect skills that are so skewered.

>I have certainly seen enough empirical data in >my many years of the hobby to make that >claim.

But of course, you can point to or illustrate none of this "empirical"
(snicker) data,,,you want only to be taken at your word,,,something you ruined long ago, but I will give you another benefit of doubt,,,present something of this "empirical" data, as "empirical" means "provable or verifiable by experience or experiment".

>And it's been my experience after 30+ years of >CBing that the majority of CB operators >operate illegally to one degree or another. Just >turn the radio on any given day and you can >hear it for yourself.

Your hearsay and personal experience is not empirical data, regardless of how severe you misappropriate and misdefine the term. Empirical data is PROOF derived from your personal experiences. Merely claiming such and assuming is not "empirical".

> Every time someone hits >that roger beep, every time you hear an echo

>box,

Incorrect. roger beeps and echo is not illegal on cb. No wonder you left it,,,you couldn't comprehend the rules,,,,say it with me now,,,altogether,,,"deficit in communications", Davie, is your dilemma.

>every time you see someone's signal

>"swinging" wildly, every yahoo on 27.555, and >every time you hear some low-life cuss out >someone else.

Merely claiming somehting is empirical does not make it so. Do something you have never been able to do for the masses, Davie,,prove your bullshit claim.

>How does one "prove" a claim that is based on >empirical observation?

That's your problem,,,in addition to the fact that you are now doing the backwards shuffle and claiming "empirical observation" as opposed to your former claim of "empirical DATA". Data is arived at via observation. Look up the word "empirical" and try placing that term again in front of the laughable term you coined "empirical observation" and you may (on the other hand, you may not) comprhend how redundant and "double-speak" your newly coined phrase is.
End of story.

>I have not claimed to have rock solid proof of >anything.

But you DID. Again, look up the word "empirical",,,,it means PROOF supplied via your own experiments, however, one's word is NOT proof, no matter how you try to postulate such. In the world of science, one's mere word without proof positive is "a theory" and the word "experiment" is a means of arriving at "proof" and disproving a theory and making it fact. When a theory is proven via fact, (IE: proof) it is no longer a theory It denotes a scientific arrival at a belief (theory) arrived at and based upon by,,taa daa-- "proof",,not ones word based upon their own experiences and assumptions.

> But if you are going to take the position that >unless someone has such proof, that >everything they say is automatically a lie, you >are the one with issues.

Not "someone" Davie,,,just you,,,,as you ahve been unable to present proof for any of your wild assed claims I have ever called you on,,just more lipservice and angry posts directed at personal issues and not the topic at hand. Once again, such behavior, I will surmise, most would feel is indicative of a chronic liar,,,,or one with "issues".

> A tough and somewhat duplicitous position

My personal faith and believing in God has absolutely nothing to do with not believing one who has failed to produce anything concerning any of his claims, except angry diatribes, off-topic obsessions, hearsay, and personal opinion..

>Why do you feel the need to add my call? This
>.is a CB newsgroup remember?

Because I am of the personal opinion the people should know who attempts to sling and perpetuate bullshit against them on a regular basis and you are known by your call.
Don't be so ashamed of your call, davie, it will trigger those incredible feelings of no self-worth you have expressed in needing to "move on" and disassociate yourself from your past and your past actions.

That is why they also go after the illegal cbers that attempt to operate on the ham bands. They couldn't care less about the cb band anymore as the cbers took it upon themselves to turn it into the sewer pit of the radio spectrum.

(Hey, the CB band is like the internet. It is unpoliced. That's why it is so much fun. It's like a chat room. Ever try to listen to any of the ham bands other then the liberty net? Well, for one thing, you will fall asleep in a matter of minutes! There just isn't anything entertaining to listen to on the ham bands. Nevertheless, it is not a teamster contract. The teamsters have their own contracts. This was originated by UPS, not the teamsters.

>It sure is a teamsters contract,

It isn't and you have been reduced to arguing semantics.

>the drivers are teamsters, the teamsters union

Exactly, which perfectly illustrates your double speak and incorrect rant of:

>they don't have to use the union drivers

As the teamsters most certainly have to use union drivers. You know shineola..LOL!

zzYou really know nothing of what you profess,,,absolutely nothing. Teamsters do NOT employ non-union drivers.

You're way out of your area of expertise "bullshit".

In soe cases yes,, but you are trying to say the teamsters have the contracts, and they did NOT originate with the teamsers, as you have finally just admitted. It is the COMPANY that has the contracts , as you just alluded. In the company YOU presented, it was UPS.

> The teamsters don't have the only say

(snip)

Non-sequitur,,off topic,,no one took issue with such, Again, the contract originated with UPS,,NOT the teamsters, but you have demonstrated you know absolutely nothing concerning either.

No one said otherwise,

You still are expressing slow comprehensive skill. You're wrong. It's UPS" contract with the teamsters, NOT the teamsters contract with UPS,,,and sincc you feel both claims are interchangeable while retaining the same meaning, you are once again welcome to insist on remaining ingorant on the subject. Such is your right.
End of story, indeed, Lelnad.

Gee, another sarcastic remark using quotes extracted from television programming. Still no job, Twist? Did you go get your weekly quota of signatures so you can keep getting your unemployment checks? Or do you just bleed the welfare system by claiming disability caused by your obesity? Either way, you really should find some other way to occupy your time other than watching TV and trolling Usenet.

Thanks. My swr is doesn't budge on the Washington. On some of the non-certified transmitters, such as the Galaxy, I prefer the swr flat down on some of the lower freqs when using a mag mount on the road. If I were to tune higher, which I rarely do on the Galaxy, the swr would go up a bit if one were to key it on the higher freqs, sometimes all the way up to a 3:1 on say, 27.895. For tuning 27.415 and above, I prefer a hammie rig.

Neither does the FCC, but then why did so many countries sign the ITU treaty? Because they don't give a damn?

> this ng is an >international forum.

This newsgroup has no charter, so the scope is defined by the title:
rec.radio.CB. It is therefore a forum for any country that has a Citizen's Band. But also notice that each country's Citizen's Band is defined by law.

>if it is illegal to xmit below 9khz why are posting it here instead of a >hammie ng where the spectrum is closer?

But it is -not- illegal to transmit below 9kHz. It is not defined as a Citizen's Band, but it -is- radio spectrum that can be legally used without a license just like any of the other Citizen's Bands, and as such it is much more closely associated with the title and scope of this group than the so-called 'freeband'.

So radio should be free? Cell-phones wouldn't exist if you didn't pay the bill. But maybe I should mention your opinion to our station manager next time I see him -- maybe he will side with you and take off all the commercials. Of course nobody at the station would get paid, but hey, it should be free anyway, right?

The citizen's want their fire and police departments to work, don't they? They want their cell-phones and garage-door openers and Rush Limbaugh, right? Well if there are no laws regulating the use of the airwaves all would be chaos and none of that would exist. And if the FCC continues to lose control of the spectrum, it threatens all the benefits that the citizen's want from the radio services. So yes, the citizen's -do- give a damn.

========
Sec. 95.401 (CB Rule 1) What are the Citizens Band Radio Services?

The Citizens Band Radio Services are:
(a) The Citizens Band (CB) Radio Service.......
(b) The Family Radio Service (FRS).......
(c) The Low Power Radio Service (LPRS.......
(d) The Medical Implant Communications Service (MICS).......
(e) The Wireless Medical Telemetry Service (WMTS).......
(f) The Multi-Use Radio Service (MURS).......
========

> you are equating > 9khz >with the 40. isn't that a stretch?

No, because I am not equating <9kHz with "the 40". I am equating it to the common denominator of all the CB radio services -- license-free use of certain parts of the radio spectrum.

>where did you find this info about below 9 khz? no knocks just curious.

Just about everywhere in Title 47 of the United States Code, but for easy reference try these: 2.106, 15.3, 15.33 and 15.209. The FCC controls (or rather, attempts to give the appearance that it controls) radio from 9 kHz and up. Anything below that is totally unregulated.
No licenses, no power limits, no mode restrictions (save harmonics above 9 kHz), no nothing. It's RF wilderness, not even a local sherrif or circuit judge. Perfect place for 'opportunists' to roam.

well i dunno who iceold is but i have read the posts and these guys always talk about homo gay stuff and they are really sad and lonely.
craving for attention so there ya go. if they dont like what i posted too bad because there is nothing they can do about it except for bitch and whine and cry on this board. there are what they are. heaven help us if this icecold guy is the only one that thinks their group is gay.

Just got my cable and internet back up from the big thunder boomer's we've been having in Ohio. The town is basically flooded but the water is going down a bit now. We lost electric for a good while, thank goodness for the generator.

People lost a bunch of boats to the flood at the rocky river marina's. What a mess.

Anyone else get the monsoon?

Well, we finally got some rain.... and some severe thunderstorms, and some hail, and some flooding, and some tornadoes. Like the saying

That's it, there never seems to be a happy medium. This May will go down as the most rain for Medina, we've had about 6 inches since weds night on top of saturated ground.

No I dont know your real name you hide your identity in here remember.
Listen you got to admit you getting all macho with Leland was strange since he never did anything to you it was almost like some one hypnotize you to attack him lol

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1397 – May 21, 2004

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1397 with a release date of Friday, May 21, 2004 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.

Mr. Haynie goes to Washington D C and Dayton, Ohio comes alive with the sound of ham radio. These stories and more on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1397 coming your way right now.

(Billboard Cart Here)

THE BPL FIGHT: MR. HAYNIE TO MEET WITH WHITE HOUSE TELECOM ADVISORS

This weeks top story starts in Dayton Ohio and ends in Washington D-C. It was at the Dayton Hamvention that ARRL President Jim Haynie, W5JBP, announced that he would be meeting with presidential advisors art the White House Telecommunications Office to discuss the Broadband Over Powerline situation. Amateur Radio Newsline was there when a horse but upbeat W5JBP thanked the ham radio community for making the meeting come about: Haynie: “When we ran the story about my FAX’ing the President of the United States a powerful letter, what you helped me do with your letters and your e-mails was to get me an appointment Thursday morning, 10 a.m. in Washington. So you helped me to do that. (applause).

--

The meeting between President Haynie and those advising Peresident Bush on telecommunicastions matters was scheduled for Thursday, May 20th. We will have a full report on it, next week. (ARNewsline(tm))

THE BPL FIGHT: HAM TURNS THE TABLE ON BPL PROPVIDER

Still with BPL news, word that a ham attending an industry sponsored demonstration of the technology in Australia came prepared to do battle. From Brisbane, Q-News reports:

--

A presentation was given by Piero Peroni, who is the Business Manager for the BPL trial within Aurora Energy and Adrian Wild who is the Corporate Affairs

Manager within Aurora Energy.

Martin, VK7GN gave an audible demonstration of the interference on his portable HF receiver and I think it would be fair to say by all accounts the Corporate Affairs Manager was quietly horrified at the noise!

Whether or not the ham radio counter demonstration to Aurora Energy will slow down or stop the rollout of BPL down-under is, at this time unknown. (Q-News)

DAYTON HAMVENTION NEWS: A BIG SUCCESS

Back here in the U-S-A, Jim Haynie’s White House meeting announcement was just another layer of frosting on the very sweet ham radio cake known as the Dayton Hamvention. By all accounts, Hamvention 2004 was as good as any of those in the past and maybe better than some. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Mark Abramovich, NT3V, takes us on an audio tour of this years show:

The big buzz at Dayton was the introduction of two new, top-of-the-line HF radios.

Yaesu introduced thousands of visitors to its booth here to the FT DX 9000 - a radio the company has been developing four years. Here's Chip Margelli K7JA of Yaesu - Vertex Standard.

Over at the competition, Icom introduced showgoers to its sleek, new IC7800. It's already been out for more than a month and Icom representatives concede they underestimated the market demand for this high-end radio.

Here's Ron Rotino, W9WL, represting Icom.

In other Dayton news, Alinco announced a new distributor relationship. Evelyn Garrison WS7A tells Amateur Radio Newsline about the new partnership.

Now Amateur Radio Newsline Editor Bill Pasternak WA6ITF also took in the show besides running his annual Town Hall forum. Bill couldn't help himself when he stopped a the U.S. Towers booth where two lovely sales, eh, models were posing for pictures. Here's the exchange between our own California guy and some young ladies who came to the Dayton Hamvention for the first time..

Behind any Dayton Hamvention is the general chairman. This year Gary De Combes N8EMO took on that enormous responsibility. At the close of the show, he summed it all up for Amateur Radio Newsline.
And how did one of the big radio manufacturers we didn't mention yet think things went. Kenwood's Leo Famie was pleased with this year's event…

And, of course, Chip Margelli, summed up what Yaesu Vertex Standard thought.

Finally, there were lots of new friends and acquaintances made during the Dayton Hamvention 2004. And, despite the rain, spirits of those scouring the flea market for goodies weren't dampened.

It was one for the record books, too, in terms of participation.

Hope to see you here, next year.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, from the convention floor at the Hara Arena - home of the Dayton Hamvention.

As of the time this report is being prepared the Hamvention Committee has not announced a final attendance figure, but several vendors told Amateur Radio Newsline that their sales were way up over the past few years. And thats good news for both the United States economic recovery as well as for Amateur Radio. (ARNewsline(tm))

DAYTON HAMVENTION NEWS: N8EMO AND WX8F ASKED TO RUN HAMVENTION 2005

In a related development, on Monday night, May 17th the Dayton Amateur Radio Association’s Planning Council unanimously recommended the clubs Board of Directors reappoint Gary De Combes, N8EMO and Jim Nies, WX8F as General Chairman and Assistant General Chairman respectively, for Hamvention 2005. The two were affirmed to lead the 2005 show on Tuesday night the 18th. That's only two days after the close of this years show. Normally , no action is taken to fill these positions until the June Board of Directors meeting.

More on the 2004 Dayton Hamvention in future Amateur Radio Newsline reports. (ARNewsline(tm))

RESCUE RADIO: HAMS TAKE PART IN SIMULATED AIRPORT DISASTER

Over a hundred ham radio operators from seven counties in two Eastern states, provided emergency communications support for the Saturday, May 8th disaster drill at Dulles International Airport. The exercise consisted of a simulated plane crash and fire. The aim of the session was to provide treatment and transport of 200 volunteer "victims" to area hospitals by helicopter, ambulance and bus. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, picks up the story from here:

Larry Hughs, K3HE, is the Public Information Officer for for the ARRL’s Virginia Section. He tells Newsline that the job of Amateur Radio was to provide communications between agencies at the simulated crash site, those providing patient transportation, and the participating hospitals. To accomplish this, hams from a number of the regions Amateur Radio Emergency Service groups set up several portable repeaters in and around the airport grounds. They also provided a live Amateur Television link between the site and the airport Operations Center. This allowed airport management to monitor the progress of the drill.

Hams also accompanied some of the officials at the simulated crash site to provide instant communications to other temporary operational areas. Others rode the buses that transported ambulatory victims to local hospitals. This gave planners voice communications and real-time position data via Automatic Position Reporting System. Meantime, other radio amateurs were stationed at ten area hospitals. They helped to coordinate the arrival and departure of those simulating the victims of the crash.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, reporting.

Dulles International Airport is in Northern Virginia, near Washington, DC.. Its also not that far from where Al Quida terrorists crashed a jumbo jet into the Pentagon building on September 11th of 2001. Back then ham radio was among the first of the “First Responders” on scene and is credited in helping to save numerous lives. (K3HE, ARNewsline(tm))

RESCUE RADIO: SUIT BLAMES MOTOROLA HT’S IN 911 DEATHS

The families of twelve firefighters killed when the World Trade Center in New York City collapsed on 9-11 have sued the manufacturer of the hand held radios the men were carrying. According to Popular Communications magazine, the five billion dollar action against Motorola and the City of New York claims that Motorola failed to warn the Fire Department that its hand-helds could not transmit or receive in a high rise building. Because of this, the plaintiffs contend that firefighters could not hear an order to evacuate. (Popular Communications)

ENFORCEMENT: NC HAM MAY FACE LICENSE RENEWAL HEARING

A North Carolina ham who allegedly interfered with repeater operation in that area may not get his license renewed. This, as FCC chief rules enforcer Riley Hollingsworth writes to Daniel Barrett, KE4NOK of Kings Mountain to tell him that his application to renew his ticket has been referred to the enforcement arm of the agency by the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau.

According to Hollingsworth’s letter, the action was based on information coming to the Commission's attention that Barrett is alleged to have used his station to interfere with various repeater operations on 145.350, 145.450 and 147.120 MHz and that he ignored requests of repeater control operators to refrain from using their repeaters. Hollingsworth’s note also says that Barrett ignored the Commission Warning letter dated December 24th of 2003 regarding use of and interference to the repeaters and that apparently Barrett’s use of, and interference to, these repeaters continues.

Hollingsworth’s letter tells Barrett that his renewal application will not be routinely granted. Rather, that the Commission may need additional information from KE4NOK in order to determine his qualifications to remain a Commission license. The letter also tells Barrett that it may be necessary to designate his application for an evidentiary hearing before an Administrative Law Judge. In such a proceeding Barrett would be required to appear at a hearing in Washington, DC. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: UNLICENSED BROADCASTER CHALLENGES FCC’s AUTHORITY

An unlicensed radio station taken off the air by the FCC last fall has challenged the regulatory agency in federal court. Attorney Mark Vermeulen, representing San Francisco Liberation Radio, says that the seizure of the station's equipment in an October 2003 raid came without proper notice and violated Constitutional protections of due process and the First Amendment.

In an appearance before U.S. District Judge Susan Illston, Vermeulen argued that -- quote -- "It's a bedrock principle that parties have a right to pre-seizure notice and a right to be heard.

But government attorney Sarah Winslow disagreed with Vermeulen's free speech arguments. She told Judge Illston that there is no First Amendment right to broadcast without a license from the FCC.

The FCC had monitored San Francisco Liberation Radio for years. They eventually tracked the station to a laundry room basement in the San Francisco home of James and Charlotte Hatch. The Hatches never made a secret of their operations. They also claim that they had unsuccessfully sought an FCC license to operate legally. (Published reports)

FOR THE BIRDS: FCC RETAINS BIOLOGICAL CONSULTANT

Remember all those stories about thousands of migratory birds getting killed by running into radio towers? Well the FCC has now retained the services of Avatar Environmental Services of West Chester, Pennsylvania as a biological consultant. This, to assist in fulfilling the FCC's role under the National Environmental Policy Act and other federal environmental statutes.

The CGC Communicator reports that Avatar will give the Commission access to the services of experts with training and experience in evaluating the impact of construction projects on animal and plant species.

According to CGC, Avatar has performed similar services for other agencies. The possible impact of communications towers on migratory birds is one of the immediate pressing issues. (CGC)

RADIO CELEBRATIONS: W6RO AT AGE 25

A big celebration out West in the world of Amateur Radio. This as the Queen Mary Ocean liner ham radio station W6RO turned 25 on April 29th.

W6RO is actually the club call sign of the Associated Radio Amateurs of Long Beach, California. Long Beach is where the retired ocean voyager is permanently birthed and open to the public as a tourist attraction. The club operates the W6RO station which is located in the Wireless Room adjoining the ships historic radio museum.

In its two and a half decades of operation, visiting hams from around the world have called C-Q and made numerous contacts using its gear, and its well known call sign phonetics of W-6-Rolling Ocean. (W6RO)

HAM RADIO BOOKS: NEW VHF PROPAGATION BOOK FROM CQ

CQ Communications has announced the publication of a new resource book for hams active on VHF and UHF bands. Its a book for those who want to learn more about long-distance propagation possibilities available to them.

Titled "VHF Propagation - A Practical Guide for Radio Amateurs" the book examine each of the most common long-distance propagation "modes" found on these bands. Topics covered include tropospheric scatter and ducting, Sporadic-E, Aurora, 6-meters and the F-layer, transequatorial and more. The book then explains how each mode occurs and offer tips on making the most of these band openings.

"VHF Propagation - A Practical Guide for Radio Amateurs" was written by Ken Neubeck, WB2AMU, and Gordon West, WB6NOA. It is available from many ham radio dealers or direct from CQ anytime through the CQ online bookstore. To find it take your web browser to www.cq-amateur-radio.com and then click on “Visit the CQ Store." (CQ)

THE SOCIAL CIRCUIT: ROCHESTER HAMFEST IN JUNE

With the 2004 Dayton Hamvention now a part of history, we turn to the ham radio social circuit for the rest of 2004. Next up is the giant Rochester Hamfest the weekend of June 4th through the 6th. As usual, it takes place at the Monroe County Fairgrounds and is combined with the ARRL Atlantic Division Convention.

Chairman Harold Smith, K2HC, tells Newsline that this years outing features over 100 inside exhibitors, 1200 flea market spaces and that very much coveted on site free parking. He also says that area hotels can be found for $69 a nmight or less.

Interested in finding out more? You can do it right on-line at www.rochesterhamfest.org or by calling the hamfest office at 584-424-7184 during business hours Eastern Daylight Time. (Rochester Hamfest)

RADIO HONORS: HAM HONORED FOR SERVICE IN IRAQ

The United States Department of Commerce has honored Fredrick Matos, W3ICM, of Annapolis, Maryland. This by presenting him with its Gold Medal Award for Distinguished Achievement.

The ARRL Letter says that Matos is an employee of the National Telecommunications and Information Administration. He was given the honor for his work to help establish telecommunications in Iraq, where he was deployed for nine months.

While in Iraq, Matos who also holds the Iraqi call YI3DX helped establish a central telecommunications authority along with assigning frequencies to local law enforcement groups. He was also responsible for issuing YI Amateur Radio licenses to both nationals and visitors.

In presenting the award April 13, Commerce Secretary Donald L. Evans welcomed Matos home and thanked him for his role in "expanding freedom around the world." (ARRL, Daily DX)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: BEWARE OF FOREIGN PET CHIPS

Heres a communications story of a different sort, but one that affects anyone with a four legged friend around the house. The United States Humane Society and other animal care organizations are cautioning pet owners that the nation's animal shelters may not have the proper scanning devices to detect and read some foreign manufactured pet identification microchip.

The warning comes as a European company has entered the microchip market and is selling its microchips in approximately 440 veterinary clinics housed in one of the nation's largest pet product retailers. But the company has not yet provided many of the nation's shelters, humane societies and veterinary hospitals with compatible scanners needed to read all the microchips currently in pets. As a result, the animal protection groups recommend that pet owners thinking about getting their pets micro-chipped contact both the chip manufacturer and their local shelter. This, to make certain that compatible 125 kHz scanners are present in their community. (Science OnLine)

THAT FINAL ITEM: UP - UP - AND AWAY

And finally this week, we go back to the Dayton Hamvention where Amateur Radio Newsline ran into one of the nations best known experts in Amateur Radio balloon launches. And does Bill Brown, WB8ELK have a story about recruiting new young hams using high altitude ham radio carrying balloons. Amateur Radio Newsline's David Black, KB4KCH, has the details:

Bill Brown's class is all about going up up and away--and getting college credit at the same time. Brown teaches a course on building balloon payloads at the University of Alabama in Huntsville--and he makes amateur radio a big part of the curriculum.

--

Audio only: Hear it at www.arnewsline.org

--

The ham bands get used not just by the students--but by what goes up. Amateur radio experiments are aboard the payloads students assemble.

--

Audio only: Hear it at www.arnewsline.org

--

Brown's class is also creating a positive effect on amateur radio—by helping bring new people into the service:

--

Audio only: Hear it at www.arnewsline.org

--

About five students become licensed each semester. From the South - East bureau in Birmingham Alabama, I'm David Black , KB4KCH, for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

I was thinking about trying a inverted v in the backyard attached to a tree. I was going to make some kind of wooden insulator for the middle and screw that into a tree as high up as I can get on a ladder.

I have a 4 foot drop or so on the back of the house compared to the front. All my trees are in the back yard. Its sort of like a mini forest. Would a inverted V still perform well if the top wasnt above my house? I have vinyl siding so maybe I would be better off just keeping the antenna indoors?

thanks

Good idea Jim, but I suggest a wrist rocket sling shot and a ball bearing attached to a string, or your wire when you get the hang of it. Beware of where it lands.

Once you get it up in the -top- of the tree the tuner needs to be one you can trust.

Jim;

What are your goals for the antenna? There are several things you need to realize about using an inverted vee antenna.

First the antenna is highly directional. The main direction of maximum signal is perpendicular to the plane of the triangle formed by the Vee. If you want omni directional coverage this is not the antenna you want to use.

Second the impedance, thus the SWR, varies with the angle between the two wires. An angle of around 90 degrees or more should be used. Smaller angles will result in a lowering of the feed-point impedance possibility making the match to a 50 ohm coax line poor. Also as the angle varies the required length will change for resonance. Also as the angle decreases the frequency range over which you will get an acceptable match will also tend to decrease too.

Third you may have problems with RF energy getting back in to the radio. The general fix for this is to install some ferrite toroids at the feed-point on the coax cable, or coiling up a number of turns of coax at the same location. You can try 6 to 12 turns in a coil about 6 inches in diameter and taped to hold the loop in shape.

Finally the point of maximum signal radiation from the antenna is at the feed-point. Getting the feed-point as high up as you can will improve the signal.

Not much point in putting up an outside antenna if you can't get it in the air. Like Mopar suggested, use a sling-shot and a fishing weight to get it as high as you can. Don't worry about the shape so much as the height. You won't be able to trim the elements after it's in the tree so you will need a tuner in the shack. You can get a cheap MFJ for about $20 that will work just fine. And since you are putting it in the trees, impedance isn't going to be anywhere near what you might predict, which is another reason to use the tuner. Also, I suggest using balanced twinlead instead of coax for your transmission line because it's cheaper, because the antenna system will be easier to tune, and because RF grounding at the radio is not as important as when the transmission line is unbalanced. Just don't forget a good lightning ground!

Boy, glad I don't live in natural disaster country anymore. I'd still take an earthquake once every hundred years, good thing I don't live in earthquake country either.

If your going to do it, get it above the house.
Vinyl siding or not, the house will block part of the antenna.
Why not use one of the tree's, mount an antenna on the top? That would put it well above the house and give you better performance.

I don't live in natural disaster country either, but last night we had our first tornado warning in my memory. I haven't seen a storm like that in a looooong time. The whole sky was lit up almost continuously with lightning and there was a torrential downpour.

A lot of folks lost power; it wasn't pretty. I shut down the pc and pulled the phone line from the dsl modem. Lost the satellite TV a few times as well (and there is a new 3 head dish up there with signal strengths 50% higher than when the system was first installed, but still lost the signal).

It is overcast now and hasn't rained in over 12 hours. Still quite a bit of standing water in the street.

Mopar,

We had it last night. The whole sky was lit up almost continuously for some time. We were warned about possible tornados. Lost the satellite tv a number of times despite a new dish with signal levels 50% higher than when the system was first installed. A lot of folks lost power last night in the Rochester area.

Hmmm ... tornado warnings? Better raise the gasoline prices some more LOL (just put brakes on the car and now I see $2.13 per gallon for gas ... good grief, now I hear that we have to import gasoline as well as oil as the refineries can't keep up. Prices go higher as the oil companies report record profits. Better re-elect Bush not).

Jim,

Just get a good antenna tuner and get the thing as high off the ground as is practical. Many years ago, I used a long wire antenna. The thing went from the house to a tree and then from tree to tree. It was several hundred feet long and was fed against a multiple ground. All 8 gauge wire and it performed like gangbusters.

Any antenna that is fairly long (multiple wavelengths of the signal) will be fairly directional. I know I had good signal reports from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Italy, but never got a good signal report from England. Just so-so.

Actually I have five antennas in total setup. The virtue of V/UHF antennas is they don't have to be big to have high gain.

We had a confirmed touchdown at 108 and the Henry/Putnam Co line this afternoon at 6 PM, and we have another cell hitting us now, and a third right on it's tail. He have 2 towns with downed trees and power lines at the moment.

Did ya see Cleveland on the news? many people lost boats yesterday. Glad mine is at Lake St. Mary's, I almost brought it up to Port Clinton, I have a 28 ft Cabin Cruiser.

Well, we never get Tornado warnings, a matter of fact, since I moved out here the only warning we get are for rivers rising to flood stage. We do get winter storm warnings for the Sierra, but that's about the only warnings we get.

If one of the "saucer men" were to land in your front lawn and hang out and drink a few beers with you, would you not then have "proof" that alien life exists? Would that proof be from observation? The fact that you cannot provide anything other than your own words to validate the claim to others does not diminish its value as empirical data.

I have all the "proof" that I need to make the claim that a definite majority of CB'ers are running illegal. That you choose to not believe it is your problem.

They most certainly ARE illegal. They are considered "devices for the purpose of attracting attention or amusement".

Check part 95:

Sec. 95.631 Emission types.

(c) A CB transmitter may transmit only emission types A1D, H1D, J1D, R1D, A3E, H3E, J3E, R3E. A non-voice emission is limited to selective calling or tone-operated squelch tones to establish or continue voice communications. See Sec. 95.412 (b) and (c).

Sec. 95.412 (CB Rule 12) What communications may be transmitted? (Pay attention to (b)

(a) You may use your CB station to transmit two-way plain language communications. Two-way plain language communications are communications without codes or coded messages. Operating signals such as ``ten codes'' are not considered codes or coded messages. You may transmit two-way plain language communications only to other CB stations, to units of your own CB station or to authorized government stations on CB frequencies about--
(1) Your personal or business activities or those of members of your immediate family living in your household;

(2) Emergencies (see CB Rule 18, Sec. 95.418);
(3) Traveler assistance (see CB Rule 18, Sec. 95.418); or
(4) Civil defense activities in connection with official tests or drills conducted by, or actual emergencies announced by, the civil defense agency with authority over the area in which your station is located.
(b) You may use your CB station to transmit a tone signal only when the signal is used to make contact or to continue communications. (Examples of circuits using these signals are tone operated squelch and selective calling circuits.) If the signal is an audible tone, it must last no longer than 15 seconds at one time. If the signal is a subaudible tone, it may be transmitted continuously only as long as you are talking.
(c) You may use your CB station to transmit one-way communications (messages which are not intended to establish communications between two or more particular CB stations) only for emergency communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or voice paging.

RULE 13 - Illegal Communications (Pay attention to [2] and [6])

{A} You must NOT use a CB station-

[1] in connection with activity which is against federal, state or local law;
[2] to transmit obscene, indecent or profane words, language or meaning;
[3] to interfere intentionally with the communications of another CB station;
[4] to transmit one-way communications, EXCEPT for emergency communications, traveler assistance, brief tests (radio checks) or voice paging;
[5] to advertise or solicit the sale of any goods or services;
[6] to transmit music, whistling, sound effects or any material to amuse or entertain;
[7] to transmit any sound effect solely to attract attention;
[8] to transmit the word "MAYDAY" or use any other international distress signal, EXCEPT when your station is located in a ship, aircraft or other vehicle which is threatened with GRAVE AND IMMINENT danger and you are requesting IMMEDIATE assistance. [9] to communicate with, or ATTEMPT to communicate with, any CB station more than 155.3 miles (250 kilometers) away;

An echo box is a "sound effect" device and as such is prohibited by the above rule. Same goes for roger beeps. Since they do not facilitate communication, or work as a tone activated squelch, they are not permitted.

> No wonder you left rules, or who somehow feel that their selfish pursuits override

From my point of view, they are one and the same. My observations became my data. The fact that you refuse to accept my word on it is your problem.

>Data is arived at via observation.

Exactly!

> Look up the word "empirical" and try placing that term

Yea it's sort of redundant, but when I have to deal with intellectual lightweights like you, sometime redundancy is necessary to get the point across.

Actually the dictionary definition is:

1. Based on observation or experiment.

2. Guided by practical experience and not theory.

Nowhere does it call for "proof".

Now go ahead and make the predictable next move of attempting to discredit my dictionary for you own faux-pax.

See definition (2) above.

So then you make the claim that my 30+ year "experiment" with CB radio is not valid because the conclusions I came to do not sit well with you? I have all the "proof" I need. I don't need the approval of someone who's operating habits bolster my statistics.

You are not worthy of the effort to provide what you will ultimately the idea of faith.

I am not known by my call on this newsgroup. Anything beyond that is irrelevant

Yet you are the one who once claimed that I "flaunt" my ham status, yet the proof is on the pudding that you are the one who continues to bring the fact that I'm a ham into the discussion.

If, as you also once claimed, that possession of a ham license is irrelevant, then why bring it up at all?

Troubles again? LOL. After all these years of my not posting on weekends and remaining with the same webtv service with the same posted email, your self-esteem must really need the boost to convince yourself I would suddenly do so, especially under another handle, when you have made me so proud of this one by your continual fits and spasms at the mere thought of Twistedhed, never mind the mention.
  Despite your many failures, this too may be added to your ever gowing list, for it is about as accurate as your other claims, such as I am Dave McCambell and Roger Wiseman.
I can take no credit for the showtune to which you have been made to dance, courtesy of Bada Bing, but Alas, I am not he.
Your suffering is quite apparent. The term "Twistedhed" appears to be all-consuming of you lately,,day,,night,,,lol, quite illustrative of your suffering and unhealthy obesssive nature.
Nevertheless, I have been sharing several pics of my weekend excursions asea with ng regs,,,,'tis a shame you're always left out of the loop, but if anyone else wants to see some great pics of the beautiful weather and catches we are experiencing off the coast,,say the word.
Congratulations to K4KWH,,the newest member of the Church of Twistedhed.
N7VCF will teach you how to properly worship, KC8LDO will teach you how to get the word out., both will teach you how to fail regularly.

We here in Tampa Bay have a bunch of real estate we are unloading. We have owned the town for several years now and are now leaving it for whoever wishes to claim it. We took it when it suited us, used it to further our own personal agenda, and now, since it is no longer any use to us, we are discarding it. Whoever wants the city of Philthadelphia, all you have to do is figure out a way to haul such an enormous amount of trash at once and take it away.

Those philthy people playing dirty at all their sports just don't seem to learn that good triumphs over evil in the end,,the Tampa Bay Bucs had to close down and Baptize the Philthy Vet Stadium with a win to get their attention that there are better ways to act and play.

Philthy's trash talk and poor sportsmanship continued. The Bucs then were commissioned to Christen Philthy's new home with another win to get them to admit the errors of their ways and take notice. Still, some hard core demons remained. The exorcism, which was performed Saturday night, was an incredible success. City of "brotherly love" is hereby officially discarded by the proud citizens of Tampa Bay and Philthadelphia Freedom is now Philthadelphia Futility! Congratulations to the Tampa Bay Lightning! The series against Philthydelphia was OUR Stanley Cup, no matter what happens with Calgary. Tampa Bay,,,so many champions, so little nice folk from Philthy!

Landshark

I don't live in natural disaster country either, but last night we had our first tornado warning in my memory. I haven't seen a storm like that in a looooong time. The whole sky was lit up almost continuously with lightning and there was a torrential downpour.
A lot of folks lost power; it wasn't pretty. I shut down the pc and pulled the phone line from the dsl modem. Lost the satellite TV a few times as well (and there is a new 3 head dish up there with signal strengths 50% higher than when the system was first installed, but still lost the signal).
It is overcast now and hasn't rained in over 12 hours. Still quite a bit of standing water in the street.
Best regards from Rochester, NY
Jim

That storm sounds like afternoon time in Tampa Bay during summer. Next time we have a super light show I'll take some pics.
Glad everything is A-ok up that-a-way. The weather here has been Heaven sent, lately. The breeze off the water has stuck around much longer than any have anticipated. The Kingfish are slamming just about everything you toss at them, the Gag Grouper are on the rocky bottoms, and the Cobia are sloshing through the beach areas with stingrays on their backs. A little bit of chum and the bullsharks are in a frenzy, but nothing beats watching the Clownfish roll over each other.

Majority? Hahha,,that would equal exactly what you said you do not do,,,,more than 51%...LOL....your hypocrisy radiates bullshit.

The word "majority" IS most certainly specific Davie,,,it defines

But of course, you can point to or illustrate none of this "empirical"
(snicker) data,,,you want only to be taken at your word,,,something you ruined long ago, but I will give you another benefit of doubt,,,present something of this "empirical" data, as "empirical" means "provable or

Your hearsay and personal experience is not empirical data, regardless

Empirical data is PROOF derived from your personal experiences. Merely claiming such
and assuming is not "empirical".

LOL,,,,,my, but I have an uncanny ability to invoke speak of aliens among yourself, KC8LDO, and N7VCF. It is extremely difficult for the three of you to hold a pertinent debatable topic on anything without the htree of you becoming angry and incoherent, highly illustrative of a severe communication deficit. Just one more reason the three of you have become known as obnoxious lids among the world of hammie radio via your erratic behavior and lack of self control on usenet.

The fact that you cannot provide anything other than your own words to validate the claim to others does not diminish its value as empirical data.

>I have all the "proof" that I need to make the (chuckle),,,In reality, it's your problem that you choose to refer to your opinion as "empirical data", illustrating you fail to comprhend what the term defines, but far be it from me to challenge your right to remain ignorant and uneducated on such definitions.

The FCC doe not consider a roger beep to be a sound effect for "amusement" or "entertainment", but rather a signal to signify the the end or beginning of a transmission. Ironic how an Extra can be so clueless in his interpretive skills of the FCC rules, but then again, you exhibit an incredible deficit in communicative skill, illustrated by your plethora of off topic and personal rants.

>[7] to transmit any sound effect solely to

Watching your scramble to argue with yourself has always been pleasurable to some of us, Davie-son. None took pleasure with the legality of an echo box. Merely more of your bullshit.

>Same goes for roger beeps. Since they do not >facilitate communication,

But they do facilitate communication. Here's another self-esteem killer for you Davie,,in addition to emailing the FCC to ascertain what EVERYONE else aready knows concerning roger beeps,,,,,ask around on this group,,in fact,,ask around on the hammie groups,,,see if ANY other hammie agrees with you,,,,,,anywhere. Bet you can't find any to agree with you.

>I left because of people like you who either >refuse to operate by the rules, or who

That's funny that you consider me having no respect for others merely because of my freebanding activity. In fact, I have met ops worldwide that have much more respect for others than you have ever exhibited. Your hypocrisy shines when you ump around like a monkey and attack others for their mere choice of topic (read: their freedom of speech) . Go on now, claim you haven't done it so we can present yet another of your self-contradictions and toss another lie of yours in that long, long ever-growing list of lies you present >you couldn't comprehend the rules,

I have no trouble comprehending the rules. You, on the other hand, need a remedial course.

>every time you see someone's signal

>"swinging" wildly, every yahoo on 27.555, and

Merely claiming somehting is empirical does not make it so. Do something you have never been able to do for the masses, Davie,,prove your bullshit claim.

>How does one "prove" a claim that is based on >empirical observation?

That's your problem,,,in addition to the fact that you are now doing the backwards shuffle and claiming "empirical observation" as opposed to your former claim of "empirical DATA".

>From my point of view, they are one and the >same.

Your point of view is not only lacking, but skewered, one-sided, incorrect, misinterpreted, flawed, and steadfastly fixed on remaining ignorant.

>My observations became my data.

Wrong. Observations are but a mere theory without tangible proof.

>The fact that you refuse to accept my word on >it is your problem.

Wrong, as usual, it's your problem that you choose to call observation empirical evidence and are unable to distinguish between the two. Grab a dictionary, for your own sake.

>Data is arived at via observation.

Exactly!
  Look up the word "empirical" and try placing that term again in front of the laughable term you coined "empirical observation"

>Yea it's sort of redundant, but when I have to >deal with intellectual lightweights like you, >sometime redundancy is necessary to get the >point across.

That's it,,blame me for your ignorance and inabilities,,,LOL.
But you DID. Again, look up the word "empirical",,,,it means PROOF supplied via your own experiments,

>Actually the dictionary definition is:

>1. Based on observation or experiment.

>2. Guided by practical experience and not >theory.

>Nowhere does it call for "proof".

>Now go ahead and make the predictable next >move of attempting to discredit my dictionary

>for you own faux-pax.

There is only one standard among the media and it is the AP standards. They utilize one source, not the lightweight junior high books you refer. Try Websters Encyclopedic Unabridged Dictionary. See, Davie-son, the abridged versions are for people like yourself that need spoon-fed and not capable of correct interpretations. Again,,go to the source, as it most certainly does use the term "proof". Quoted verbatim: "Provable or verifiable by experiment or experience." Again,,your personal experience may indeed sway your belief, but without tangible proof, it is merely a theory. Attempting to educate you is futile, as you become angry and begin lodgin personal attacks,,another sure fire sign of your lack of skill, intellect, self-control, tolerance, and ability to remain on subject and hold rational debate with those who hold opposing opinions other than your own, but then again, we have always known that about yourself and such is what contributed to the demise of your self-esteem and your reputation.

however, one's word is NOT proof, no matter how you try to postulate such. In the world of science, one's mere word without proof positive is "a theory" and the word "experiment" is a means of arriving at "proof" and disproving a theory and making it fact. When a theory is proven via fact, (IE: proof) it is no longer a theory It denotes a scientific arrival at a belief (theory) arrived at and based upon by,,taa daa-- "proof",,not ones word based upon their own experiences and assumptions.

>See definition (2) above.

See the ONLY defining source of media acceptance. Such is only presented when one advances in their education.

>So then you make the claim that my 30+ year

>"experiment" with CB radio is not valid

>because the conclusions I came to do not sit >well with you?

Tee-hee...no,,that was your claim.

>I have all the "proof" I need. I don't need the >approval of someone who's operating habits >bolster my statistics.

What statistics? You just claimed you offered no statistics....LOL,,there you go self-contradicting again. Statistic:
Numerical fact. ..LOL..you claimed you avoided giving "exact numbers", yet that is exactly what a statistic encompasses.....man, you really do break down when you're wound up.

> But if you are going to take the position that >unless someone has such proof, that

>everything they say is automatically a lie, you

>are the one with issues.

Not "someone" Davie,,,just you,

>Ah, now we get to the meat of the issue.

>Thank you for admitting your bias.

The bias is in your selective snipping, as you note I don't practice such with you as I have no need. You, on the other hand, are loathe to see yourself as you really are. The "meat of the issue" is that you are unable to produce for any of your claims with any proof, You wish the world totake your many-wild unsubstantiated claims as proof and it simply isn't going to occur. That you see your past failures to produce anything except more lipservice that backs your claims as a "bias" then so be it. I have said it before, I'll say it again, I am biased against liars and hold them right there with a thief. To date, you have made many, many claims that you have been unable to substantiate. When asked to substantiate, you attack like a child that was caught in a lie.
,,as you ahve been unable to present proof for any of your wild assed claims I have ever called you on,

>You are not worthy of the effort to provide >what you will ultimately spin and attempt to >discredit anyway.

Perhaps Im not worthy, but that doesn't change the subject matter that you have been unable to provide for any of your claims. Once again, you point to me and blame me for your inability to substantiate. I love this stuff!!!

> A tough and somewhat duplicitous position

>for someone who claims to believe in God.

My personal faith and believing in God has absolutely nothing to do with not believing one who has failed to produce anything concerning any of his claims, except angry diatribes, off-topic obsessions, hearsay, and personal opinion..

>You demand "proof" in order to believe. That >is in direct contrast to the idea of faith.

LOL,,my faith is in God, not you.

>Why do you feel the need to add my call? This
>.is a CB newsgroup remember?

Because I am of the personal opinion the people should know who attempts to sling and perpetuate bullshit against them on a regular basis and you are known by your call.

>I am not known by my call on this newsgroup.

You most certainly are,...claiming otherwise is but another in a long line of denials and your inability to see yourself as the majority.

>Anything beyond that is irrelevant

>Yet you are the one who once claimed that I

>"flaunt" my ham status,

Wrong...and there you go once again attempting to place words in my mouth when ever you're being force fed crow. No dice,, >yet the proof is on the pudding that you are >the one who continues to bring the fact that

>I'm a ham into the discussion.

Never claimed otherwise. Shore up that deficit so you won't take to making things up and pulling them out of thin air in order to attempt to ease the pain and suffering your ego is experiencing.

>If, as you also once claimed, that possession >of a ham license is irrelevant, then why bring it >up at all?

In context, Davie. It most certainly is relevant when one is a hypocrite reagrding laws such as yourself. It most certainly is relevant when a hypocritical hammie such as yourself defends the felonious N8 and attacks others for the mere (by comparison) and single act of freebanding.
Add to this what a manificent liar you are, and it is all too clear..except to you. Now go on and see how many agree with your adolescent and poorly informed claim that a roger beep is illegal.

Thanks. My swr is doesn't budge on the Washington. On some of the

Riddle me this then Batman, why are there no type accepted LEGAL CB radios produced with a roger beep or an echo?

Judging from the response that export radios get with these little sound effects, that these gimmicks would be a big hit with the toothless, trailer park, welfare set in this country. The fact that they are not being produced is pretty much a de-facto ruling that they are, in fact, illegal.

So YOU need to get a clarification from the FCC. Go ahead, call them!

The FCC had already made this clarification over 20 years ago, long before you were involved in the hobby. A roger beep is considered a sound effect, and as such is illegal. Prove me wrong if you can, but I won't hold my breath.

Superfluous on CB. Especially on AM, where a very distinct carrier dropping, signals the end of transmission.

Anyone with a clear understanding of the rules knows that they are

He's always ranting about how the only proof he needs is his 'word' because, as he says, "truth is my friend". Now whenever someone asks him for proof beyond his own warped opinions he will just quote your line above instead of wiggling away.

Steve, not to belittle your situation, but if you need plans for the ark, we have several styles we build down here every year for the tropical weather season. ;-) I'm sure Twist has few from down his way as well.

Hope things dry up!

Sorry Dave, my old Galaxy DX-949 came stock woith a roger beep...and was/is FCC type accepted.

http://www.galaxyradios.com/cb/949.html

Not to mention the DX-959. (Never owned this one though.)

Hello!

Can anybody help me with a usermanual on the Zetagi HP1000 Transmatch?
There are this "set" wheel probably a calibration wheel that i`m not sure how to use an therefore i`m not sure if i could trust the results on the meters.

So if anyone know where to download a user manual or just explain howtoo on the "set" wheel that would be great.

Thanx alot

has absolutely sucked for boating, now your boat has washed away and like you said, the insurance adjuster wants to stick you without kissing you first.

Sorry to hear about that, the weather here is lovely right now.

We often suffer strong winds and snow here in the winter, and it is recommended that people carry a shovel in their car just in case they get trapped.
There are lovely views in this weather, but I hate the winters. We often lose the electricity in winter, but the area has also been known to lose it's water supply also.
One thing you need to remember if you live here in the winter... don't eat the yellow snow.

The kids love it (the weather, not yellow snow). Because so many teachers come from the nearest city, it doesn't take much for the snow to shut the schools.

Regards.

Peter.

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out!

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

FREE!!

For advanced techs and serious radio hobbyists, we're now offering a FREE copy of our previously published "CB EPROM DATA BOOK" by Martin Pickering. (EPROM = Erasable Programmable Read Only Memory.) We sold it for many years but it's now out of print. This little manual of 60 illustrated pages is an absolute GEM of CB technical knowledge you'll just never find anywhere else. And it's yours for FREE from our Web site.

This book reveals the secrets of advanced channel programming, and picks up where our "CB PLL DATA BOOK" (www.cbcintl.com/pllbook.htm) leaves off. You'll get a thorough background in how these amazing programmable chips can be used to modify many popular CB PLL circuits for expanded frequency coverage. Covers the basic programming techniques, and even includes real PC board artwork for making EPROM circuits. Sample artwork includes EPROM boards for the popular MB8719, PLL02A, ï¿½PD2824, and ï¿½PD858 PLL circuits.

Best of all, the price is right! Download your FREE copy of "THE CB EPROM DATA BOOK" (948 KB Adobe PDF) at:

Your right though. If you ride a bike, it's not if you ever go down, but when. Also if you ride, you have to know that you can die, unfortunate as it is, it's a fact that can happen.

All hammies license "class" is a matter of public record. You're not special, you're an abherration.
You need email the FCC, as your ignorance will not be quenched by any other excepot the source. A roger beep fits neatly in part "b" of what you presented, and is not illegal on cb. Again, email the FCC for clarification, don't be so lazy and ignorant.

>Riddle me this then Batman,

LMAO,,,gee, to watch you freak out and say it, needs regurgitated.
Google that wonderful little phrase and the abusive sock puppets behind that phrase.....you always chew on the rusty razor blades when tossed your way.

>Judging from the response that export radios >get with these little sound effects, that these

Now, Davie, no need for your family bio,,remain focused and try not to "judge",,it has always been part of what ails you.

>The fact that they are not being produced is >pretty much a de-facto ruling that they are, in >fact, illegal.

The only thing "de-facto" is your flawed logic and mind numbing but extremely entertaining and amusing misinterpretations. So YOU need to get a clarification from the FCC. Go ahead, call them!

>The FCC had already made this clarification >over 20 years ago, long before you were >involved in the hobby.

Post it. Show the clarification where the FCC holds a roger beep not only as a sound effect, but illegal. Your answer to every single claim you have ever presented when asked for proof is the entertaining, but the very sad, "Prove me wrong". An ongoing beg of having one disprove your claim, leaving absolutely nothing but your empty words and pleas to take you at your word,,,time after time after pathetic time..LOL.
The self-professed claim you have been in the hobby for over thirty years coupled with your added ignorance concerning another's personal life and time in radio, is nothing but indicative of the elevation you place upon one's time involved in radio, meaning you arrogantly feel the longer one has been in radio, the "better" or somehow, more knowledgeable one must be,,,,I love when you spout such ignorance.
Thirty years is not all that long in radio,,,some of us were exposed to radio as soon as we could key the mic,,,much longer than what you arrogantly, disainfully, and incorrectly hold as your qualifications over another. The results are those of us who know better, correct ignorant hammielids such as yourself that spew disinformation about, whether through intentional ignorance or otherwise.

>A roger beep is considered a sound effect, >and as such is illegal. Prove me wrong if you >can, but I won't hold my breath.

Again, some of us have no need to prove you wrong and are quite content watching you scream ignorance proudly. Watching you hold steadfastly to such an issue is rather amusing. I'd rather leave you out to bloody yourself a bit more. Your arrogance is too self-limiting to cross with your brusied ego at such a time as this.

>[6] to transmit music, whistling, sound effects

>or any material to amuse or entertain;

The FCC does not consider a roger beep to be a sound effect for "amusement" or "entertainment", >Prove it!

(Translation: Wahhhhhhhhhh)

>We have only your heresay.

The heresay is all yours. You claimed the FCC holds a roger beep as a sound effect. The burden of proof is always on the one who makes the claim. Of course, you bleeding all over the place attests to just that.

>Provide the link

>or we'll all conclude that this is yet another of >your lies.

LOL,,,,there is no "we:,,you are all alone in this lost, laughable claim of yours, N3CVJ. Even the your hammie buds of Lelnad and Geogre and Gillinad know the facts of this matter. It's why you're all alone on another claim you made with nothing to back you but "Waaaaaaaaaa".

>but rather a signal to signify the the >end or beginning of a transmission.

>Superfluous on CB. Especially on AM, where >a very distinct carrier dropping, signals the >end of transmission.

>[7] to transmit any sound effect solely to >attract attention;

And that's exactly what a roger beep is.

>An echo box is a "sound effect" device and as >such is prohibited by the above rule.

Watching your scramble to argue with yourself has always been pleasurable to some of us, Davie-son. None took pleasure with the legality of an echo box. Merely more of your bullshit.

>I'll take that as an acknowledgment of your >inability to disprove my statement.

LOL,,,,go right ahead and take it any way you please, You're being forced to argue with yourself. No one took issue with that statement.

>Same goes for roger beeps. Since they do not >facilitate communication,

But they do facilitate communication.

>The FCC would appear to think otherwise.

No,you appear to think otherwise, not the FCC.

>If

>not, then every last little Cobra 19 wannabe rig >would have them installed by the factory.

The FCC is not in the habit of manufacturing radios, so the link you attempt to present between Cobra and the FCC is non-existent. Another little gem to spear this poor analogy through its black little heart is the fact that many microphones for cb have roger beeps, including Cobra brand, but pointing out such information to you has resulted in overload of your gray matter, as such has been met with a return of off-topic hostility.

Here's another self-esteem killer for you Davie,,in addition to emailing the FCC to ascertain what EVERYONE else aready knows concerning roger beeps,,,,,ask around on this group,,in fact,,ask around on the hammie groups,,,see if ANY other hammie agrees with you,,,,,,anywhere. Bet you can't find any to agree with you.

>Anyone with a clear understanding of the rules >knows that they are illegal.

And that statement will haunt you for a time to come, once one of your hammie buds of Lelnad or gillinad or n8 takes pity upon you and educates you.

>The rest? Well

>even you might know a handful of people who >are as psychologically inept as you are and >would agree with you.

>The mental hospitals

>are full of people who thought they could fly.....

And the world is full of dads like yourself who are are only permitted supervised visits with their children once a month.

> And even more who would swear to it.

That's funny that you consider me having no respect for others merely because of my freebanding activity.

>It's not what you do, it's the tone you take >when you defend it.

"Tone"? LMAO,,,poor Davie,,here you go again opening the Hypocrite Hall,,,In the first manner, whatever "tone" you feel I take, would be better served by imitating yourself and initiating offtopic and personal insults? That is the tone you set, Davie-son.
In the second place,,I don't defend my actions to anyone, but you go on and continue to claim that YOUR inquiries directed toward my actions soliticing a response is somehow "defending" such,,,,,merely more of your poor communicative skills you never learned how to hone properly,,,your communication deficit has rendered you unable to manage an exchange of ideas with another who holds opposing views without accusing the other of "defending" ones actions. You are owed no explanation, which is why you have never receieved one, ,,,something that galls you to the point of your continually expressed incapacitance.

>Your staunch defending of >freebanding even though it is illegal. Illegal >operation which amounts to breaking federal >law, which by logical definition makes you a >CRIMINAL.

Your point of view is not only lacking, but skewered, one-sided, incorrect, misinterpreted, flawed, and steadfastly fixed on remaining ignorant, especially when you selectively focus on freebanding, yet defend N8WWM's felonious actions. You're a liar and a hypocrite which makes you a lid.

>I know you are, but what am I?

Acting aout ten years old.
Although your massive communication deficit has you hearing a stutter, I assure you, such is not the case.

>Actually the dictionary definition is:

>1. Based on observation or experiment.

>2. Guided by practical experience and not >theory.

>Nowhere does it call for "proof".

There is only one standard among the media and it is the AP standards. They utilize one source, not the lightweight junior high books you refer. Try Websters Encyclopedic Unabridged Dictionary. See, Davie-son, the abridged versions are for people like yourself that need spoon-fed and not capable of correct interpretations. Again,,go to the source, as it most certainly does use the term "proof". Quoted verbatim: "Provable or verifiable by experiment or experience." Again,,your personal experience may indeed sway your belief, but without tangible proof, it is merely a theory. Attempting to educate you is futile, as you become angry and begin lodging personal attacks,,another sure fire sign of your lack of skill, intellect, self-control, tolerance, and ability to remain on subject and hold rational debate with those who hold opposing opinions other than your own, but then again, we have always known that about yourself and such is what contributed to the demise of your self-esteem and your reputation.

>Thank you for being so predictable.

Your behavior doesn't change,,,,such is to be expected AND predictable. When you're given a rusty razor blade, you invariably stick it in your mouth to chew on. .

> I'm sure I've hit a nerve. My job

>here is done for the day......

LOL...once again, illustrating what a lid you are and your entire agenda,,,,,once you (mistakenly, albeit) feel you have "hit a nerve", you feel victorious. The classic illustration of only one small area that makes you a lid and detrimental pariah to hammie radio and usenet.

Perhaps Im not worthy,

>No "perhaps" about it.

but that doesn't change the subject matter that you have been unable to provide for any of your claims.

>Unwilling, maybe. Unable?

Yes.

>Only you are >unable to put your money where your mouth

>is.

Of course, nothing but lipservice from N3CVJ crying "Waaaaaa believe my claims, believe my claims and ifyoucantdisprovemyclaims then theymustbetrue...waaaaa".
LOL.

>Once again, you are simply not worth my >trouble.

My personal faith and believing in God has absolutely nothing to do with not believing one who has failed to produce anything concerning any of his claims, except angry diatribes,
off-topic obsessions, hearsay, and personal opinion..

>Sounds like you're talking about (or is that to?) >yourself again.

It does sound like that, and that's only because you selectively snipped the hilarious line where you begged me to explain why I have faith in God but not you, a known liar. Starved for status, you are indeed.

>Among your other psychiatric ailments, are >you also schizophrenic?

>Dave

>N3CVJ

It has come to my attention that all the manias you toss about as insult are the ones from which you more than likely suffer. You typify the classic projectionist and search for more insults as you angrily post along,,,,,,,. It all makes sense when taken into consideration all but the most supervised of visits were taken from you involving your child. You realy should try and drop other's personal lives from your posts and try attacking the post's view instead of the poster, but then again, such is the reason you suffer from such a communication deficit...you've never learned how to do so properly, and the hammie license only added to your low self-esteem as it brought you none of the respect you demand by sheer virtue of it Respect is earned as a person and must be given in order to be received,,another concept that is foreign to your lowl self due your deficits and learning disabilities.. One need only reflect on your views on roger beeps being illegal for an afternoon chuckle of monstrous but non-gregarious proportion.

Those philthy people playing dirty at all their sports just don't seem to learn that good triumphs over evil in the end,,the Tampa Bay Bucs had to close down and Baptize the Philthy Vet Stadium with a win to get their attention that there are better ways to act and play.

Philthy's trash talk and poor sportsmanship continued. The Bucs then were commissioned to Christen Philthy's new home with another win to get them to admit the errors of their ways and take notice. Still, some hard core demons remained. The exorcism, which was performed Saturday night, was an incredible success. City of "brotherly love" is hereby officially discarded by the proud citizens of Tampa Bay and Philthadelphia Freedom is now Philthadelphia Futility! Congratulations to the Tampa Bay Lightning! The series against Philthydelphia was OUR Stanley Cup, no matter what happens with Calgary. Tampa Bay,,,so many champions, so little nice folk from Philthy!

Hehhehe,,poor Davie.
This "meltdown" you speak of began with the closing of the Vets and you carry the tradition quite illustrative of the losers in Philthy. In fact, your are the epitome of a Philthadelphian, consumed with rage who is not really sure where it comes from. Look around you, Philthy has become a hole of angry, ignorant people.
In addition, your unyielding need to look to another for the origination of your misery is testament to your wrecked self-esteem. .
Hehhe,,,get a life, Davie, as patrolling usenet for what you feel is wrong with America is yet another reactive, non-proactive approach you foster. You are wrapped way to tight for usenet.

Methinks the Kennelmaster needs an increase in pay. Your litter of pups are growing and any day you will be accused of being me....a terrible curse that holds mystic power over the hobbled few hammies that call themself the akc. Or will I be accused of being you? Enjoy the cornfusion and chaotic nature of the hapless and clueless troubled posse.

This also contradicts N3CVJ's recent claim that the repeater in question was shared and co-owned. In fact, this post, albeit a lie, confirms that he was attempting to portray the repeater using the Phelps was HIS. Note the words "MY repeater"..."MY Stationmaster". Total opposite of what he recently claimed.

Troubles again? LOL. After all these years of my not posting on weekends and remaining with the same webtv service with the same posted email, your self-esteem must really need the boost to convince yourself I would suddenly do so, especially under another handle, when you have made me so proud of this one by your continual fits and spasms at the mere thought of Twistedhed, never mind the mention.
Despite your many failures, this too may be added to your ever gowing list, for it is about as accurate as your other claims, such as I am Dave McCambell and Roger Wiseman.
I can take no credit for the showtune to which you have been made to dance, courtesy of Bada Bing, but Alas, I am not he.
Your suffering is quite apparent. The term "Twistedhed" appears to be all-consuming of you lately,,day,,night,,,lol, quite illustrative of your suffering and unhealthy obesssive nature.
Nevertheless, I have been sharing several pics of my weekend excursions asea with ng regs,,,,'tis a shame you're always left out of the loop, but if anyone else wants to see some great pics of the beautiful weather and catches we are experiencing off the coast,,say the word.
Congratulations to K4KWH,,the newest member of the Church of Twistedhed. N7VCF will teach you how to properly worship, KC8LDO will teach you how to get the word out., both will teach you how to fail regularly.

Hi - I have a Cobra 75 WX ST that has done great duty for me for the last 5 years. In the last couple of months though I have noticed an increase in "noise" from the unit - sounding rather like the speaker is blown.

I took the unit apart (it's way past warranty) and everything looks fine although I didn't remove the speaker which is embedded in the face. I'm expecting that I need to replace the speaker, or is there something else I should examine?

If I need to replace the speaker, or have it checed by an "expert", is there a shop in the north part of Toronto - I work at the 401 & 404 - which can reliably do the job for a good price?

Thanks

Have you considered just adding an external speaker? These are generally of much higher quality as well.

5854. Kennedy Assassination: New Audio!

First off, just want to say thanks... I've received a number of private emails from collectors who have amateur recordings of one or even both of the two Kennedy assassinations, and I'm deeply grateful for all these responses! There are some great people out there, thank you!

An update. I am still looking for new audio concerning both assassinations...

So if you personally tape-recorded -- or know of anyone else who tape-recorded -- any television or radio broadcasts concerning one or both of the two Kennedy assassinations, please contact me!

I'm interested in any such recordings made during the JFK assassination in November 1963 and/or the RFK assassination in June 1968. Whether it's a network or local broadcast, whether the sound recording of that broadcast is of good quality or poor quality, whether the audio is distorted, whether it was recorded in a major market or in a minor market, I want to know about it!

It could be audio tape your dad rolled on using his old reel-to-reel tape recorder on Friday, November 22, 1963 (or perhaps later that same weekend). It could be a friend or acquaintance who mentioned to you that he recorded live coverage on June 5, 1968. It could be someone you know who acquired a recorded broadcast that someone else made.

I'm a collector, so if you have anything like this or know of someone else who does... please email me or have them email me at:

brad.johnson@turner.com
or bkj333@aol.com

Thank you so much!

If he attempts to rely on only his "word" as truth when justifying his position, while demanding irrefutable proof from others for the same, that is glaringly hypocritical.

When you keep adding dirt to a glass of water, why should it surprise you that you end up with mud?

You are going to base your position on the semantics of my posts? Yes the repeater is co owned, but I am one of the owners. Since I take care of all the technical issues, I tend to think of it as "mine" in the same vein that Scotty refers to the warp engines of the Starship Enterprise as "his".

Would you happen to to have the FCC I.D. number of that radio? That radio, other than the roger beep, also has variable power, something else no other legal CB has. I have my doubts that this radio is entirely legal.

Well, by golly, I goofed again. The FCC ID number is C2R-DX-2547, it's a Ranger, and it is legal for CB. But what I didn't see on the Galaxy website was a built-in roger-beep -- instead the board is available as an accessory.

I'm actually enjoying his latest meltdown. He even changed NICs, and he's spewing out even more frothy rhetoric and vitriol at an increased pace.

Spin and obfuscation are Twisty's best friends, but will end up his

Um, nowhere on that "link" is it stated that the radio is type accepted nor is there an FCC I.D. number listed. So I ask again, does anyone have it?

Galaxy and Ranger are basically one in the same. They are notorious for "pushing the limit" as far as legality is concerned. I've never liked Galaxy radios. They're basically knock-offs of Uniden designs, many of which were not the most reliable.

What I don't understand is your last statement. Which Galaxy website did you see the roger beep listed as an add-on accessory? The link provided above lists the roger beep as a standard feature.

I'm perfectly willing to admit when I'm wrong, but I'm curious when the FCC changed its opinion on roger beeps from their earlier proclamation that they were considered "amusement" devices and therefore not legal. This happened about 20-some years ago when roger beeps first started springing up.

I'm also curious why they now allow variable power. Not since the 60's, when some radios had 100 mW low power positions, have I seen a radio with user adjustable power (Other than walkie-talkies).

Common sense would tell me that if these things were clearly legal, that the manufacturers would rush to include them en-masse as "features". These all enhance the perceived value of a radio, and gives the manufacturers a reason to charge more for things that cost little to add at the factory. Most CBers are mesmerized by bells and whistles, so this would clearly be a marketing plus.

LOL..nope,,,merely on your words, which you maintain should be "proof."
Again, and as usual, when illustrated your words show what a hypocrite you are, they become, according to you, a meaning other than what they actually are, or "semantics".
No, Davie,,,you were quite clear with your words. "My" is not the same as "we". No semantics involved, whatsoever, each word is a very different meaning. Claiming to have meant "we" when you used the term
"I" , even if true (but it's not), would only further that massive communication deficit from which you suffer, as you are struggling to convey just what you mean, effectively. Blaiming another because you can't properly express yourself is your problem.
Claiming other people have faults because they can't "understand" you when you chose to use two very different words with two very different meanings and profess they mean the same thing when they do not,, illlustrates how remote you are in your beliefs compared to the masses. It's why you see maladies in others and balme them for your difficulties,,,classic projection/character flaw.

I didn't watch star trek, as I was never a televison fan. I watch a couple shows on HBO and at times, certain public shows or news.
Despite your attempts at trying to merge fantasy (television) with your reality and bur the lines of what separate the two in your world, the manner in which you "tend to think" is not consistent with the majority, nor does what you "think" have any effect on the definition of the words you selected.

The FCC never held that rule,,,,you are the one "claiming" they did, with no link to provide such. All you did is quote a rule, and ignorantly take it to mean "amusement" encompasses roger beeps. The FCC never said anything of the such,,you did and you're beginning to ramble offtopic with your personal feelings regarding such.

>This happened about 20-some years ago

Quote it. Cite it. Show the rule. Of course, the only thing you can provide is lipservice.

"Fragile" is the word I have heard most often used to describe all three makes.

>What I don't understand is your last statement. Which Galaxy website

You are right, it's in the list. I just missed it the first time.

They might justify it's use under 95.412(b) "You may use your CB station to transmit a tone signal only when the signal is used to make contact or to continue communications." The reason might be that a beep at the end of a transmission is useful to indicate when the person is finished transmitting, and not to 'amuse or entertain'.

>I'm also curious why they now allow variable power. Not since the >60's, when some radios had 100 mW low power positions, have I seen a >radio with user adjustable power (Other than walkie-talkies).

There have been CBs in the past that have had power switches. Some of the handhelds have a low-power switch to save battery power. But the variable-power feature on Galaxys/Rangers is obviously intended to trim the power fed to an amplifier, and I'm sure that is one reason why the FCC doesn't like them.

>Common sense would tell me that if these things were clearly legal,

Who makes CBs anymore besides Galaxy/Ranger and Uniden?

Yes Twitsy says that but he has a way of getting out of it. If you tell him he made a claim and must back it up he says ok but first you must provide proof of every claim you ever made. Then he will keep you tied up with arguments about your claims until you give up and throw in the towel. That way he never has to answer for himself, lol.

I have a noisy that has no respect for people. He has mixing decks which he plays all the time which you can hear through the wall. I have researched ways of interfering with his stereo and came across many web sites stating that cb can affect stereo speakers.

I know this isn't really the group to ask this, but has anyone suggestions on how to interfere with his stereo speakers as he is starting to really get on my nerves.

Any help would be appreciated.

Thanks

Then there is a really fine line here. A single tone might be acceptable under that clause. But those multi-tone "roger beeps", "farts", tarzan yells, and other such devices clearly cross the line into the "amusement" category.

I haven't seen them since the 60's when Lafayette used to have a 100 mW position, which was done supposedly so that you could "legally" operate your radio while waiting for your license application to be processed. The FCC later clarified that in order to qualify for part 15 no license status that not only did the power need to be 100 mW or less, that the antenna must also be self contained. The power switch soon vanished shortly afterward.

> Some of >the handhelds have a low-power switch to save battery power.

Yes! But I have not seen selectable or variable power on a base or mobile "CB".

> But the >variable-power feature on Galaxys/Rangers is obviously intended to >trim the power fed to an amplifier, and I'm sure that is one reason

I'm sure that is the intended use. But if the FCC allows switchable power on walkie-talkies, then I don't understand why this feature has not been used on standard radios. I'll have to peruse the updated technical specs again. Sometimes the FCC can be less than crystal clear.

Admittedly, I am not as "up" on this stuff as I was when I was heavily involved in radio repair. It does seem that the number of manufacturers has diminished to a few sweat shops in China and Malaysia. I don't know if Cybernet is still active or not.

consideration all but the most supervised of visits were taken from you involving your child.

>Projecting?

Certainly.The angrier you get, the more insults you post as you go along. YOU went off-topic and began ranting about mememememe as opposed to the FCC rule you were unable to debate absent of insult and off-topics,,,,lol,,you are the one with a deficit in communications, unable to separate a post from a person. You never learned the basic debate or communication skill of how to attack a post (subject) without attacking the poster (pperson),,,if you do it intentionally, it is borne of your character flaw.
YOU went off-topic and entered insults to this thread. I'm not the one selectively editing the thread and posts to create an illusion of righteousness for myself..you....I'm not the one with issues of low self-worth and self-esteem, coupled with self-hatred and projection of personal issues.....you are.

>You seem to bring it up an awful lot.

You "bring it up" in each and every instance..lol. I merely point out your hypocrisy and return it.

>Along the >lines of "thou doth protest too much".

Which is why you snip the posts....you always distort truth,,,coupled with outright lying and attempting to project a post out of context as a manner in which it was not originally presented....you're a malicious lowlife, Davie.

>It's not too late to call a mental health

If such would aid in your supervised-only visits with your daughter and assist in maintaining a civil relationship with her mother instead of one of hostility with all you come in to contact, I say go for it.

>So now who's the one projecting?

You are. You brought up your off-topic, obsession fancying yourself somehow qualified to judge another merely by what they permit you in a post.
Number one, such illustrates your need for status to the point of creating it for yourself..sign of a low self-esteem and one not satsified with their personal life and accomplishments,,,this gives way to your behavior that demands the need for insulting others,,"projection".
Number two, it illlustrates your self-hatred and dis-satisfaction with your personal self and a bruised ego, as the need for insulting another merely for their opinions and views is highly indicative of a character flaw AND low self-esteem. It is also a picture perfect example of one not capable of adult conversation and debate,,IE: proper communication skills.

>Enjoying yourself?

>I know I am.

I always enjoy myself.

>No need to get THAT personal.......

You are having expressive problems again, Davie. If you were not interested in my self-enjoyment, you should not have inquired of such and entered it into the thread.
I must grin,,,,,, you attempted to give the impression you did not inquire of such by selectively editing your inquiry in your orginal post and leaving only my reply to your inquiry...LOL..that is the second time you attempted to do such in as many days, yet have failed,,,,,Lol..you certainly have a ways with reducing yourself, Davie,,it's what makes you a lid and a detriment to hammie radio. You're part of what is strangling the hobby. You are a problem operator mostly for certain, as it is a great probability that most act on the air in the manner they conduct themselves in this forum,,,as it is all communication with nothing but the most basic communicative skills, something you have yet to graps and employ, necessary. Only the medium is different.

You're out in left field again, Davie. Better unwrap that tinfoil hat you need wear when posting and clear your failed attempts at making yourself clear to the masses.

>You should try it with other people.

Does Kim have a problem with your incredible wit and know you're out here initiating posts concerned with other's personal lives? Ah, in fact, never mind,,,forget I asked that question,,it's not really relevant or all that important.

KEEP IN TOUCH UP TO 7- MILES AWAY!

While most GMRS radios are very useful on land, few have the construction that allows them to survive in the rain or on the water.
Well that's all changed with the Uniden GMRS750.
The GMRS750 provides 2W output power for ultra clear reception and a 7 Mile Range over land or water.
It's water-resistant to JIS4 levels, and adds NOAA Weather Alerts to keep you updated on changing weather conditions.
This Uniden GMRS radio offers twenty-two total channels (15 GMRS and 7 FRS), along with thirty-eight sub-channels for added privacy.
The four "AAA" batteries (included) will run the radio for an impressive eighteen hours.
This radio comes VOX (hands-free) ready, although it is designed to be used with the included headset.
Other features include: backlit LCD display, channel lock, keypad lock, channel scan, five call tones and channel monitoring.
The radio also comes with recharging circuitry should you decide to purchase the recharging kit.
Includes: One GMRS750 radio, VOX headset, four "AAA" Duracell Ultra batteries, belt clip, user's manual and a One Year Warranty.
Model No: GMRS750

These radios are BRAND NEW & are ready to use right out of the box! Click

I plugged some old computer speakers in and the sound quality from them is fine. For the short term I've duct-taped them to the back of the console of the Jeep. I'll probably have to figure out a better

Hello, Dude

Many areas have enacted ordinances which allow the local police to ticket CBs which cause interference, so you might wish to reconsider. The problem is, of course, that the speaker wires can pick up radiation and conduct it back into the audio system which can then rectify (detect) the signal, amplify it, and send it back to the speakers.

To avoid interference, it would be best to have an outdoor antenna, oriented vertically. The reasoning is that most of the speaker wires will be run horizontally. Should you run a horizontal dipole (bent, if necessary), especially around the floor of your apartment/condo, the chances would be great that you would interfere with his stereo - a lot. Of course, you wouldn't want such a dipole right on the wall next to his unit. A stock cb would likely wreck havoc to his stereo if fed into two 9 foot lengths of wire (a dipole) run along the wall between your units, so don't do that. Of course, if you ever had any interference problems, you'd be better off running ssb. It will interfere as much, but your voice won't be recognizable. Hopefully, you wouldn't do something like that.

I had a problem a couple of years ago. A 500 watt entertainment center plus 250 watt subwofer went a long ways to curing the problem. That, plus recordings of "The Thunderer", "Washington Post March", "The Stars and Stripes Forever", and a whole lot of other marches burned onto a cd can work wonders. :))

Hope this helps!

Best regards from Rochester, NY
Jim

Oh, don't turn your power mic up full blast and disconnect the ground from you coax either.

.. and be sure not to buy a small 12v mobile linear amplifier, that runs best on a battery charger with no battery. <g>

Good advice, Jim..hope he never moves in next to me.

thanks for condoning rf interference to a neigbors stereo and not having the guts to own up to it surely the guy will find out its a cb and surly he will come knocking on dudes door and then their will be an ass kicking and it will be your fault Jim. or some other cber will be blamed for it. your solution is typical key clown thinking, low down and dirty like Steveo harassing leland at his home while keeping his ID hidden etc. In the UK there are police just like here all it takes is a polite visit to the guy and ask him to turn down his music if he doesnt respond then get the police to remind him, case closed.

To be honest, it is the way most audio equipment has been manufactured (although this may have improved in the 8 years since I worked in an EMC lab).

Under one test, we destroyed a monitor (as in computer monitor) with only 3 V/M unmodulated carrier! This kind of junk couldn't be sold in Europe at that time. Of course, we've cheapened everything and have the manufacturing largely in China using only the minimum component count necessary to make the equipment work. BTW, the 3 V/M was around 220 MHz. A typical cell phone will hit your noggin with about 60 V/M.

I had to assume that he had already tried "nice" channels; besides, I believe I told him to avoid that horizontal dipole located next to the problem unit. ;)

Perhaps I am wrong in the above assumption, but around here folks will park in front of your driveway and just don't care. About the only thing to get the police involved is if they hear a gunshot in the background when you call them. I'm sure you think I am exaggerating, but, unfortunately, I am not. One murder last night; another two days ago. Folks park where no parking is permitted (and busses can't get through). So, I was going by the assumption that the gentleman had no luck using proper channels; my suggestion was a big stereo with appropriate recordings that most might find irritating if played over and over. I still love Sousa!

Uh, Stevo keeps his id hidden? I'll have to check; the posts I've seen from him do not have his id hidden. Then again, it may just be my imagination.

Best regards from Rochester, NY
Jim

They know my name and the town I live in, Jim. Yet I've been Mr Peebles, cuz they have me on nads roach coach apt video. Dogie even had the sack to email me a warning that they had 'my finger prints on the note that I stuck under Nad's door'.

Did anyone ever ask Leland what my note said?

I've also been the Nascar driver who is somewhat brain-dead, so I can understand that comparison, but he doesn't have an s in his last name ...it gets confusing.

He's running in the Craftsman Truck Series now and doing a little better than he was in the cup car. He used to be a pretty good driver till he had a really bad wreck and head injury. You can hear it in his speech now.

I can't afford to crush my sheet metal. That involves paint and cha$$is on them old hot rods.

I don't think the FCC requires the power to be 'fixed', but rather that it cannot exceed the prescribed maximum.

I have an old Utac on the shelf that has a 1/5 watt power switch. I have seen a similar switch on a couple other radios but I couldn't tell you what they were.

Well, my first guess why power-pots are not standard features on most CB radios is probably because the 4 watt max isn't much power to begin with. Or maybe because the radios were designed to load antennas instead of splatter-boxes. Either way, not all CBers have a craving for radios loaded with knobs, buttons, switches, lights, meters, and a host of redundant and generally useless features -- those radios are for artless ham-wannabe's who want to impress others of their kind.

Unlike you, I am not self absorbed and interested in reading my own words, high fiving myself, and adding to the length of posts. I comment on the relevant (And I use the term loosely) points and discard the rest. Perhaps that comes from the old days on dial-up

Care to elaborate on just what is "strangling" the ham radio hobby? A interest in?

So now you want us to believe that you are some sort of subject matter

You may be right. If so, I'm curious why CB radios didn't avail themselves of "Hi/Low" switches or variable power. Not that today's CBer is interested in reducing their power, but it does reduce interference when you are only talking to local people. And it is another knob to "feature".

Good point. You'd have to drop the power down to .5 watts or less to make a significant difference.

ticket CBs which cause interference, so you might wish to reconsider.
The problem is, of course, that the speaker wires can pick up radiation and conduct it back into the audio system which can then rectify (detect) the signal, amplify it, and send it back to the speakers.
To avoid interference, it would be best to have an outdoor antenna, oriented vertically. The reasoning is that most of the speaker wires will be run horizontally. Should you run a horizontal dipole (bent, if necessary), especially around the floor of your apartment/condo, the chances would be great that you would interfere with his stereo - a lot. Of course, you wouldn't want such a dipole right on the wall next to his unit. A stock cb would likely wreck havoc to his stereo if fed into two 9 foot lengths of wire (a dipole) run along the wall between your units, so don't do that.
Of
course, if you ever had any interference problems, you'd be better off running ssb. It will interfere as much, but your voice won't be recognizable. Hopefully, you wouldn't do something like that.
I had a problem a couple of years ago. A 500 watt entertainment center plus 250 watt subwofer went a long ways to curing the problem. That, plus recordings of "The Thunderer", "Washington Post March", "The Stars and Stripes Forever", and a whole lot of other marches burned onto a cd can work wonders. :))
Hope this helps!
Best regards from Rochester, NY

I have a noisy that has no respect for people. He has mixing decks which he plays all the time which you can hear through the wall. I have researched ways of interfering with his stereo and came across many web sites stating that cb can affect stereo speakers.
I know this isn't really the group to ask this, but has anyone suggestions on how to interfere with his stereo speakers as he is starting to really get on my nerves.
Any help would be appreciated.

YOU went off-topic and entered insults to this thread. I'm not the one selectively editing the thread and posts to create an illusion of righteousness for myself..you are....I'm not the one with issues of low self-worth and self-esteem, coupled with self-hatred and projection of personal issues.....you are.

>Who's the one obsessing now?

You are Davie,,,all your posts are off-topic and of a personal nature because you laughingly failed to produce anything to back any of your bulshit claims. The fact that you ASSumed the FCC holds a roger beep illegal is more professed ignorance. You apparently were corrected by one who took pity on your ignorant rants, so instead of admitting you were wrong, you do what you always do,,,run offtopic and attack the person that illustrtated you are wrong and unable to produce anything that bakcs your bulshit.
You have failed to become educated on how to debate a topic and attack the topic as opposed to attacking the person,,a deficit in communications, no matter how much it pains you to be forced to see yourself as the masses do.

You are. You brought up your off-topic, obsession fancying yourself somehow qualified to judge another merely by what they permit you in a Merely one that illustrates your communication problems, Davie. Your personal problems are illustrated quite effectively by yourself.

Your off-topic rants are not relevant. That you asked if I enjoy myself, then when replied to, snipped your inquiry to give the impression you never inquired of such, is not "relevant" but a deliberate, malicious action, based on your latter comment concerning the reply...LOL....you

Sure,,I could elaborate, but you have proved you cant follow a topic.
You can always attempt to redeem yourself,,,begin with quoting where the FCC holds a roger beep as illegal and the passage where you claim they hold a roger beep as a device of "amusement".
Addressing your latter comment, I have never claimed I have no interest in hammie radio, but all can understand by now your incredible failed attempts at attributing such lies to another.Yes, Davie,,you have world of problems.

>So now you want us to believe that you are

LOL,,that's almost as entertaining as you redundantly self-professing status as some sort of expert on sociology qualified to "diagnose" based only what you are permitted...hehehe.
You are a problem operator mostly for certain, as it is a great probability that most act on the air in the manner they conduct themselves in this forum

>If that is true, then you must be a real >wing-ding on the air.

I am. In fact, I have met many, many great friends through radio over the years. I also have conducted myself as I do here, giving people respect and the benefit of doubt until they prove themselves not worthy, not unlike yourself and N8 and Lelnad and Frank.

> Hopefully Frank is wrong and you're not really >a closet ham.

Frank is always wrong,,,its' why you and he are two peas in a 3 way pod,,,as another op said,,,,..such misery sticks together.

You're out in left field again, Davie. Better unwrap that tinfoil hat you need wear when posting and clear your failed attempts at making yourself clear to the masses.

>I think "the masses" caught the humor (at your

And therein lies the beauty of conversing with you, Davie...what you "think" has never been in

Hi Guys,

Does anyone out there have a service manual or schematic for this radio? I have one that will not power up, and I am not sure that it is repairable. Don't want to spend $50 on a manual if it is garbage.

Thanks a million.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1398 May 28, 2004

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1398 with a release date of Friday, May 28, 2004 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.

Ham radio helps in the wake of an outbreak of tornadoes and a proposed California law could make operating a mobile station a driving distraction. Find out the details on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1398 coming your way right now.

RESCUE RADIO: TORNADOES ACROSS THE MID-WEST BRING OUT HAM RADIO COMMUNICATORS

Dozens of tornadoes and severe storms hammered the northern Plains and Midwest in the past week. As phone lines went out and cellular systems got overloaded it was ham radio that was again called on to provide storm spotting and other communications. Amateur Radio Newsline's Don Wilbanks, AE5DW, is here with more:

--

More than a dozen tornadoes swept across southern Nebraska the weekend of May 22nd. According to news reports the tornadoes were part of three days of severe weather that knocked out telephone service and power to hundreds of thousands of people from Nebraska to Michigan to West Virginia.

Hardest hit was Hallam, Nebraska. Hallam is located 25 miles north to Lincoln and is where a 73 year old woman was killed from flying debris. Every building in Hallam was damaged or destroyed and all normal communications was cut off. This prompted the activation of local A-R-E-S units under the leadership of Section Emergency Coordinator Reynolds Davis, K-Zero-G-N-D.

In Lincoln, Joe Eisenberg, K-Zero-N-E-B, was active with the local ham radio Stormwatch. He described this as a terrible weather front and said that ham radio played a key role in the emergency:

Eisenberg: "We went out on Stormewatch early in the evening and had spotters throughout the whole county and our spotters in the South part of the county began observing the extremely heavy rain, wind and hale, especially near the Hallem area. One of our spotters saw a semi that had been blown off the road."

Downed power lines and leaking propane tanks littered the Hallam, prompting the Nebraska National Guard to surround the community Sunday to keep people from entering. Newsline spoke to Sandy Ramsey of the Office of Emergency Management in Lincoln who had a lot of praise for the role that Amateur Radio is playing:

--

Ramsy: "The hams out there as storm spotters. They are just invaluable to us. They're our eyes and ears. We are in the E-O-C and they're our eyes in the field and we just couldn't do this without them. They are really an invaluable part of what we do."

--

But Nebraska was not the only place where hams were put on alert or activated. Iowa and central Michigan were also hard hit and the front also caused power and phone outages in southern Michigan, Wisconsin, northern Illinois and Iowa and northwest Ohio. On Monday night the 24th, Iowa was drenched by yet another wave of powerful thunderstorms, even as residents of the town of Independence waited for a flooded local stream to recede.

The wave of storms swept eastward early Tuesday. Illinois had high wind that damaged several structures near Jacksonville. State Police said a twister damaged a home south of Springfield.

And all across the region ham radio operators remained on alert. As we go to air their work is still ongoing and we will have more in future reports.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Don Wilbanks, AE5DW in New Orleans.

A total of 81 tornadoes were confirmed to have touched down in the region on Saturday as a weather front stalled over the area. As we go to air, ham radio is still involved in the aftermath of the storms. (ARNewsline, K0NEB)

THE BPL FIGHT: MR. HAYNIE GOES TO WASHINGTON REDUX

ARRL President Jim Haynie, W5JBP, says his meeting with White House telecommunications advisors on B-P-L issues was both revealing and encouraging. Amateur Radio Newsline's Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, has the latest:

Haynie says he and ARRL representatives met with Richard Russell, the White House associate director of technology in the Office of Science and Technology Policy in Washington D.C.

Haynie knew going in that the Bush administration's policy was clear: B-P-L is something that's good for America. But Haynie says Russell did offer assurances, especially in light of the interference findings about B-P-L contained in the National Telecommunications and Information Administration report.

"He did emphasize the fact that they would address the interference issues aggressively," Haynie says. "And I'm going to take him at his word at that. That they will do that.

"And I'm sure the FCC has taken note of the interference issues that NTIA has raised and as the representative for the amateur radio community, I intend to stay on top of it.

"We're not going to let this thing slide from that standpoint. They have the rules and they're printed and they're there. And we're going to make sure that they abide by those rules."

Haynie says it was clear from the start that Russell is beholden to the political agenda of the Bush administration.

"Mr. Russell heard what we had to say all right, but I think he was already predisposed to the fact that to anybody on the street - and I'm talking about the uninformed person that doesn't know about technology, broadband over powerline, where you can just plug your computer into the wall ,any wall outlet -does sound like a good thing," Haynie says. "And, I understand that.

"But on the other hand, there are issues that have to be dealt with and one of the examples I gave Mr. Russell was the fact that we could all lower our electric bills if we could burn high-sulfur coal.

"And he said, 'Well the EPA wouldn't let you do that.' I said, 'That's my point exactly. The FCC should be standing there, overseeing the rules about spectrum pollution.' I think I made my point."

Haynie says, upon reflection, one reality in the whole B-P-L debate is becoming crystal clear.

"I honestly do believe there's a disconnect between the engineers in the field, the engineers at the commission who actually understand the physics of the issue versus the politicians who are driving it," Haynie says. " I'm convinced now that's what it is. This is no longer a science issue, an issue of facts, it's an issue of politics and that disappoints me."

However, Haynie says in recent weeks certain admissions by utilities trying to work with the amateur community are significant.

"In the beginning, everybody said from the industry side that there was no interference," Haynie says. "Now they're actually saying, 'Yes, there is and we'll try to mitigate it, we'll try to work with you.' That in itself is a big step."

Haynie says there also are admissions that one major interference solution touted by B-P-L proponents - notching - just doesn't do the job across the board.

"Finally some of the people are admitting, 'OK we don't have a point-source radiator anymore, we have a continuous-source radiator such as a power line.' And they're saying that the notching techniques will work and we've actually found out that they don't work that well," Haynie says.

"The notches are not that exact. And, when it says that they notch something about 3db or 6db, that's still not enough. It has to be notched by at least 30 in order to get back down to where the amateurs can function. And that's going to be a big challenge for the industry."

Haynie says anybody studying the issue of broadband technology sees the B-P-L investment is not a good one because of the growing emphasis on creating a wireless network.

"Quite frankly, in my personal opinion, the broadband over powerlines is going to be a real flash-in-the-pan because other technologies are going to overtake it very quickly," Haynie says.

"Whenever people say they want to plug their computer into any outlet in the wall, then my question is: 'Then, why do you have a cordless phone?' And WiFi and WiMax enter that challenge by being able to go anywhere in your house and let your laptop down whether it be on your couch or in your easychair and operate broadband.

"And I think that technology is going to be the real answer to people that need that type of high-speed internet access."

Haynie says the B-P-L battle is far from over. He says the strategy now is to press regulators - especially the FCC - to enforce the interference rules.

"Hold everybody's feet to the fire on the rules," Haynie says. "And the encouraging sign I've seen in the last week or so is the fact that more and more utilities have said that they didn't think it was a viable option for them and have opted out.

"Interestingly enough, the city of Manassas now is advertising for another provider. I found that extremely curious and very interesting."

Finally, Haynie concedes the ARRL has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on the B-P-L issue and it's looking to the amateur community to get behind the league and its work.

"People are working overtime," Haynie says. "We are burning the candle at both ends and all I would ask is the amateurs support the organization and what we're trying to do in this effort."

RADIO LAWS: CALIFORNIA TO FINE DISTRACTED DRIVERS

California drivers who are distracted for any reason and whose actions attract law enforcement may soon face fines by eating, combing their hair or talking on a cellular telephone. This if a bill passed on May 18th by the state senate and bend to the Assembly is eventually made law. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more in this report:

It was called S B 1800 when Senator Kevin Murray introduced it to the California State Senate back in February. It went unnoticed by the Amateur Radio community until about a week ago when the Senate passed it and delivered to the State Assembly for further action.
That's
when news outlets state wide ran banner headlines saying that the state legislature might make it a crime to be distracted in any way -- while operating a motor vehicle in the Golden state. And that is exactly what the measure would do.

As written, the Murray bill would make it an crime for a person to operate a vehicle in an unsafe manner that results from engaging in a distracting activity while driving. What is a distracting activity?

Well according to the Senator it is just about anything. Eating or drinking, smoking, reading or writing, interacting with children, animals, passengers, or objects in the vehicle, adjusting the controls of an audio or other entertainment device, or even talking on a hands free cellular telephone. And it is the last two items that could easily impact on ham radio operators or any other two way radio user that a police officer might regard as distracted just because he or she has a microphone in hand or is changing frequencies on a radio.

The bill does say that a law enforcement officer may not stop a vehicle when a driver is engaging in a distracting activity unless the officer observes that the vehicle is being operated in an unsafe manner. But it is left to the officer to decide what unsafe really is under other areas of California state law.

The proposed law does not single out or target Amateur Radio operators for enforcement, but it does not exempt hams either. In fact, the only exemptions are police, fire and emergency services but even this is limited. The measure states that an emergency service professional would be exempt from these restrictions when using a wireless telephone or other electronic device, but only as part of the course and scope of his or her duties.

What about penalties? The bill would require a first offense to be punished by a fine of $35, and a second or subsequent offense that occurs within 2 years of a prior conviction for the infraction to be punished by a fine of $150.

Also, being permitted to continue driving in California and get insurance means that you have to keep your violation points count low. Any person whose driving record shows a violation count of 4 or more points in 12 months, 6 or more points in 24 months, or 8 or more points in 36 months be presumed to be a negligent operator of a motor vehicle. This bill would prohibit a first-time violation from being given a point value, but would mandate that a 2nd or subsequent violation within 2 years to be given a value of one point. And even 2 points can cost a lot of dollars when you go to renew an auto insurance policy.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, in Los Angeles.

Supporters of the proposed law cite studies blaming distractions for 25 to 30 percent of all vehicle crashes. Opponents say that the bill goes too far in meddling with the civil rights of individuals. This group vows a court fight if the measure gets signed into law. RESTRUCTURING: FCC CHAIRMAN SAYS RESTRUCTURING CONTINUING

FCC Chairman Michael Powell has told U-S representatives Greg Walden, W7EQI, and Mike Ross, WD5DVR, that the Commission will act 'as expeditiously as possible' on Amateur Radio restructuring. This, in response to a letter from Walden and Ross a month ago that urged the FCC to adopt the ARRL's restructuring Petition for Rule Making in its entirety along with rules changes needed to put it into place.

But in his response, Powell said the League's petition was one of many. There are 18 in all. An ARRL bulletin says that judging from the FCC Chairman's letter to Walden and Ross, it would appear as if the regulatory agency plans to address all 18 petitions within the framework of a single rule making proceeding. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: 75 METER IN INTERFERENCE BRINGS FAA REFERRAL

A California ham is under FCC scrutiny for alleged interference to ongoing Amateur Radio communications. The FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, is here with more:

Duckworth: "AE6QD, Steve L. Wingate, of Corte Madera, California, has been sent a warning letter regarding malicious interference on 75 meters. This consists of jamming, making threats to other operators and to law enforcement officers, and broadcasts in which he appears incoherent."

--

The FCC warned Wingate that continued incidents of such interference will subject him to license suspension and revocation proceedings, as well as a possible fine of $7,500 to $10,000. And in an unusual twist, the FCC says that since Wingate also holds a pilot's license, this matter is also being referred to the Federal Aviation Administration as well. (FCC, RAIN)

ENFORCEMENT: FINES AFFIRMED AGAINST TWO ALLEGED PIRATES

Fines of $10,000 each have been affirmed by the FCC against Jason Green and Gary Feldman. The regulatory agency alleges that the two are pirate broadcasters in Florida who reportedly operated on 91.9 Mhz. The FCC says that neither filed a responses to the Commission's initial findings in the case. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: A "RADIO SUMMER CAMP" TO TRAIN MORE PIRATES

Now here's one that we know will interest the FCC enforcement folks.
Writers to the CGC Communicator report that budding radio pirates can learn how to buy or build FM transmitters and get on the air this summer. This at four-day "workshop" sessions, at least one of which will be bilingual.

Not only that. CGC readers also report that the event promoters will have transmitter and antenna kits available to attendees. For more on these strange educational check out www.freeradio.org. (CGC)

RADIO LAW: AIR FORCE JAMS GARAGE DOOR OPENERS

A new military radio system is jamming remote-control garage doors in communities near this Florida Panhandle base. During testing of the $5.5 million two-way radio system at Eglin Air Force Base, homeowners in Niceville, Valparaiso and the Crestview area reported that their garage door openers failed to work or went wild by themselves.

According to Air Force officials the contractor, Motorola Inc., will try to minimize the problem. Technicians will run the system on slightly different frequencies from those used by garage door openers when another test is conducted.

But an FCC spokesperson had some bas news for local homeowners. Lauren Van Wazer, said that if the Air Force has been running the system within its licensed frequencies then the users of garage door openers may have to change the operating frequencies of theirs.

By the way, the Navy says that a similar radio system has been requested for Pensacola Naval Air Station and other nearby installations. (Published reports)

NEW PRODUCTS: THE TNC WIZARD

Creative Services Software has announced the release of version 1.0 of the Kantronics and Timewave TNC Wizard. This program searches for your TNC and sound card on both serial ports and TCP/IP networks.

Creative's Rick Ruhl, W4PC, says that the TNC wizard works with built in serial ports in the TNC, USB to serial adapters and TCP/IP to serial interfaces. It also has an option to detect the soundcard in the computer and add that information to the PacTerm or PkTerm startup files without any additional setup needed at install time.

The TNC Wizard requires Windows 98 or later, with TCP/IP installed. There is no cost for the TNC wizard and it can be downloaded from the CSS website at http://www.cssincorp.com (CSS)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: INDUCTEES NAMED TO THE CQ HALLS OF FAME

CQ Amateur Radio magazine has inducted fifteen people into its Amateur Radio Hall of Fame and two into the CQ Contest Hall of Fame.

Those elected to the CQ Amateur Radio Hall of Fame include Ned Carman, Ned, W0ZSW, and Sister Alverna O'Laughlin, WA0SGJ, who co founded the Handi-Ham System to aid the handicapped. Also inducted was Ten-Tec co-founder Jack Burchfield, Jack, K4JU. His partner Al Kahn, K4FW was made a member in 2002.

Others named include Bob Heil, K9EID, whose inventions revolutionized audio in rock music live performances and amateur radio and writer Tom Kneitel, K2AES and Amateur Radio Newsline's own Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF. Bill as honored for his quarter of a century of producing these newscasts and for creating the "Amateur Radio Newsline Young Ham of the Year Award.

The new members of the CQ Contest Hall of Fame include Steve Bolia, N8BJQ. Steve is the longtime Director of the CQ World Wide W-P-X Contests and a pioneer in computer log-checking. Also inducted was Trey Garlough, N5KO. Garlough, who also holds the call sign HC8N is a world-class contester and the creator of two major contesting e-mail reflectors.

The CQ Amateur Radio Hall of Fame was established in January, 2001, to recognize those individuals, whether licensed radio amateurs or not, who significantly affected the course of amateur radio. The CQ Contest Hall of Fame was established in 1986 to recognize those amateurs who have made major contributions to contesting. CHANGING OF THE GUARD: ARNOLD O. BECKMAN S.K.

Arnold Beckman, whose invention of a simple method to measure the acidity of California lemons spawned a scientific instrument empire has died at the age of 104. Beckman passed away on May 18th at Scripps Green Hospital in La Jolla, California, after a long illness.

Arnold O. Beckman was born in Cullom, Illinois, on April 10, 1900. In 1934 he invented the pH meter that is sill used use in citrus processing plants worldwide. The following year he founded National Technical Laboratories, and later renamed he company Beckman Instruments. Over the years, Beckman and his electronic test gear became synonymous with high quality and extreme accuracy. In 1997 the company was acquired Coulter Corporation of Miami, Florida which renamed it renamed Beckman Coulter later that same year.

Arnold Beckman, is survived by his son, Arnold Stone Beckman, daughter Patricia Beckman, two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. His wife Mabel Meinzer Beckman died in 1989.

WORLDBEAT - IRAN: IARU TRAINING PRESENTED

Turning to international news, word that the I-A-R-U recently presented an Amateur Radio Administration Course in Iran. Amateur Radio Newsline's Jim Meachen Zed-L-2-B-H-F in Auckland New Zealand brings the details:

PKG HERE: In response to an invitation from the administration of the Islamic Republic of Iran, Fred Johnson ZL2AMJ representing the IARU Region 3 and Daniel Lamoureux VE2KA representing the IARU International Secretariat visited Iran to present a three-day Amateur Radio Administration Course, 26 to 28 April 2004. Fred Johnson ZL2AMJ takes up his story:

ZL2AMJ:

Since the early 1980s this course has been conducted by IARU in various forms in countries all over the world and in response to invitations from administrations to train regulators and prospective regulators in the administering of the amateur service and amateur satellite service. Related objectives include managing disaster relief communications and organizing an amateur radio society.

Our recent course in Tehran was arranged by Mr T. Shafiee and Mr M. Zomorodi of the Directorate General of Telecommunications. An excellent training room was provided for us with full support facilities including a data projector and access to a photocopier. Daniel and myself presented our course using PowerPoint displays prepared by IARU and each of the 16 participants received printed copies of the displays and many other documents and two CD-ROMs with documentation about amateur radio.

We had discussions with many radio amateurs in Tehran, some of whom attended the course. The course participants visited EP3PTT, a station established in the Ministry's office premises in Tehran. The equipment in this station was provided for Iran amateurs by from the IARU Region 3 Stars program and may be operated by licensed Iranian operators by arrangement.

There have been amateur radio societies in Iran in earlier years but there has not been an IARU member society. An amateur radio "club", a social meeting group, presently meets in Tehran.

ZL2BHF: ZL2AMJ reported the course as a most memorable experience. He said that Daniel and himself were warmly received.

From Auckland New Zealand I'm Jim Meachen ZL2BHF for Newsline.

Contact between the IARU and the amateurs and the administration of Iran is to continue with further Amateur Radio information to be provided. (ARNewsline(tm))

Jim I stand by my statement. there is no excuse to advise this guy to do something illegal and harassing I dont care if you disguise your advise with a wink wink oh dont do this lol And please dont tell us that story of how you keyed the 10KW military transmitter again it does get the keyclowns all sexualy excited.

Your character flaws are easily attributable to your parent's failure

Perhaps that comes from the old days on obfuscating them into rants about communication deficits.

Because that's what it is usually considered to be.

Perhaps you didn't understand what I was talking about when I mentioned the area I am in.

Around here, you can try, but it is unlikely anyone give a d*mn. I had a woman blocking my driveway waiting for a woman in a house across the street. She wouldn't move. When I told her I would call the police (I had to go to work) she said the cops most likely wouldn't come and it would take them at least an hour if they came at all. She sat right there (why not 10 feet one way or the other? Or, better yet, across the street in front of the house she was picking up the other fool?). She picked up her passenger about 10 minutes later and, fortunately, I was still 10 minutes early for work. I've had stereos blasting and people wouldn't turn them down. I added the Souse stuff for the entertainment center to counter that, plus bought a transmitter as backup. I didn't need them. The people moved (or, likely, went to jail. Drugs are very prevalent here). These are the type you have to deal with here.

That incident, plus this fact: over the past 20 years, there have been some homes broken into. There would be a rash of two or three and then some homeowner would blow the intruder away. Of course, having been inside of their own home, no arrests were made. Then things would quiet down for 5 or 6 years. Perhaps 15 years ago, a homeowner heard noise from his garage. He blew someone away who was stealing his bicycle. He was arrested, but, funny thing, the grand jury refused to indict him. LOL. Then things got quiet again.

Due to those facts, around here you might ask the neighbor. Likely nothing will change. Then, you do what you have to and just keep a 12 gauge handy (funny, but 12 gauges have been involved in a number of those incidents. They are very effective. Just make sure they are inside your house).

I feel certain you think I'm exaggerating; I'm not.

BTW, that RCA transmitter was not 10 kW. It was a 40 kW output transmitter. No one else is getting all excited; why are you?

Back in 1996 (I think), and less than a mile from my home, there lived a truck driver that owned a shotgun and had the same frame of mind as you. One evening the limits of his tolerance were exceeded and his response was to cross the line he had drawn for himself. He is in prison now, and his victim (a kid whose only crime was attending one of the loud parties next door to the trucker) is worm-food. The very next year a similar party-house set up shop next door to -my- home, a problem which was ignored by the owner of the property because one of the tenants was his own kid. Unlike the truck driver, we (my neighbors and myself) solved the problem in a civilized manner -- we sued the shit out of the owner for permitting a public nuisance to exist on his property. I think it was a much better solution than doing "what you have to and just keep a 12 gauge handy".

No, I didn't miss the point. By 'party house' I'm not referring to any 'frat house'. There were parties that started at 5 to 7pm and would last till 3 to 5am. They would happen three, four and sometimes five nights a week. The music (if you can call it that -- to me it sounded like angry men screaming profanities to the beat of a kick-drum) was loud enough to hear a block away, there were typically several dozen people packed into a barely 600 sq. ft. house, the streets clogged with traffic, fights breaking out at least once a week (sometimes with weapons, sometimes on someone else's property), people puking and pissing anywhere in the neighborhood, etc, etc, etc. When the dust settled in the morning the street and yards were littered with beer cans, broken bottles, hypo needles, used condoms, and a variety of other garbage discarded from vehicles. Neighbors were repeatedly harassed by the tenants and partiers, including being called names like nigger (even if you were white -- you just had to be someone they didn't like), and many tried to provoke neighbors into a fight. In fact, one neighbor's house was invaded one night by a small mob who followed him into his house looking for a fight just because the neighbor looked in the direction of the party while he was going from his car to his house. And NONE of that is an exaggeration -- it is all well-documented in the case file against the owner and in police reports (which were taken on the rare occasions when the police decided to respond). And just to let you know that it's not just the -kids- that were raised in a barn, the title of the property was intentionally clouded and there was obstruction with a police investigation into the ownership: A wannabe slum-lord (who uses many false identities) claimed to own the property, but was found in contempt of court after I dug up an unrecorded quit-claim deed transferring title from the previous owner to the guy's estranged wife, while at the same time his insurance agent comes forward with a warranty deed (the ink still wet) claiming -he- was the owner. We sued the insurance agent and won (who then promptly declared Chapter 7 bankruptcy), and a few months later the wannabe slum-lord got 6 months and $50K restitution for using a scanner to get bank account info over cordless phones and clean out the accounts. There was even a police lieutenant fired in the course of this mess, and one more that should be fired for being openly racist (uses the word 'nigger' in the more traditional context). This battle continued for an entire year until the bankruptcy forced the owner to abandon the property. In the end, we solved the problem and we solved it without violence, or even the anticipation of violence. The good guys won, the bad guys lost, and nobody pulled a shotgun. My only regret is that we didn't include the police and city council in our lawsuit for their failure to enforce the laws and take appropriate action when action was both warranted and requested.

So no, I didn't miss the point -- this ain't Pleasantville, I don't live next to Bob and June Cleaver, and those weren't frat-boys blowing off steam before finals. Now go back to your anonymous trolling like a good little nobody.

Hi gang!

After reacting to the noisy neighbor post and considering what I mentioned about the noisy radio, I've got to admit that Frank Gilliland was right. I sometimes get fed up with city living (I won't even get into what happened over last night and the night before only about 10 blocks from where I live).

Best bet is to try nicely to get someone to turn down the stereo. Around here, you can forget suing someone as most aren't collectable - but, a new law provides a $100.00 fine for loud stereos. I don't know what happens if it isn't paid, but for some problems, landlords can be held responsible if they don't evict the problem. That would also solve the problem.

Frank,
Please accept my apologies and I state again that your advise was good.

Best regards from Rochester, NY

No apology is necessary. Sometimes it's hard to remember that the system really does work because there are times when it works very slowly. But vigilantism just causes more problems. I have to admit, however, that it was my neighbors who talked me out of torching that damn house!
